BEDAYAN TRIAL

Issue Of Sanity Still Key Item

By BILL ROBERTS

Attorneys for Brent William Bedayan attempted Friday to refute a prosecution claim that the Mill Valley man tailored his answers to psychological test questions to prove he was mentally unbalanced when he shot and killed three persons.

Dr. Alla Soufi, a clinical psychologist from San Francisco, said nothing in the background of an undergraduate college student like Bedayan would give him the ability to manipulate test results.

Bedayan is charged with the triple murder of Melvin and Ruth Schallock and their 19-year-old son Daniel in March outside their Mill Valley home.

Earlier in the 12th day of the trial before Judge Henry J. Broderick, Dr. Soufi had testified that it would be possible for an individual with Bedayan's educational background to give answers to fit the insanity defense.

But under redirect examination by public defender Frank J. Cox the psychologist reversed his position.

The prosecution's contention is based on the fact that Bedayan enrolled in several psychology classes at the College of Marin, worked at the state hospital in Napa and reportedly purchased several additional psychology books.

In response to Cox's questions Dr. Soufi admitted that introductory survey courses in psychology offered at most colleges do not provide the necessary information for altering psychological tests.

The psychologist said he did not think Bedayan was faking

Agnew's Financial Files Are Subpoenaed

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI) — Federal prosecutors, investigating alleged kickbacks, have subpoenaed Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's campaign finance records from archives of the State of Maryland.

The records sought include those of Agnew's successful race for governor in 1966 and his two campaigns for vice president.

U.S. Attorney for Maryland George Beall obtained the subpoenas Friday against the Maryland Archives, the Hall of Records and the state Board of Elections, all in Annapolis.

Beall, who is conducting a federal grand jury investigation in Baltimore into alleged kickbacks paid to government officials by building contractors, architects and engineers, formally notified Agnew Aug. 1 that he was under investigation concerning possible acts of conspiracy, extortion and bribery.

Beall asked the vice president to voluntarily turn over his personal bank and income tax records by Aug. 9.

Agnew held a news conference Aug. 8 to declare his innocence. He has been granted an extension of time for the voluntary turnover of his personal records, while his lawyers study the constitutional issue of whether this would violate separation of powers.

Beall appeared to be acting on the assumption that his subpoena of records from the State of Maryland rather than from an incumbent vice president does not raise that constitutional issue.

The federal prosecutors specifically sought any records involving dealings between Agnew and Jerome B. Wolff, former Roads Commission chairman; Lester Matz, partner in the consulting engineering firm of Matz, Childs and Associates; John C. Childs of the same firm; I. H. "Bud" Hammerman II, a mortgage banker and real estate developer, and J. Walter Jones, who has raised funds for Agnew.

The Baltimore Sun reported today that prosecutors have obtained another subpoena for records of Maryland projects from 1967 through 1972 held by the Federal Highway Administration. It would be the first such requisition to a federal agency in the investigation.

Warning To Auto Polluters

Team Sets Date For Crackdown

By FRED STREBEIGH

One of the most annoying sights on Marin highways — the vehicle emitting great clouds of smoke — may soon become a thing of the past.

On Sept. 15 the Bay Area Pollution Control District will send its 12 new vehicle pollution inspectors to begin cruising the highways and byways of the nine Bay Area counties to issue citations for excessive vehicle exhaust smoke.

Marin County will probably be assigned one or two regular patrolmen, according to Christine Bell of San Francisco, a trainee receiving instruction in how to stop offenders' vehicles this week — from the California Highway Patrol in Corte Madera.

The training is something much different from what the 26-year-old Mrs. Bell, a former secretary for the air pollution district, is used to.

It includes hand-to-hand defense tactics taught by the San Francisco police and defensive driving training on the Highway Patrol obstacle course at its academy in Sacramento.

Mrs. Bell welcomes the change in assignment, saying it will give her a chance to confront pollution problems directly and "get out from behind a desk."

She said that inspectors will have "limited peace officer powers." They will give tickets but not carry arms. The two women in the program are the only ones without law enforcement experience.

However, she said the inspector's job is not to get tangled in general law enforcement problems; it is to identify the "smoker" and get him off the road.

To be able to get the goods on the illegal smoker, the inspectors went to a pollution control district school to learn to "read smoke." At smoke school the trainees learned to tell how badly a vehicle is smoking on the Ringelman scale of zero to five, with zero being clear and five, complete opacity — "a car smoking so badly you can't even see the back of the car."

Learning to read smoke is important so the inspectors can defend their citations against challenges in court. The age of a car determines how much it is permitted to smoke, she said. For example, under the code, 1971 and newer vehicles cannot exceed a reading of one on the scale, while older cars will not be cited unless they exceed two on the scale.

She said that in training with the highway patrol last week her car stopped a van "throwing out so much oil and smoke that even the patrol car's windshield was covered from pulling him over."

Mrs. Bell observed that automobile polluters are much like cigarette smokers: "There are very few borderline smokers — either they don't at all or they really do."

Mrs. Bell said that the inspectors will start on the major highways and begin working smaller roads as soon as they get to know their areas and have a chance to "make contact with local police."

She said enforcement on smaller roads is important because a lot of cars that smoke — are never driven on larger highways.

Until word gets around, the pollution inspectors' cars, painted bright orange, with a row of flashers on top, may be a surprise to both motorists and police.

She said the air pollution district is trying to spread the word to other law enforcement agencies "so a police officer driving down the street won't run off the road when he sees us."

Since inspectors are unarmed and only interested in pollution violations, she said publicity was doubly important. "I hope drivers know they're only being stopped for an infraction," Mrs. Bell said.

Some highway patrol officers had been apprehensive for inspectors' safety. Officer Myron R. MacNeil at the Corte Madera office was surprised to learn that they will not have even a club or mace for protection.

"If anyone gets belligerent, "she's going to be in a heap of trouble," he said.

Mrs. Bell isn't worried. "You're taking a chance (on stopping someone) who's just robbed a bank or something, a guy can get out of the car and shoot you, but that kind of thing can happen coming out your front door."

Officer Timothy A. Miller who taught Mrs. Bell freeway tactics said that the highway patrol puts a high priority on stopping smokers.

He said that the new inspectors will help keep the pressure on excessive smokers. And that is important, Miller believes, "especially when you look around this beautiful county and see it's smoggy as hell."

SMOKERS BEWARE — Officer Timothy A. Miller of the California Highway Patrol explains techniques for stopping vehicles to Christine Bell, one of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District's new air pollution inspectors. Mrs. Bell and 11 others will cruise local highways looking for vehicles emitting too much smoke.

A $1,000 Reward For Ranger Clues

Publisher Wishard A. Brown of the Independent-Journal today offered a $1,000 "Secret Witness" reward for information leading to apprehension and conviction of the killer of Kenneth C. Patrick, Point Reyes Nat. Seashore ranger.

The ranger, shot to death near the Mount Vision Overlook Road last Sunday morning, was the first National Park Service ranger slain in line of duty since 1916.

The Marin County Sheriff's Department and Federal Bureau of Investigation have proceeded on the theory that Patrick had been shot by a poacher whom he surprised in the foggy early morning. To date, the case is unsolved.

Anyone with information that may lead to the killer may supply it anonymously by writing to Secret Witness, P.O. Box 330, San Rafael. The writer should place a five-digit number in bottom left and right corners of the letter, then tear off one corner and keep it. If the information leads to an arrest and conviction, he may claim the reward by presenting the torn-off number. Arrangements for collecting the reward may be made by telephone, and the "Secret Witness's" identity need not be known.

Information contained in the letter, but not the number or any identifying material, will be turned over to the FBI, which has assumed jurisdiction because the slaying occurred on federal property.

Arab Guerrillas Exit Jet Before Israeli 'Capture'

'We Fooled Them' Says Leader Plane Intercepted For Check Out

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Four Arab guerrilla leaders avoided capture by Israel because they smelled "something fishy" and decided not to board a Baghdad-bound plane intercepted by fighters over Lebanon and forced to land at an Israeli airbase, a guerrilla spokesman said today.

"We fooled them this time," a representative of the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) said.

The guerrillas who reportedly changed their plans at the last moment included Dr. George Habash, leader of the PFLP, and his third in command, Salah Salah.

A United Nations Security Council meeting on the incident was scheduled for Monday at the request of Lebanon as threats and expressions of outrage poured in from Arab lands.

Two Israeli jets intercepted a Middle East Airlines (MEA) Caravelle jet with 81 persons aboard Friday night moments after it took off from Beirut International airport and forced it to land at an airbase in Israel.

The Lebanese defense ministry said anti-aircraft fire was directed at the Israeli planes and that fighters scrambled but were unable to catch the Israeli craft and their captive airliner.

The passengers' identities were checked at the air base before the plane, which had been en route to Baghdad on charter to the Iraqi national airline, was allowed to return to Beirut with no one aboard detained.

An Iraqi Airways plane on which the guerrilla leaders reportedly were scheduled to travel to Baghdad was delayed nearly four hours in Vienna. To accommodate the passengers waiting at Beirut to board the plane, Iraqi Airways chartered the Caravelle.

But Habash and the three other guerrillas decided not to take the charter flight because "the delay made them smell something fishy," a PFLP spokesman said.

The Lebanese pilot of the Caravelle later told officials he obeyed the fighters' instructions "because I did not want a repeat of the Libyan airline disaster." This was a reference to the shooting down on Feb. 21 by Israel of a Libyan airliner over the Sinai desert, resulting in the deaths of 108 of the 113 persons aboard.

Upon their return to Lebanon, the passengers said about 40 Israeli soldiers armed with automatic weapons had boarded the plane.

One passenger, Mahmoud Jawad Al-Shakerji, said, "A number of women collapsed and wept. So did some children. It was all very frightening."

Among the passengers was Irqai Minister of Planning Dr. Jawad Hashem.

Israel has admitted forcing the plane to land at its air base but has been silent about the motive.

Mahmoud Riad, secretary general of the Arab League, sent protest cables to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO).

In London, a spokesman for the British Air Line Pilots Association said, "We deplore this aerial piracy which is completely at variance with the pledges Israel has made internationally through the pilot group to prevent all infringements of air space and other acts of piracy."

Lebanese Premier Takieddin Solh described the Israeli action as "aggression in the full sense of the word, which is the nature of Israel's existence, and an act of piracy."

Iraq said it "reserves all rights to take deterrent measures to prevent the recurrence of such aggression and acts of piracy."

In Cairo, an Egyptian military spokesman said, "This is a criminal action in violation of international law and custom. All the other countries in the Middle East are capable of using the same method against civil Israeli airliners."

Panel Absolves Hub Police In Drug Raid

By REBECCA LARSEN

A San Anselmo city council committee has concluded that the city's police department "conducted itself properly and with due regard for the law" in a controversial drug arrest June 22.

Mayor Lewis W. Stewart issued the statement absolving the police of wrongdoing following a closed meeting Friday with Councilman Martin G. Blinder, Police Chief Raymond Buchignani, City Atty. Hadden W. Roth, City Administrator Alfred C. Kaeppel and two officers involved in the arrest, Capt. G. Albert Howenstein and Inspector Bernard L. Del Santo.

(An Independent-Journal reporter was barred from attending the meeting after Roth ordered it closed because "the rights of officers are involved."

On Roth's advice, Mayor Stewart retracted an invitation issued to the reporter earlier in the day.

Conflict over the arrest arose after a Marin judge on July 16 ruled invalid the search warrant which led to the arrest of two San Anselmo men and the seizure of about 12,000 LSD tablets.

The case began when San Jose police arranged to buy LSD from two San Jose men, then arrested them at a San Anselmo restaurant after a sample of the drug was handed over.

One of the arrested men then led San Jose and San Anselmo officers to a home at 176 Oak Springs Drive. Officers waited in the house for four hours before they were able to obtain a search warrant, then seized the LSD and arrested Harry Francis Fergerstrom Jr., 24, and Dennis Valentino, 27.

Municipal Court Judge David R. Baty subsequently freed the men and ruled there was "no

Search coordinators, conceding the case may be a "well planned hoax," said the search for the mystery boy will end Sunday — "win, lose or draw."

The boy, identified only by a first name of Larry, began transmitting his distress calls late Tuesday.

More Arrests

Off To China

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and his wife Cathy have left for China where the jurist plans to investigate conservation practices and the country's judicial system.

China has long been an interest of Douglas, who was strongly rebuked by President Truman when he suggested that the United States should perhaps recognize the Communist government following the 1948 revolution.

Support Rights

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — The governors of Kentucky, Ohio and Oklahoma endorsed the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution Friday at the Young Democrats' National Convention here.

Kentucky Gov. Wendell Ford was the only one of the three governors whose state has ratified the amendment. Kentucky ratification, with the support of Ford, came last summer in a special session of the legislature.

The other chief executives on the panel were Govs. John J. Gilligan of Ohio and David Hall of Oklahoma.

A New Home

PARIS (UPI) — Soviet author Andrei Sinyavsky, a man branded a "renegade" and a "werewolf" by the Soviet Communist party newspaper Isvestia, today transplanted his life to the West.

Two years after his release from a Soviet labor camp east of Moscow, Sinyavsky arrived from his homeland Friday at Paris' Gare du Nord North Railroad Station with his wife and 7-year-old son, ready to take up his new post as professor of literature at the Sorbonne University.

Sources Of Nixon Funds Due Airing

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — President Nixon's reelection organization has agreed to furnish California officials with secret details of campaign funds raised before a new federal disclosure law took effect April 7. 1972.

"All financial activities of the Nixon campaign will now be brought into the open and the public will finally receive a full accounting of how money was raised and spent," California Secretary of State Edmund G Brown Jr. said Friday.

Brown announced that detailed reports covering contributions and expenditures between Jan. 1, 1971, and April 6. 1972—both inside and outside California—will be filed with his office by Sept 28. Funds raised and spent after April 6. 1972, already have been reported.

"I am informed that the new reports will cover millions of dollars in contributions," said Brown, a Democrat.

"Testimony before the Senate Watergate Committee has revealed that Nixon fundraisers made a special effort to obtain contributions prior to April 7 under the mistaken belief that money raised during that period need not be made public," he said.

"Although federal law may not require disclosure, California law clearly does require full disclosure of campaign donations—no matter when they were received."

Brown said the Nixon campaign organization also has agreed to help "reconstruct" records covering more than a million dollars raised prior to 1971. Additional details of pre1971 campaign financing are expected to be submitted after Sept. 28, an aide said.

If not next month, at least afterward, the aide continued, the secretary of state's office should obtain details on several hundred thousand dollars which Nixon's personal attorney, Herbert Kalmbach, kept in two Newport Beach checking accounts and a Los Angeles safety deposit box.

Some of the money paid out by Kalmbach was believed to have been funneled into a campaign to defeat Alabama Gov. George Wallace in his winning 1970 gubernatorial bid.

Brown, a contender for the 1974 Democratic gubernatorial nomination, said: "Funds raised in California were sometimes spent outside the state. And funds raised elsewhere were sometimes used to pay California campaign expenses.

"It is therefore impossible to isolate 'California' money and the Nixon committees have agreed to file reports covering the entire national campaign."

A Brown aide said the secretary of state negotiated primarily with attorney Nicholas McConnell, whose Washington law firm represents the Finance Committee to Re-Elect the President. This committee, headed by former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans, was the chief money handler for the Nixon campaign organization.

Brown said this and five smaller committees also will file similar, but less detailed, reports in Washington Sept. 28 with Common Cause, which had sued to obtain pre-April 7 records.

The secretary of state last September asked California Attorney General Evelle J Younger. a Republican, for an opinion clarifying the state's campaign reporting law Younger agreed with Brown July 3 that the Nixon organization must disclose its pre-April 7 financing.

Brown interpreted California law as requiring presidential campaign committees acting within the state to report all contributions and expenditures. A violation is a misdemeanor.

Under the new 1972 federal law, expenditures and contributions exceeding $100 must be reported.

Uncle Sam Sues Top Tire Firms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The country's two top tire companies have been charged with monopoly practices by the Justice Department. One of them, Goodyear Tire Rubber Co., said the complaint is "without any merit whatsoever."

In civil suits filed in Cleveland Thursday against Goodyear and the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., the government asked a U.S. District Court to force the firms to give up the smaller companies they acquired in the past decade and to stop further restraint of trade in the sale of tires bought by consumers to replace worn factory issues.

The complaint charged the companies with violating the Sherman and Clayton antitrust acts by substantially cutting prices between 1959 and 1966 in order to force smaller companies out of business, and then buying them out to cut down competition.

$1.40 TAB FOR A DOZEN EGGS SEEN

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — The president of the Texas Egg Council says eggs will cost between $1.30 and $1.40 a dozen by the end of the year. He blamed the price increases on grain exports.

K.E. Jacob said Friday the price of eggs will probably reach $1 a dozen for all grades within the next couple of weeks and from that time the cost for 12 eggs will probably never dip below the dollar mark.

In many places, the dozen-egg price is already above the dollar mark.

The Dollar Is Making A Comeback

LONDON (UPI) — The dollar, long-ailing in the doldrums of European money markets. scored its most spectacular improvement in several weeks Friday.

The U.S. currency ended the week worth substantially more foreign money than when the week began.

"We are surprised at the dollar's performance, especially on a Friday," said a U.S. banker in Frankfurt where the dollar for the first time since July 11 reached the 2.40 mark plateau to close at 2.4065 marks.

"We think the little boom might continue awhile because of the technical market weakness of the mark in Germany," the banker said.

"Also a major American bank has raised its prime interest rate to 9-¼ per cent, and the technical effect of that should also strengthen the dollar."

The First National City Bank of New York announced Friday it was raising its prime interest rates, the interest that major businesses pay for loans, from 9 to 9-¼ per cent. Several other banks followed. It was the 13th such hike this year and brought the prime rate to a record.

Elsewhere in Europe the dollar showed signs of rejuvenation. It substantially increased in Zurich to close at 2.950 Swiss francs and moved up in Vienna to 17.60 schillings.

On the Paris two-tiered market the dollar was up, closing at 4.26 francs for the floating dollar used by tourists —a rise of six centimes during the day—and up on the official commercial dollar to close at 4.2175.

Nixon Signs Farm Bill, Hails Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon signed a new farm bill Friday and hailed it as a weapon against inflation. But Nixon said the compromise "falls short" of his larger goal to get the government out of the agriculture business.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz called the bill "an historic turning point," saying that for the first time in 40 years the government is encouraging farmers to expand production rather than restrict crop output.

The four-year farm program, taking effect next year, is the result of what Nixon called "a realistic compromise" with Congress after months of wrangling.

It provides government-supported "target prices" below current record levels, but above supports of past years.

The bill replaces an expiring law, which provided fixed minimum support payments to farmers no matter how high the market prices went.

Nixon said, "It means that our farmers can expand production during the current period of worldwide food and fiber shortages without fear of a serious drop in farm income.

"Indeed, this law should help in our battle against inflation by encouraging farmers to produce at full capacity."

Nixon, who objected to some parts of the bill, said he signed it although "it falls short of the high standard I have set for reforming farm legislation and eventually moving the government out of agriculture."

The law creates target price levels in 1974 and 1975 for wheat at $2.05 a bushel, corn at $1.30 a bushel and cotton at 38 cents a pound. It also reduces from $55,000 to $20,000 the maximum that any farmer can receive in grain-cotton subsidies.

Other provisions increase minimum dairy supports to 80 per cent of "fair price" parity, liberalize food stamp benefits for needy families, ban food for peace aid to North Vietnam, and repeal a 75-cent-a-bushel "bread tax" for flour millers.

Deposed Ruler To Visit Shah, Wife

ROME (UPI) — Constantine, the deposed king of Greece, and his wife, Queen Anne Marie, will leave today on a visit to Iran, a royal spokesman said.

The exiled monarch will spend "10 days to two weeks" as the private guest of the Shah and Empress of Iran, the spokesman said Friday.

Phnom Penh Defense Perimeter Expanded

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodian troops backed by American warplanes today cleared rebel forces from all roads and highways outside Phnom Penh and expanded their defense perimeter all around the capital by several miles.

Correspondents traveled down the various roads and highways that fan out on all sides of Phnom Penh like spokes in a wheel, and government forces were in control in some areas such as Highway 1 to the southeast as far as 32 miles from the capital.

On Highway 2, where insurgents have pulled back several miles from the capital, all that remained were smashed houses, destroyed bridges and the rubble of war.

Trenches dug by the rebels were surrounded by fragments of bombs dropped by American planes.

On Highway 1, now open all the way to the Mekong river port city of Neak Luong, correspondents found the road pockmarked with bomb craters and 80 per cent of the homes destroyed. Cambodian officers on Highway 1 said to the best of their knowledge all of the homes were already evacuated when they were bombed.

In addition to clearing Highways 1 and 2, government forces also swept Highway 3 and Route 38 which links Highways 2 and 3.

The government clearing operations were assisted by continued intense American bombing to the south, west and north of the capital. American B52s, F4 Phantoms and and F111s flew air strikes on suspected rebel positions, but they were some miles further from the capital than in recent weeks when rebels pushed to within three miles of the city limits.

American warplanes also provided blanket coverage for a convoy of supply ships that was sailing up the Mekong river from South Vietnam to Phnom Penh. American pilots reported fire on the convoy, but there were no immediate reports of damage.

To the north of Phnom Penh, rebel troops shot down a government military plane and all five crewmen aboard were killed.

Military sources said the single-engine light aircraft, carrying a captain, two lieutenants, a gunner and an amament specialist, was shot down as it tried to fly into encircled Prey Kry, about 39 miles north of Phnom Penh. Sources said there were no survivors.

Prey Kry has been surrounded by insurgent troops for months and the sources described the military situation there as critical. They said the plane was apparently being flown into Prey Kry to assist the encircled troops there.

Elsewhere in Cambodia, little ground fighting was reported.

It provides the luxuries people of wealth consider necessities. Infinitely adjustable seats that let them sit on leather, instead of enveloping them in vinyl. Air-conditioning. Power steering. And a fuel-injected 3 liter engine (the rich do, after all, travel in fast circles.)

Then there are the luxuries we consider necessities. Like power-assisted disc brakes on all four wheels. A body welded in one piece-any one of its thousands of spot welds strong enough to support the weight of the entire body.
Plus six coats of rustproofing, primer and paint. And two different undercoatings. Just because a man is rich doesn't mean he shouldn't be prepared for the road ahead.

Death Plan Vote Urged In Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The author of death penalty legislation Friday urged Assembly Criminal Justice Committee members to "save the lives of innocent private citizens" and send the measure to the full Assembly for a vote.

The committee, scheduled to vote on the measure Aug. 14, is considered the key to whether a capital punishment bill will emerge from the legislature this session.

Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, told the seven committee members in a letter, "I hope you will vote to save the lives of innocent private citizens and peace officers by sending SB450 to the Assembly floor, with or without a recommendation."

The measure has passed the Senate and is given a good chance on the Assembly floor if it clears the committee.

In his letter, Deukmejian also remarked on the sentencing of convicted murderer Carl A. Eckstrom in July in Santa Ana.

Eckstrom was found guilty of killing two Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies, who had gone to his home to arrest him for two other slayings.

In sentencing Eckstrom to two life terms, Judge William C. Speirs was quoted as saying the suspect "knew there was no death penalty. Had the death penalty been in effect, they (the victims) might well be alive today."

Deukmejian also said in the letter, "In view of the overwhelming vote in favor of the Initiative, Prop. 17 reinstating capital punishment, the people of this state are entitled to have the entire legislature decide the outcome of the death penalty issue."

The bill would require death for hired assassins, torture killers, mass murders, two-time murderers, police killers, and persons who kill witnesses to a crime.

Hearing Set In Hash Case

Preliminary hearing for a Petaluma man who allegedly tried to hide a chunk of hashish in a police car will be Thursday in Marin Municipal Court.

Ronald Gregory Andrews, 19, of 1294 Ramona Lane pleaded innocent to a felony charge of possessing marijuana.

The Marin district attorney's office said Andrews was arrested June 12 in Novato when officers stopped him for a traffic violation and found he had an outstanding traffic warrant from Nevada County.

After police drove him to Marin County Jail for booking, a package containing 20 grams of suspected hashish was found in the back seat of the patrol car, officers said.

Building Permits Decline In July

The Petaluma Building Inspection Division issued building permits for $416,717 worth of construction during July, a decrease of $410,541 from the June total and considerably less than the $885,648 in July 1972.

July permits included five new commercial buildings, four signs and 10 accessory buildings.

Diplomats Will Visit Petaluma

Eight foreign diplomats and their families will begin a 4,000 mile cross country tour of small town America Monday from Petaluma.

Diplomats from France, Ethiopia, Spain, Great Britain, Yuguslavia, and Czechoslovakia, their wives and children, will travel 4,000 miles through Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, South Dakota, Illinois and Ohio.

The 19 adults and four children will go by trailer and car, led by Claud Moyes, a former Petaluma resident who will act as guide for the caravan. The officials range from first secretaries to press secretaries assigned to embassies in Washington D.C.

Burdette A. Shannon, Petaluma Chamber of Commerce manager, said Petaluma was selected as the starting point because of its Northern California location and small town atmosphere.

The group was scheduled to arrive in Petaluma today in a bus provided by the Petaluma city council and chamber.

They will spend the weekend at the Sonoma-Marin Fairgrounds learning to drive their vehicles, then head north Monday for a first stop in Eureka.

Representatives of the Airstream Corp., the tour's sponsor will accompany the diplomats.

ALMANAC

BY U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Saturday, August 11, the 223rd day of 1973, with 142 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

American lawyer, orator and uthor Robert Ingersoll was born August 11, 1833.

Also on this day in history:

In 1909, the first radio SOS was received when the liner "Arapahoe" messaged for help off Cape Hatteras, N.C.

In 1954, a formal peace announcement ended the seven-year Indo-China War between France and victorious forces of the Communist Viet Minh.

In 1965, blacks began rioting in the Watts section of Los Angeles. During the ensuing six days of violence, 34 persons were killed and 856 injured.

In 1971, New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay switched from the Republican to the Democratic party.

A thought for the day: French writer Victor Hugo said: "A compliment is something like a kiss through a veil."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.

Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.

Carbon monoxide, clean air.

Smoke particles, clean air.

Other areas:

San Francisco, clean air.

San Jose, light pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Three-Year Term Given To Inmate

A San Quentin inmate, found guilty of possessing a billy club in the prison's lower yard March 11, was sentenced Friday to at least three years in prison.

The new sentence for Dennis Earl Hungate, 22, of Los Angeles, will run concurrently with a three-year-to-life term he is already serving, Judge Charles Read Best of Marin Superior Court decided.

Hungate began serving a term for second degree attempted burglary in August 1969 and later was convicted of assault with a deadly weapon by an inmate and possessing a weapon in prison. Both offenses carry terms ranging from three years to life.

A jury convicted Hungate of the latest charge July 19 following a day of deliberation.

Hungate was charged with having the club — an iron bar 15 inches long taken from a weight-lifting machine — after a prison guard found him with it in the exercise yard.

He also was dressed in prison "armor" — magazines strapped around his body and a book protecting his groin.

Money Willed To The Government

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — John Rosetta immigrated to the United States from Italy in 1917, served with the Army in France during World War I and was naturalized a citizen in 1920.

He worked as a waiter in San Francisco's North Beach district until his retirement. He died in 1971 at the age of 83 without ever marrying.

His will, disclosed Thursday, left an estate of nearly $75,000 in cash and U.S. Savings Bonds to the U.S. government.

"I do this in gratitude for the care and help I have received from the government," said the will, written in 1969, which specifically omitted his two brothers.

Span Jumper Is Reported

A man about 30 years old with shoulder length black hair apparently jumped to his death from the Golden Gate Bridge Friday, according to the California Highway Patrol. No body has been recovered.

A witness saw a man in a green jacket and blue pants climb over the railing about 30 yards north of the south tower and jump about 3:30 p.m.

A black leather purse and note were found nearby, the highway patrol said.

Crash Victim Has Surgery

A Rohnert Park man underwent surgery at Community Hospital in Santa Rosa today for injuries suffered in an auto accident in Petaluma this morning.

Dale Hummel, 40, of 367 Bonnie Drive, received cuts and a fractured leg in a crash on Petaluma Boulevard South at about 4 a.m.

Hummel was reported in fair condition at the hospital.

The California Highway Patrol had no details of the accident.

Extension Asked For Bicycle Path

A bicycle path which ends at Tiburon Boulevard and Cove Road in Tiburon should be extended to Beach Road, the parks and recreation commission agreed Thursday night.

The $4,400 extension is necessary to avoid hazards to cyclists at the busy intersection, said Robert L. Kleinert, assistant city manager. The city of Belvedere has agreed to share the cost of the project.

answers to a battery of tests which he administered to the defendant in April at Marin County Jail.

Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales questioned Dr. Soufi on what the prosecutor thought were inconsistencies in test answers concerning Bedayan's homosexual impulses.

Dr. Soufi said that very powerful and largely suppressed homosexual impulses may have contributed to Bedayan's emotional disturbance. But he said test answers by the youth that he is not a homosexual only indicate that he does not understand his subconscious impulses.

Judge Broderick also asked Dr. Soufi if the fact Bedayan shot and killed three people does not make Bedayan mentally ill, regardless of other factors.

The doctor said it is his belief that Bedayan didn't even know whom he was killing, but added he would not judge everyone who kills to be insane.

The defense also called Dr. Charles Fleckles, head of the crisis unit at the Marin Mental Health Center, who interviewed Bedayan in December before the man was admitted to the facility.

Dr. Fleckles said he did not take notes while interviewing Bedayan and talked with him for only one half hour before convincing him to enter the center.

But he said he formed an impression that Bedayan was an acute paranoid schizophrenic. The psychiatrist said Bedayan had the delusion that some person was going to "do him in." He said that, because the fear was not based in reality, he received only vague answers when pressing Bedayan for details about the person he viewed as a threat.

Judge Broderick adjourned the trial until Tuesday.

Petaluma Eyes Two Bond Issues

The Petaluma City Council will decide whether to put two bond issues — totaling $2.7 million — for parks and a library on the Nov. 6 ballot when it meets Monday at 7:30 p.m. in city hall.

The council will consider asking voters to approve $1.5 million for park development and $1.2 million for a new library.

Capital improvement projects for 1973-74 will also be considered.

School Sued In Stabbing Cases

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Two Lowell High School students have filed a $100,000 suit against the San aFrancisco Unified School District, charging that because of negligence they were stabbed in a school yard fight.

Philip McCollum, 18, and Mark Gamble, 17, charged in their Superior Court suit that principal Barton Knowles and other school personnel knew fights were going on between whites and Filipinoes but failed to provide adequate supervision.

McCollum was stabbed in the right arm and Gamble in the chest last Oct. 13.

BART Orders Minicomputer

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Bay Area Rapid Transit District board of directors has decided to purchase a mini-computer as a backup for part of the trains' automatic control system.

BART officials said the new device—to cost $40,000—will act as a fail-safe mechanism for existing wayside detecting devices.

The new prototype will be built by Modular Computer Systems of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Plans To Rest

DETROIT (UPI) — The Guru Maharaj Ji, saying he needs extra rest, Friday canceled his scheduled appearance for today at Detroit's Cobo Hall.

Two Admit To Setting Grass Fires

Two San Rafael boys, 14 and 15, have admitted setting a series of grass fires in the Los Ranchitos area in June and July with delayed action incendiary devices, Marin County sheriff's deputies reported today.

The youths used a rope fuse attached to a book of matches, deputies said. They ignited the rope then left the scene, according to officers who said it would take up to an hour for the fires to start.

One boy admitted setting nine fires and the other confessed to setting five, but could not explain why they did it, deputies said. Both were cited to the probation department.

There were 17 small grass fires in the Los Ranchitos area from June 8 to July 16, according to the Marin County Fire Department.

Marinite Named To High Post

Anthony E. Desmond of Mill Valley has been named chief of the San Francisco office of the antitrust division of the U.S. Department of Justice.

Desmond, 37, succeeds Marquis L. Smith, who has retired after more than 30 years in the division. Desmond has been assistant chief for three years.

A graduate of the University of California at Berkeley, Desmond received his law degree from Hastings College of the Law in 1961. He has been with the division 11 years.

He lives at 2 Redwood Lane with his wife, Barbara, and two children.

Pittsburg School Head Is Fired

PITTSBURG (AP) — The superintendent of the Pittsburg Unified School District has been fired by the school board following an investigation that labeled him an "ineffective administrator."

The board took the action Wednesday after reviewing a California School Board Association report which revealed that 96 per cent of the persons interviewed in the Contra Costa community said John W. Hagen "lacks the ability to make a decision."

probable cause" for issuing the search warrant.

The statement issued by Mayor Stewart on behalf of the council defended San Anselmo officers on the grounds that entry into the home had been authorized by the Marin County district attorney's office. Stewart also said that entry without warrant was not illegal since the officers thought there was probable cause to believe that a felony was in progress. "It should be stressed that during the time officers were in the house, no search was made of the premises, in compliance with law, until a warrant was issued," Stewart said.

Stewart said that the court ruling that the entry was illegal was based on the judge's opinion that the informant was an unreliable witness. The "so-called" misrepresentations to gain the search warrant, were, he said technical and semantic errors "the significance of which has been and remains a matter of perennial judicial dispute."

Most participants in the meeting could not be reached for comment. Inspector Del Santo said he was pleased the committee had "understood our position and backed us 100 per cent. They concluded that there were no civil rights violated," he added.

Laird Admits To Bombing 'Report' Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird says he approved a "separate reporting system" to keep bombing raids in Cambodia secret in 1969—but denies approving any "falsification" of records.

The Pentagon, meanwhile, says the original March 18, 1969, order for 14 months of secret U. S. bombing of Cambodia may have been given orally, with no written record kept.

Laird, who is now President Nixon's domestic counselor, told a news conference in Chicago Friday that he devised a system whereby reports of the Cambodia bombing went to the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the President, while the public was told only of bombing raids in South Vietnam.

Woman Attacked At Knifepoint

An 18-year-old San Anselmo woman was raped at knifepoint in San Anselmo Thursday night, police reported Friday.

The woman told officers she was walking down Bolinas Avenue at 10:20 p.m. when a man walking parallel to her darted across the street, pushed her into a hedge, pulled a knife and raped her, police said.

She described her attacker as about 25 years old with dark, curly hair and wearing a plaid shirt and light pants, police said.

Decision On Man's Term Is Pending

A San Rafael man could receive a jail or prison sentence of up to one year for stealing a necklace and bracelet twice from a San Rafael woman.

Ronald Berg Goodrich, 23, pleaded guilty Friday to a felony charge of receiving stolen property in exchange for a promise from Judge David Menary Jr, of Marin Superior Court that he will receive no more than a year behind bars.

Goodrich has already served four months in jail for taking a pearl necklace and pearl and ruby bracelet valued at $800 from the home of Elena M. Foley on Nova Albion Way.

The jewels were recovered, but Goodrich and Carol Ruth Litteral, 20, of San Rafael, reportedly stole them again in June, along with $1,000 worth of other jewelry.

The two were arrested after they allegedly pawned the bracelet and necklace to a Corte Madera man, for $20, but charges against Miss Litteral were dismissed due to lack of evidence.

No More Than Year In Jail Will Be Given

A man, who admitted concealing stolen property taken from a Tiburon house, will receive no more than one year in county jail under a plea bargain agreed to Friday.

Howard Earl Rhodd, 23, of no known address, confessed to the charge in exchange for a pledge by Superior Court Judge David Menary Jr. that he will not be sent to state prison.

The Marin district attorney's office had recommended a prison sentence for Rhodd.

Rhodd was arrested by Tiburon police in connection with the theft of $3,000 in stereo equipment. Police said a 17-year-old Tiburon youth took the goods from the Paul E. Lyme home in Tiburon and gave them to Rhodd.

Prison Term Is Suspended

A confessed burglar has received a suspended state prison sentence and ordered to participate in a program at the Delancey Street Foundation, a San Francisco halfway house.

Dennis Leslie Yates, 31, of Novato, was also placed on probation by Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Superior Court, who sentenced the man Thursday.

Yates pleaded guilty to burglary in the second day of his jury trial July 3. The charge was filed after Yates and a companion forced their way into the apartment of a Novato woman last August, threatened her and fled with $125 in cash.

IS MIND POWER THE ANSWER?
If thought effects the way we act and what we do - then our first concern should be about what we believe.
The simple fact is; if we have Negative Beliefs we destroy the good we hope for, while if we have Positive Beliefs we create the good we desire.

Nixon Secluded At Retreat To Work On Watergate Speech

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — President Nixon is in seclusion with key advisers at his mountain top retreat this weekend, preparing what he apparently regards as the most crucial speech during his presidency—a half-hour television address to the nation on Watergate.

He is expected to deliver it the middle of next week.

The President also has been considering an appearance Aug. 20 before the Veterans of Foreign Wars in New Orleans to increase his public visibility while the Senate Watergate hearings are in recess.

Nixon also plans to hold press conferences again after a five-month unprecedented hiatus. But there were indications he has no intention of holding it in Washington in the near future.

Instead, tentative plans call for him to stop off in New Orleans and then fly to San Clemente, Calif., where at some point before Labor Day he would meet the press, and submit to questioning on Watergate.

Riding on his upcoming TV address was the President's ability to boost his standing in the polls and to reassert respect for the Watergate-shattered White House.

He has been working on it at least some of each day recently. Its importance to him is also indicated by the unusual number of aides on hand.

Nixon, a solitary man who prefers to work alone, had with him this weekend his chief speech writer, Ray Price, who talks a more conciliatory line and Patrick J. Buchanan, who is considered one of the hard liners in the speech writing group.

Also with Nixon were Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., his chief of staff, and Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler.

Nixon consulted Friday with J. Fred Buzhardt, his chief counsel on Watergate, who apparently advised him on legal issues he may discuss in his speech.

While his address may represent his first public defense since his 4,000-word statement on Watergate, issued last May 22, Nixon also was expected to focus attention on his past accomplishments in bringing the Vietnam War to a close and his hopes for peace in the future.

White House counselor Melvin R. Laird, speaking before the National Legislative conference in Chicago on Friday, appeared to set the tone.

He said the last weeks and months "have been difficult and trying times for all Americans" but that "only the hand wringers and wailers, the prophets of doom and gloom" would lose faith in the American way of life because of Watergate.

"I don't believe that we're going to become a nation of quitters and nay-sayers just because we happen to be living, as in the days of Tom Paine, in times that try men's souls."

He expressed confidence that when Nixon has spoken on Watergate ad "after the American people have made their independent judgment on Watergate" the nation can begin to focus on other problems.

Youth Confesses To Sex Murders

HOUSTON (UPI) — Elmer Wayne Henley, a wild-eyed chain smoking teen-ager, confessed Friday to taking part in at least 23 murders of young boys lured to their deaths at homosexual orgies.

"I feel pretty grotesque," he said. "I didn't feel like I was going to be able to hold my sanity much longer."

Henley, 17, and David Brooks, a calm, quiet 18-year-old, led police to different burial grounds in East Texas and along the Gulf Coast where the bodies of four more victims were found Friday.

That brought the death toll in the three-year spree of sex and sadism to 23, and police believe even more bodies—as many as 30—may be found unless the tide have carried them away.

"If they buried as many as they say, there will be four left on the beach," Houston police Detective W. L. Young said.

Shortly after he signed his confession, Henley called his mother and informed her he had told the police "just everything."

"Momma, be happy for me because now, at least, I can live," Henley said.

Henley was charged Friday with four counts of murder and held on $400,000 bond. Today, he was charged with two more murders—the July 27 shooting of Charles C. Cobble, 17, and the "strangulation with cord" of Marty Ray Jones, 18, on the same day.

Brooks was charged in Houston with one count of murder with malice in connection with strangulation of William Ray Lawrence on July 10. Assistant District Attorney Mike Hinton said no bond was set for Brooks, and his office is recommending bond not be set.

Guilty Plea Entered On Auto Burglary

A San Anselmo man, said to have broken into four or five cars at Point Reyes National Seashore, pleaded guilty Friday to two counts of burglary.

As a result of plea bargaining, a third burglary count against David Frederick Johnston, 18, was dismissed and Judge David Menary Jr. of Marin Superior Court promised him no more than one year in jail.

Mark Steven Botai, 21, also of San Anselmo, was arrested along with Johnston June 10 by seashore rangers who had staked out a parking lot near park headquarters.

Botai is due to enter a change of plea Monday. Both men had previously denied the burglaries.

Youth Is Fair From Accident

A Cotati youth was reported in fair condition today at Hillcrest Hospital in Petaluma with injuries suffered yesterday in a single-car accident near Petaluma.

Kenneth Wong, 13, of 1375 Rose Avenue received multiple cuts in the crash. Also treated at the hospital for cuts was Ricky Piazza, 15, of 10164 Redwood Highway, Cotati.

Both boys were passengers in a car driven by Rodney L. Browder, 17, of 10087 Redwood Highway, Cotati.

The California Highway Patrol said their car was westbound on Old Adboe Road near Petaluma when it went off the road, into a ditch and rolled over about 4:25 p.m.

Low Blood Supply Spurs Plea

A serious local blood shortage is causing the Marin Center of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank to make an special appeal for donors next week.

A spokesman said that "summer is always bad" because people go on vacations but that this year there seemed to be an even worse than usual shortage, possibly because more surgeries are being performed.

One day this week the San Francisco blood bank was down to six pints of O-positive blood and 10 pints of A-positive, the most most common types. Donors of all types were being sought, though.

The Marin center, at 506 Fourth Street, will be open from noon to 6 p.m. Monday, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Wednesday and Friday. A mobile unit will visit Marin General Hospital to collect donations there from 7 a.m. to noon Tuesday and from 12:30 to 5:30 p.m. Thursday.

Bernstein Brings Revives Old Masters For Pontiff

Pope Lauds Conductor For His Performance

By HAROLD ROGERS
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

ROME — "I wonder who'll be coming in first," Alberta said, "Bernstein or Pope Paul?" And then she quickly answered her own questions: "Bernstein, of course. The grand entrance will go to Paul VI."

We were gathered — 8,000 eager listeners — in the vast new Aula delle Udienze at the Vatican. Already on stage were the members of the Newark Boys Chorus ("They rose like a phoenix from the slums," Bernstein had told us a couple of days earlier); there was also the Harvard Glee Club and the Chorus and Orchestra of the RAI (Italian Radiotelevision). We were about to hear the annual concert presented by the RAI to the Pope.

On stage was an empty podium, in the audience a large white chair. We were already on our feet. A dignitary appeared at the left side of the stage, gave a signal, and Leonard Bernstein made his brisk way to the podium, pausing en route to shake hands with the concertmaster. When the burst of appluase subsided we turned to face the rear of the hall.

Soon Paul VI appeared, escorted by his retinue. Another burst of applause and a continuing ovation as the pontiff slowly made his way down the center aisle to his post of honor. He sat, we sat, Bernstein turned to the musicians, the television cameramen made their proper signals, and the concert — on a dynamic downbeat from Bernstein's baton — began.

As we listened to the rousing opening of Bach's Magnificat, I recalled the many times I had heard Bernstein conduct over the past 25 years — at Symphony Hall in Boston, at the Music Shed at Tanglewood, in Philharmonic Hall in New York, and now at the Vatican in Rome, the city Alberta and I call home.

In 1949 I was a journalistic observer in Bernstein's conducting class at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony's summer home, and never in all my conservatory days did I ever attend a course so stimulating, so exciting.

"It makes no difference what kind of a movement you make," he taught us. "The important thing is to make your intentions clear to the players." He delighted in the shocking statement, the vivid illustration, the theatrical stance.

In those days he was often accused by critics — even by me — of employing gestures to attract attention to his own compelling personality. He was an enfant terrible, Serge Koussevitzky's protege, a prophet without honor with members of the Boston Symphony.

But that early period of youthful self-dramatization has long since passed. Now at the Vatican we were witnessing the work of a mature master.

"It was not my intention to retire from the conductorship of the Boston Symphony," Lousevitzky told me a few months before his passing. "I had proposed to the trustees that they engage Lenushka (Mr. Bernstein) as my assistant. Then as I would gradually fade out, he would fade in. But the trustees didn't want it that way."

And when the Boston Symphony did feel he was ready for them, he was out so far ahead he couldn't turn back. In recent years, however, he accepted the post of musical director for the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

Shortly after his arrival in Rome our phone rang. "Why don't you come to a rehearsal?" he asked. "I'll be working at the Foro Italico — that old monument to Mussolini — from 3 to 8."

"We'll be there," I said; and later that afternoon, in response to a compliment paid him by Alberta, he humbly replied: "I'm just a tired old conductor."

He may have felt tired, though his vitality belied it. But he didn't look old — different, perhaps, his hair more grizzled, his face more deeply lined. I thought of the moment what I was first aware of his existence: I was looking at the cover of the album of his Jeremiah Symphony in the show window of Sherman & Clay's in San Francisco. I was impressed by his handsome profile, his early success. He was then in his middle 20s.

But as the rehearsal progressed it was plain to see that the old fire was burning, the emotional sparks flying.

"You are not a tired old conductor," Alberta told him during a break. "You are expressing timeless being."

"I don't know why," he answered, "but a couple of years ago I suddenly felt old. I'll find it again — whatever it was I had. Of course I'll find it again."

He has a magnificent attribute he has never lost — his inexhaustible capacity for love. More than any other quality of his many-faceted genius, love is the great communicating element of his success — his love of the music, of his pupils, his musicians, his public, his friends, his family.

"Isn't Bach incredible?" Bernstein told us at the rehearsal. He went on to say that Bach turned out something like an eternal hit parade, that the great show tunes of our times fade into insignificance when confronted by Bach.

The Magnificat completed and duly applauded, the papal concert continued with the second and final selection — Bernstein's own Chichester Psalms, composed in 1965 for the annual festival held in Chichester Cathedral in Sussex, England.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN
At a rehearsal session

Here the mood changed radically, the harmonies ranging widely with American spaciousness. Bernstein's early eclecticism has settled into a style truly his own, but at no time in his career did he ever echo a mood not fully American.

He chose his texts from the Psalms in Hebrew, and the work is dramatically developed into a kind of spiritual tug-of-war between the 23rd Psalm — a prayer of peace — and the belligerent assertions of the Hebraic Second Psalm: "Why do the nations rage, and the people imagine a vain thing?" The battle continues until the staccato shouts of the Second Psalm are silenced by the serenely sustained song of the Twenty-Third.

As the final notes faded into the distance the public rose to pay its tribute — a continuin ovation as Bernstein directed attention to the orchestra, the choirs, the soloists, and — of course — the Pope.

Whereupon Pope Paul, speaking extemporaneously, thanked Bernstein and his musicians for "the delicious and magnificent concert," an hour of inspiration that gave him respite from his daily cares.

"It is most extraordinary," he said, "that you, Maestro Bernstein, as a representative of the New World, have come here to teach us old Europeans how to make music. In your program we heard the music of Bach, representing established tradition, contrasted with your own, filled with the youthful vitality that is America."

When we later saw Bernstein in his dressing room he had taken off his shirt, his tails, his white tie. He was bare-chested, with a handsome jewel hanging from his neck and a black velvet cape draped from his shoulders. In this strikingly elegant way he received his fans and his friends.

Alberta and I stayed to the last.

"And now remember what I told you," she said to him. "Your performance today proved that you are expressing timeless being. You gave me a moment of eternity."

"Thank you, my dear," he said. "All is well when the communication with God goes on. It's pure hell when it stops."

"The night of the soul," I said.

"Yes, the dark night of the soul, as St. John of the Cross put it," he said. "I went through a dreadful period a few years ago when all communication stopped. Perhaps the best thing, when that happens, is just to stand and wait."

"Or importune," I said.

"But these experiences bring us to our knees," Alberta added. "They teach us humility. And then we rise higher."

"You're so right!" he exclaimed. "We always rise higher!"

We kissed him good-bye and made our way out through the deserted auditorium. A few worken were removing the last platforms from the stage. The sun was setting as we stopped out into St. Peter's Square. The clouds behind the great dome were a radiant pink, suffusing a roseate glow over the Bernini colonnade. And the closing words of the Chichester Psalms, as we reluctantly strolled between the two great fountains, were still ringing in our ears:

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

Shultz: No Shortage Of Meat In U.S.

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz said Friday there is no shortage of meat in the nation except that created by people "going out and buying anything they can lay their hands on."

He warned that cattle raisers who keep their beef back from market now may find "they won't make out so well on Sept. 12 (when the beef price freeze is to be lifted) if there is a big surge in the supply.

"If people will take it easy, we can get through to Sept. 12," he said. "We have a very extravagant diet in this country."

Shultz said he expects automakers to be "first in line Monday," when business firms may begin asking for approval for price increases under the Phase 4 economic guidelines.

He said he did not know if the price hikes will be approved before the introduction of 1964 models in September.

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American Motors have all said they would seek "substantial" increases, which could reach $150.

In other developments:

Wheat futures at the Midwestern commodities exchanges reached record heights again Friday, the 10th day in a row. In Chicago, all contracts for wheat futures advanced 20 cents, the maximum increase allowed. The bid for wheat to be delivered in September was $4.54 a 60-pound bushel.

The Independent Bakers Association asked for immediate emergency export controls on wheat. A spokesman said telegrams were sent to Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz and Commerce Secretary Frederick Dent declaring the wheat scarcity has already shut down 100 large independent bakers and has the entire industry operating at a loss.

The Hershey Foods Corp. announced the price of cocoa beans has risen from 36 cents a pound last year to 80 cents, and the price of almonds has gone up 90 per cent. The firm said in its annual report that "it is apparent that prices and bar sizes also will be changed substantially," subject to government approval.

In Washington, the Agriculture Department said although beef production continued to decline this week, pork supplies increased enough to record a 2 per cent weekly rise in the amount of meat going to market. Pork is not subject to the price freeze.

The Army said its commissary at Ford Ord, Calif., will stop selling beef Monday because there isn't any. Officials said beef for the 12,000 trainees and others who use the post's mess halls will not be affected.

In Lynwood, Wash., buffalo meat has become a popular supermarket item even though it sells for about 20 cents a pound more than beef.

Sausalito Ferry To Celebrate Third Anniversary Next Week

A birthday party for the Bay Area's most popular 3-year-old — the Sausalito ferryboat — will be celebrated Friday by the Golden Gate Bridge District.

Some three million passengers have ridden the vessel since it revived ferry service across the Bay. It is scheduled to have a new sister by next June, a larger and faster ferry to operate from Larkspur.

The vessel will be decorated on Friday, and free coffee and doughnuts will be served on morning commute runs. A band will be aboard for the 4:10 and 5:30 p.m. runs from San Francisco's Ferry Building, and free champagne and snacks will be provided by the operator of the boat's concession.

There also will be a birthday cake in the morning and evening, according to plans announced at Friday's meeting of bridge district directors.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

BUSES — Received a staff report that 74 of 250 employees working at the toll plaza commute by bus, thus decreasing need for parking in the area.

GARDENER — Commended Hugh Wallace of San Rafael, gardener foreman, for his "outstanding efforts" in landscaping and beautifying gardens in the toll plaza area.

SPARE — Bought a spare marine diesel engine for the Sausalito ferry from the single bidder, Peterson Tractor Co. of San Leandro, for $33,346. Peterson was the sole supplier of the required type of engine, the staff reported.

SAN RAFAEL — Referred to staff seven bids ranging from $1,490,000 to $2,320,000 to build maintenance and administration buildings and landscape the bus maintenance facility in San Rafael. The lowest bidder, Christensen and Foster of Santa Rosa, withdrew its bid on the grounds it was erroneous. The next lowest bid, by F.P. Lathrop of Emeryville, was $1,740,000.

HANDICAPPED — Referred to committee a suggestion that physically handicapped persons be allowed to use the bridge toll free because of their inability to use district buses.

Building Passed By Tam Board

The Tamalpais Design Review Board Thursday night approved final plans for Raymond Hoffman to build 16 residential units at 384 Pinehill Road, according to Curry Eckelhoff, board spokesman.

Board members rejected final plans for developer Broughton-Horne to build 12 residential units on Shoreline Highway west of Pinehill Road. The plans did not comply with zoning and setback requirements and did not provide for adequate landscaping, Mrs. Eckelhoff said. The developer will present revised plans at the board's next meeting Aug. 23.

Youth Dances Set In Fairfax

A series of Saturday evening dances for high school and junior high school age young people has been scheduled by the Fairfax Parks and Recreation Commission.

The first dances are scheduled for Oct. 13 for the junior high school and Nov. 3 for the high school age group, according to commission chairman Leo Cronin. Dances will be in the Fairfax Pavilion.

The commission set discussion of the Fairfax Citizens' Committee Report on the General Plan for its next regular meeting August 28.

Dredging Bill In Not A Surprise

The Bel Marin Keys Community Service District has learned that it will have to pay to dredge and additional 20,000 cubic yards of soil from Novato Creek if the stream is to remain navigable.

Board secretary Kay Dow said the report, presented to the board Thursday, by engineers who prepared the dredging plan, came as no surprise. The district has already budgeted $1,400 for the extra dredging.

She said dredging is now underway in the creek, but because of silt now settling in the channel, the operation will have to be more extensive and continue longer than expected.

The board took no action on a request by dredging contractor Dunconson-Harrelson for a 70-day extension from its December deadline for completing the work.

Bel Marin Keys Community Services District board also:

ELECTION — Noted that the seats of board members Carl Wandt and D. J. Thrall will be up for election Nov. 6.

SWIMMING POOL — Set Sept. 11 as closing day for the community pool.

PARK — Learned the Marin County park and recreation commission will soon call for bids for landscaping the districts Montego Park.

50,000 Jehovah's Witnesses In Brussels—International Meeting

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Fifty thousand Jehovah's Witnesses from 40 countries are in town for their international convention—four days of picnicking, sightseeing, baptizing and preaching.

Meeting in the cavernous auditoriums of the Palais de Centenaire near the grounds of the 1968 World's Fair, the Witnesses say they are here to show that Christianity can conquer the world without armed conflict.

The convention program says the Witnesses are being asked "to pronounce themselves openly for a divine government as the only alternative for the solution of the problems of this tormented world."

Catering to the visitors is an army of volunteer workers who have set up dormitories, bathing facilities, a hospital and cafetarias capable of serving 20,000 hot meals an hour.

Outside the meeting halls, more than 200 tour buses are available to take the Witnesses to and from their hotels and campsites and on tours of Belgium.

The theme of this year's gathering is "Divine Victory." Convention organizers say the daily program is designed to "teach people to live according to Bible principles and prepare them for the new way of living in the approaching new system of things."

The Witnesses get their instruction in groups ranging up to 18,000 at a time according to the language they speak.

The largest language grouping is Spanish, with about 16,000 Witnesses from Spain. About 8,000 persons attended each of the sessions in French, Dutch and Portuguese.

Convention officials said 21,000 American Witnesses are in Europe for various national meetings and several thousand of them are in Brussels.

Inside the meeting halls, which are not air conditioned, women in sun dresses sat in closely packed deck chairs, fanning themselves with convention programs, and rocked their sleeping babies.

Many elderly persons watched the proceedings from portable cots, cooling themselves with battery-powered fans.

Marin Women

THE LAST WORD

'Jane Doe' Style Is Becoming Increasingly Popular In Marin

By JOAN LISETOR

"Scratch a woman and you will find a feminist," has been said by writer Betty Friedan. Another writer, a bit more noted, William Shakespeare, asked, "What's in a name?"

Not exactly on the same literary level, the two authors have touched on a subject much on the minds of Marin County women, most of whom do not consider themselves feminist.

An increasing number of married women are asking to be referred to by their given names, rather than their husbands'. (Jane Doe instead of Mrs. John Doe.)

The women, most of whom are active in traditional women's clubs, are submitting material to the I-J in the "Jane Doe" style. A check of records for the past three months shows that 60 per cent of the married women who have been elected presidents of Marin organizations and called the I-J to make appointments to have their pictures taken have given their own names.

Elise Meyers of San Rafael, program chairman for Marin Branch, American Association of University Women, complained in a letter to the editor of the I-J after a panel of prominent Marin women presenting a program for the AAUW was each identified by her husband's name.

Mrs. Meyers believes that using one's own name is a beginning toward developing one's own personality.

"I feel strongly that I should have my own identity," she said. "It should be separate from my husband's, although we are a close family. Things have been better since I insisted on an identity of my own. I used to wait until he got home because I wanted a piece of what he was doing. It was hard on him.

"Now when he comes home I tell him what Elise Meyers has been doing."

HAVING A doctor of philosophy degree gives Libby Colman an advantage most women don't have. She can use the title "doctor." It does get confusing for the Sausalito woman when she and her husband, a psychiatrist, are introduced as Dr. and Dr. Colman.

Unlike some professional women Libby Colman likes using her husband's last name, but she said about the only time she uses Mrs. Arthur Colman is to call a plumber.

It angers her to receive mail from her alma mater, Wellesley College, addressed to Mrs. Arthur Colman, because she was known there by her maiden name. Because she was not career oriented prior to marriage she has never been tempted to use her maiden name.

"People usually giggle when they introduce Arthur and me as Dr. and Dr., but really what we prefer socially are our first names," she said.

MARJORIE PARR picked up the nickname Jorie when she began hosting a radio show for KTIM, "Jorie Talks." She now identifies with the name Jorie Parr and has changed steadfastly from being Mrs. Gordon F. Parr, she said.

"I think it's tacky to put Mrs. in front of a woman's name, but lately I've been writing to friends and using Ms. or no title and just the woman's name," she said.

If she is calling somewhere to make a complaint she uses the Mrs. Gordon Parr, the San Rafael woman said.

"But it did give me a good feeling when my husband was on a trip recently and addressed the letter Mrs. Gordon F. Parr," she said.

Oddly, many women who prefer to be known by their own names are difficult to locate because they are not listed in the telephone book, preferring to be listed under their husband's names.

Also for identity sake an increasing number of women are retaining or reverting to their maiden names, which raises such questions as, "Is the Jane Smith, who is the wife of John Doe, the former Jane Smith, who. . .?" However, the Smith name is the woman's father's, so one wonders why it is less objectionable to be known by one's father's name than by one's husband's?

ARTIST MARTHA Borge of Point Reyes Station is seated before two of her paintings which will be on exhibit at Gump's Gallery in San Francisco in October. Her realistic paintings using acrylic paint on Masonite board are of the hills and valleys of West Marin and Sonoma County. The painting on the left is a setting near Sebastopol in shades of greens and grays and the one on the right is a scene of West Marin, painted in shades of browns and yellows with a cypress tree.

Children See Wonders On Voyage

By MOLLY MARIN

"We saw a lot of whales, sharks, flying fish and porpoises. The porpoises became our very good friends and played around the boat," said Mrs. Bob Bernheim about a Mexican cruise.

Susan and Bob Bernheim and their children have just returned after a two and a half week cruise to Mexico aboard their Grand Banks powerboat, the Grand Slam.

Their guests were Bob Bernheim's sister Mrs. Harvey Rogers of Belvedere, her husband and children.

The families cruised among the Channel Islands near Santa Barbara where they took their smaller boat into caves to see the marine life.

Next they anchored at San Diego Yacht Club to take the six children to the San Diego Zoo.

They reached Ensenada, Mexico, where they had pleasant, breezy weather.

On the return voyage they put in at the Newport, Marina Del Rey and Ventura yacht clubs.

The families left the Grand Slam at the Santa Barbara Yacht Club last week and Bob Bernheim and a crew flew there this weekend to bring the Grand Banks to a mooring near the Hearst Castle.

Susan Bernheim and Nancy and Harvey Rogers and their children drove to San Simeon for the tour and a weekend in Carmel.

WHEN THE U. S. Navy Band from Treasure Island strikes up for a concert tonight at the Belvedere Community Park, a host of Belvedere residents will be on hand for a picnic supper.

Among those bringing their picnic dinners for the concert will be Mr. and Mrs. Willard Anderson, her mother Mrs. Frank Smith, all of Belvedere, and the Andersons' son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Anderson of San Anselmo.

It will be a special treat also for Mrs. Anderson's nieces Judy and Lisa Butler, ho are visiting with their grandmother in Belvedere. They have just arrived from Saudi Arabia, where their father has been with the Getty Oil Co. for the past five years.

Also on hand for the City of Belvedere will be Mayor and Mrs. Allen Steinau, Vice Mayor and Mrs. Thomas S. Price and City Mgr. and Mrs. William L. Cavalli. Some residents of the streets bordering the park have invited friends to share picnic dinners on their lawns while the band plays. Mrs. Ernest E. Weihe will entertain friends at her Community Road home, and her neighbor, Miss Barbara Egoan will serve a picnic at home to Mr. and Mrs. James Harmon, Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Bassett and Mmes. Lorna Bullis and Aaron Jones.

WHEN THE eight members of the Orchestra Piccola perform Sunday at Old St. Hilary's Landmark in Belvedere, Rep. and Mrs. William S. Mailliard will be in the audience.

Congressman Mailliard has wanted to hear the orchestra perform since he came to its aid earlier in the summer when customs officials were refusing to let the musical instruments enter Italy.

THE ENGAGEMENT of Terence (Kayo) Hallinan and Penny DeVries was celebrated at an outdoor gathering at the home of the future bridegroom's brother, Daniel Hallinan, and his wife, Wendy.

Among the guests were the future bride and bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Hallinan, former Marin residents now living in San Francisco; and Mr. and Mrs. John M. DeVries of Carmichael.

Also at the party were Penny's grandmothers Mrs. Priscilla Holmes and Mrs. Barbara DeVries, both of Roseville; Terence's cousins, Michael Hallinan and Charles Harrod; and friends, James Herman, Michael and Tania Stepanian, Rommel and Joan Bondoc, Eddie and Phyllis Pay and Philip LaRocca.

Terence is a graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School, the University of California at Berkeley and Hastings College of the Law. He practices law in San Francisco. Penny attended high school in Carmichael and California State University, San Francisco. She has a daughter, Savoy.

A 50TH anniversary celebration delayed three years will begin Sept. 2 when Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Pantaleoni of Fairfax are leaving for Europe.

Pantaleoni was in the hospital on Jan. 31, 1970, the couple's 50th anniversary, which delayed the celebration.

The couple will visit Mrs. Pantaleoni's birthplace, near Genoa, Italy, and his native France. They plan to see Pantaleoni's sister in Lucca, Italy, for the first time in 62 years.

During the month they are gone the Pantaleonis' daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Riley Brown, will stay in the home. The Pentaleonis have lived in Fairfax since 1912.

BEFORE CORINTHIAN Yacht Club's shipwreck party tonight the costumed partygoers will have cocktails at the homes of members Capt. (ret.) and Mrs. Elmer Towle of Belvedere, and Messrs. and Mmes. Dale Pedersen of Tiburon, Brooke Halsey of Belvedere and William Patry of Tiburon.

MR. AND MRS. Philip Antrobus of Mill Valley have returned from a month-long vacation trip to Austria, Switzerland, Germany and England. Miss Rosemarie Antrobus of Worcestershire, a sister of the Mill Valley man, joined the couple on their tour of the continent. Antrobus, English by birth, visited relatives and friends in the Midlands, the South of England and London.

LIVING IN Harvard, Mass., are Mr. and Mrs. Peter Del Tredici (Susan Klaw.) The couple was married July 28 at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Klaw, in Cream Hill, Conn.

Peter's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Del Tredici of San Anselmo. He was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley and received the M.A. degree from the University of Oregon. The bridegroom manages the greenhouse at the Harvard Forest Experimental Station in Petersham, Mass.

IN MIAMI Beach for the international convention of Alpha Delta Kappa the past week, Patricia R. Hosmer of Larkspur then joined a group of 300 delegates for a cruise of the Caribbean.

Alpha Delta Kappa is an honorary association of women educators, and Mrs. Hosmer is president of Alpha Upsilon Chapter. She is a teacher at Granada School in the Reed District.

JUST BACK from two weeks in Hawaii are Mr. and Mrs. John Bluth of Mill Valley. The couple toured four of the Hawaiian Islands during their stay. The trip was an anniversary gift, honoring the Bluths 25th anniversary on July 7, and presented by their three sons, Mark Jon, 18, Brian, 16, and Gregg, 13.

VACATIONING ON the big island of Hawaii in late July, the William Quinans of Tiburon and their son, Russell, were lucky to witness a new crater filling with lava and sending up a 10-foot fountain.

The Quinans watched from a viewing platform on the rim of the active volcano, Kilauea.

MR. AND MRS. John Giromini are living in San Rafael following their marriage July 28 at Christ Presbyterian Church in San Rafael.

The bride is the former Karen Kraus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Kraus, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Giromini. All are residents of San Rafael.

Lori Archibald of San Rafael was maid of honor for the wedding, and the bridegroom's brother, Jim Giromini, also of San Rafael, served as best man. A reception at the Girominis' home followed the ceremony.

COCKTAILS WERE served at the Belvedere firehouse for the firemen and their wives or dates before the 24th annual Belvedere Firemen's Ball on Friday.

L.T. "Bunk" Mersereau, chief of the all-volunteer fire department, and assistant chiefs David Imrie and Robert Rey were hosts.

A PICNIC for families of chiropractic doctors will be held Sunday at Morton's Warm Springs near Kenwood.

Among the families planning to attend are the James Diederichs of Mill Valley. Softball games, swimming and an abalone picnic are planned.

Trim Fibers From Seam Allowances On Fake Furs

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I recently purchased some fake, red Fox fur fabric for a winter jacket. The hair on this fabric is about 2 inches long. When I purchased this material, the store manager suggested shaving the hair at the seams. Someone else suggested pulling the hair away from the seam after stitching. Which method is correct?

MRS. B.F.

DEAR MRS. B.F.,

For long-haired furs, it's best to cut the fibers away from the seam allowance to avoid a very thick seam. You must do this carefully with a sharp scissors to avoid cutting the backing. Only cut the fibers the width of the seam allowance. After the seam has been stitched, you will probably want to catch stitch it open to the inside of the garment. Any hairs that remain in the seam can be carefully pulled out with a needle from the right side. This will disguise the seam.

When working with lighter weight fake furs with a short nap, it is not necessary to remove the nap from the seam allowance. Stitch as you would any coating fabric. When the seam has been stitched and lightly pressed from the wrong side, turn to right side and pull out any hairs that have been stitched into the seam. Fake furs are easy to work with, fun to wear, so be sure to try one this fall.

DEAR EUNICE,

I find that most circular hems appear very bulky, because of the extra fabric that is involved. Have you found an answer for us that will make it easier to get a professional look to our hems?

MRS. B.K.

DEAR MRS. B.K.,

The bulk will be affected greatly by the type of fabric you have used. Usually knits will work in much better than woven fabrics. The first thing to remember is that the hem cannot be as wide as you would use for a straight skirt.

I would recommend a hem that is no more than 1½ to 2-inches deep. After you have had the skirt measured accurately on yourself (which is very important with circular skirts because they do hang unevenly due to the bias), turn up the hem on your marks and baste in place.

Next, carefully measure the exact width of the hem, mark it with chalk and cut off the excess ¼-inch beyond your marks. Machine stitch on the hem marks with a loose zig-zag stitch, stitching over a piece of regular thread.

Carefully pull the thread that you have encased in the zigzag stitch slightly, until the hem will ease in perfectly to fit the skirt. Never pull this too tight or your hem will look gathered at the lower edge. It is important to keep the hem slightly larger than the garment so that you can ease it to the garment as you hand sew your invisible stitches.

DEAR EUNICE,

I simply can't get used to the amount of fabric I must purchase for making a pair of slacks. Formerly, one length of fabric did the trick. Today, I find I am using what I used to need for a whole dress. Why do patterns require so much fabric?

MRS. C.B.

DEAR MRS. C.B.,

I checked the patterns to see what the requirements were, and I found they varied greatly according to the width of the fabric which you probably weren't taking into consideration. Also, the style of pants has changed considerably. They aren't cut as skimpy as they were a few years ago.

The trouser look is again in for fall, as well as the cuffed look. There is also a difference in length. It seems that with the younger generation, they must be so long that the lower cuff is not only constantly dirty, but frayed as well.

Since most knits are about 60 inches wide today, and they must be cut in one direction, you will need about 1½ yards plus an extra ⅛ yard for cuffs.

If you are making the slacks from cotton, it is usually 45 inches wide and will require two lengths, depending on your height and the length you desire. This is about 2½ or 2⅝ yards. Unfortunately, as the styles change, so do the fabric requirements.

THIS IS THE season when everyone is thinking about fall bazaars for their own favorite church or charity. Please send me any new ideas for gifts that are a little unusual so that we may share them with other Sew Simple readers The gift suggestions used in this column will receive a special gift from me. Send your suggestions to Eunice Farmer, in care of the Independent-Journal.

Artist Captures West Marin Hills

By DOROTHY NEWELL

Views of the hills and valleys of West Marin and Sonoma County can be seen in Gump's Gallery in San Francisco in October.

They will be displayed in the paintings of artist Martha Borge of Point Reyes Station.

"My hope is to capture the moods of strength, stability and peacefulness in the landscape," she said. She rarely works from the scene itself but carries the eessentials of her impressions, as she remembers them, she said.

HER LANDSCAPES are in natural colors showing the variations of a tree or trees, grassy land, sky and clouds. Occasionally she adds a barn or a house to the scene.

Mrs. Borge's paintings vary from large three feet by six feet to tiny one foot squares painted with acrylics on Masonite board.

The woman, who had always wanted to be an artist, said "No other area has lured me. I can't remember a time when I wasn't painting."

She said her paintings once had a soft, diffused quality, but since she had a cataract removed from her eye, she can see things more clearly, and she puts more color in her art.

She paints for about five hours a day, dividing the time between the afternoon and evening hours.

Mrs. Borge has exhibited in numerous galleries and has won a number of prizes, including a second award at the 1957 Jack London Square Festival in Oakland and first award in 1964. She received a first award in 1964 at the Northern California Annual at Crocker Gallery in Sacramento, and she also has shown at the College of Marin Fine Arts Gallery.

Her landscapes have been shown in three San Francisco annuals and Art Across America at the San Francisco Museum in 1965. One of her paintings was purchased by the San Francisco Art Commission in 1967.

SHE ALSO received two awards and a purchase prize at the National Small Painting Exhibition at the University of Omaha in 1967. She exhibited her paintings previously at Gump's in 1968 and sold all of them. She also exhibited there in 1971 and many of the works were purchased.

The artist was graduated from Berkeley High School and the California College of Arts and Crafts, where she met her husband, Ralph. He is also an artist and a teacher at the college.

The couple have three children, Michele, 15, Martin, 12, and Jason, 8 years old. The family moved to Point Reyes Station from the Berkeley hills three years ago and they live in a three-story house built in 1910.

The serenity of West Marin is conductive to painting, the artist said, and her relaxation is attending her son's Little League games.

Sondra Kay Archer's Engagement Is Told

Mr. and Mrs. Parker A. Archer of Napa have announced the engagement of their daughter Sondra Kay Archer to James Patrick Burke of Miami, Fla.

Sondra, who is the sister of Gary Archer, is a graduate of Marin Catholic High School and Arizona State University. She is employed with the Sonoma Valley Unified School District in Sonoma. The Archers are former Marin residents.

James is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Smith of Atlanta, Ga. He is a graduate of the Georgia Institute of Technology and is a pilot with Eastern Airlines.

The couple plans to be married Sept. 29 at St. John the Baptist Church in Napa.

Acrylic Yarns Make Finest Baby's Wear

Machine-washable acrylic yarns come in pastel colors that can be turned into irresistible booties, sweaters and caps for the carriage set. They are sure to please every new mother, since the yarns are as practical as they are pretty.

They are so easy to wash, and everyone knows that what goes next to baby should be kept spotlessly clean.

Permanent Press A Boon To Tables

It seems silly nowadays to buy tablecloths and napkins that are not permanent press and soil resistant. Even luxurious linens come this way. The tedious job of ironing has been eliminated; perhaps just a simple touch-up may be required after machine washing and drying.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Ex-Boyfriend Gets Caught Up In An Old Arranged Con Game

RAP:

My "fiance" (now my ex) broke a date at the last minute. I was upset because this wasn't the first time, so when his friend called and asked me to help him use two free tickets to a concert, I said "Sure," figuring a "just-friends" evening was okay.

When we came home, who should be waiting on my doorstep but my fiance, and he was furious. This made me mad too (after all, I was completely innocent) and I ended up giving back his class ring.

When I cooled down, I called him, but he wouldn't talk to me. Said I couldn't be trusted. I never saw his friend again either. It's been a month.

Today I met a girl who used to go with my ex. It came out in conversation that he broke up with her the same way, using the same friend, with the big confrontation scene when the two got home from their "date."

So I called up the friend and after a lot of evasion, he confessed that's how both of them got out of situations that might lead to marriage. He said I just "thought" I was engaged.

How's that for a couple of stinkers? — MAD BUT NOT MOURNING ANY MORE.

MAD:

They wouldn't win our rotten egg award of the year, but on a "stinker" scale of one to ten, they'd rate at least eight. — SUE

DEAR MAD:

Those two scheming meanies should be very happy together. And aren't you glad you're "not mourning any more!" — HELEN

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

Several weeks ago my best friend was killed by a drunken, adult driver. She was an only child, aged 15, and just like a sister to me.

Since then I've been asking: why do adults harp about the younger generation using drugs when so many adults kill people because they were too drunk to know what they were doing?

Alcohol kills thousands of innocent persons a year — often they're little children who don't have a chance against drunken drivers.

Maybe I don't know what I'm talking about. All I know is I lost my friend because one older man was drunk and out of his mind. I think adults should take a close look at their own drinking problems before they start blaming young people for all the world's drug troubles. After all, alcohol is also a drug.

I've never tried drugs or booze and I wish everyone was as scared of them as I am. I wish that the man who killed my friend had been scared too. — LONELY

DEAR LONELY:

Wishing won't bring back your friend, but we also wish more could be done about our No. 1 drug problem: excessive use of alcohol — by both adults and teens. Increased traffic penalties for drunk drivers might help, but mainly, since we can't enforce abstinence, we should learn moderation. Will you kids be the ones to teach us? — HELEN

Grass Stain Cure

Grass stains can be removed from washable fabrics by soaking in an enzyme pre-soak product prior to laundering. If the stain still remains, use a chlorine bleach if safe for the fabric and color, then launder again.

For Happy Feet

For happy feet, a soft nail brush and a pumice stone are grooming aids well worth using regularly. During your daily bath or shower, scrub feet with the well-lathered brush. Gently rub the pumice over any toughened skin areas on soles and heels. Occasionally, after drying carefully, massage feet with lotion or cream.

FIRST YEAR

Temperament Plays Major Growth Role

(Sixth in a series)

Babies differ from each other in many ways. They may be big or small, fast growing or slow growing, early developers or late developers, brown-eyed or blue-eyed. One of the most important ways in which babies differ is in their temperament — the usual way they react to you, to other people and to things around them. You will find it much easier to understand your baby, to take care of him, to teach him and to enjoy him if you pay attention to his temperament.

There are at least nine ways in which young babies differ from each other in "temperamental characteristics." No one knows whether these characteristics or differences are inherited, whether they are formed when the baby is growing during your pregnancy or whether they develop in the first weeks of life. In any case, they are present in the first months of life, and you will want to understand how they affect your child.

How much does your baby move around? When you put him in bed, does he wiggle all over the crib or does he stay in the same place? When you change a diaper or put on a shirt, do you have trouble because he is constantly wiggling about or does he lie quietly and let you change him?

NORMAL BABIES may be very active or very inactive. Your job in caring for a very active baby will be very different from caring for a very inactive one. If you believe that all babies should be active, you may be disappointed or frustrated by an inactive baby. If you think that all babies should stay still and lie quietly while being dressed or bathed, you may think that an active baby is bad or that he is active because you are not caring for him properly.

If your baby is super-active, you may just want to enjoy him, or you may want to behave in a more soothing and gentle way so as to encourage him to slow down a little. With a very inactive baby, you may want to take more initiative in playing with him, moving him about, and rewarding him for the activities which he does start on his own. How regular are your baby's habits? Does he always awaken at the same time, get hungry at the same time, take his nap at the same time, have his bottle at the same time? Does he vary by a small amount each day? Or is he completely unpredictable? Does he eat and drink about the same amount at his morning feeding each day?

IF HE is very regular, your job is usually quite easy. If he is very irregular, you will have to be prepared for daily changes. Or you may have to do more scheduling for him rather than sitting back and waiting for him to find a comfortable schedule of his own. Of course, you can't feed him if he isn't hungry, or make him sleep if he isn't really tired. But you can feed him before he really cries in hunger and you can put him down for a quiet time or for sleep even though he isn't especially tired.

How long does it take him to get used to new situations or to changes? When you changed from sponge bathing to a bath, did he accept it immediately, or did it take six or seven tries before he really accepted it? If you offer him a new food or toy, does he take it promptly or does it take many trials before he will really eat it or play with it? If he objects the first time you put a cap on his head, does he object every time you try it, or does he get used to it very quickly?

High or low "adaptability" is neither good nor bad. The child who resists change may take longer to teach. But, once taught, he won't change every time a slightly different situation comes along.

SPORTS ANALYSIS

Games Run To Daylight

By LEW CODDINGTON

When Vince Lombardi popularized the phrase "run to daylight" back in the early 1960s, he was advising his halfbacks, but a few other people were listening to him as well — specifically, the people who run all-star football games.

The Shrine North-South game in Los Angeles, and the Ross Valley Kiwanis North-South game in Marin, both have been forced out of their traditional weekday-night pockets to weekend afternoons, though in the Kiwanians' case, it's more like a rollout play called from the bench.

In any event, after 21 years of being played on a weeknight, the Shrine game this year will be held Sunday at 3 p.m., and will include Redwood High School's Mike Connor.

The Marin North-South game, on a Friday night for seven years, will be held next Saturday at 1 p.m. at San Rafael High.

The two sponsoring groups' situations differ quite a bit, but both organizations were motivated by the same basic idea — getting more fans — under conditions which make it increasingly difficult for fans to be attracted.

"There were two reasons for the change," explained Manny Pineda, who handles public relations for the Shrine game. "One, we wanted to make the game a family affair for the Shrine people, so they could go picnic in the park beforehand, and so on.

"The other is that we had trouble with ruffians at night, throwing rocks at buses, things like that," in the area surrounding the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Pineda claims that a sharp decline in attendance at the game was "not a big factor" in the decision. From a peak of almost 86,000 in 1957, the crowds slumped to 32,000 last year, lowest since the inaugural game in 1952.

Pineda worries about "competition." and notes that it is minimized by the Sunday afternoon date. The Dodgers are playing at the same time, but against lowly Philadelphia, while the Angels are on the road and the Shriners' chief worry, the Rams, met Cleveland Friday night.

Nor do they have to worry on Saturday afternoon about concerts, movies or other such distractions. On the other hand, the temptation for potential spectators to dash off to the beach or mountains is greater.

"We're very optimistic," says Pineda, which is what he could be expected to say. "Our advance sale is better than last year, and we're hopeful of attendance between 50,000 and 60,000," a figure attained only once in the past decade.

The Marin North-South game has no problem with declining attendance, according to director Charlie Monte, but made the switch "just to try, to experiment." The game attracts between 3,000 and 4,000 annually, has never had a losing year financially, never has been marred by violence, he added.

Monte simply reasons that the change will "make it easier for parents and kids to attend." Its success, or lack thereof, will be of interest to those who advocate playing the high-school schedule in the afternoons. Athletic directors traditionally have said that night games provide greater revenue.

Even if the games succeed in providing boosts in attendance, the boost may well prove temporary. Several powerful factors well beyond the game directors' control may make it so.

One is the general economic situation. After spending 50 cents a gallon for gasoline and $1 a dozen for eggs, the average fan doesn't have a whole lot of money left over for sports events, especially if the events themselves go up in price due to increased costs.

Another factor is the influence of professionals. Why attend the Shrine game and see the Gene Washington of tomorrow when the Gene Washington of today is cavorting at Candlestick Park in full glory?

A third factor, linked to the other two, is television. The very finest players and teams are available in abundance, and for free, at the flick of a switch. The view is better, expert commentary is provided and it never rains on the spectator.

Certain diehard fans, chiefly parents, always will provide a hard core of rooters at high school games. Capturing the casual fan is the crux of the problem: if he gets the urge to see some football this weekend, and his urge can be satisfied at no cost by watching a televised doubleheader on Sunday, he may decide to turn in early Friday night and mow the lawn on Saturday.

To the people who organize all-star games, who have decided to run to daylight, let me wish good luck, because they do need it.

AGAINST JETS

Big Chance Tonight For 49er Spurrier

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Before pre-season National Football League action started, San Francisco coach Dick Nolan told quarterback Steve Spurrier he would go most of the way in the team's third exhibition game against the New York Jets.

Spurrier played briefly as Joe Reed sparkled in the 49ers first win against New England and John Brodie looked sharp in the second win over Cleveland: Spurrier played well during his few moments in those games.

But tonight the 49ers meet the Jets here and Spurrier says "this is the one I've been waiting for."

Spurrier is the guy who replaced the injured John Brodie last season and kept the 49ers on the high road to a division title. But when Brodie returned, he started again.

Spurrier, the ex-Heisman Trophy winner from Florida, wants to be number one this season and he thinks a big night tonight will help.

As for the Jets, coach Weeb Ewbank will go with Joe Namath at quarterback, but without two other key performers.

Ewbank announced Thursday that holdouts Emerson Boozer and Winston Hill had been suspended, did not accompany the team to Florida, and would not be allowed to practice with the team next week. Both players refused to perform in last week's game against Houston despite being bound by the option clause in their old agreements. The club withheld their $359.30 game checks.

They returned to practice but refused to play this week after consulting with legal counsel. The issue seems headed for the commissioner's office.

The 49ers also plan to play for the first time a key man in their 1973 plans. Wide receiver Terry Beasley, the team's top draft choice out of Auburn last year but mostly injured since then, won't start but should see some action.

Raider Coach Glad To Confront Dallas

OAKLAND (UPI) — John Madden, the Oakland Raiders' coach, is tickled to death his club will be meeting the powerful Dallas Cowboys in an exhibition game at the Coliseum tonight at 8 o'clock.

Usually, playing the Cowboys any time can be a trying proposition, but Madden doesn't feel that way about tonight's game.

"The Cowboys do so many things so well," said Madden, "that I wouldn't mind playing them every week in the preseason games. It will give our staff a chance to see what our younger players can do against what I consider one of the best teams in the NFL."

Unlike some other coaches, Madden doesn't concern him-

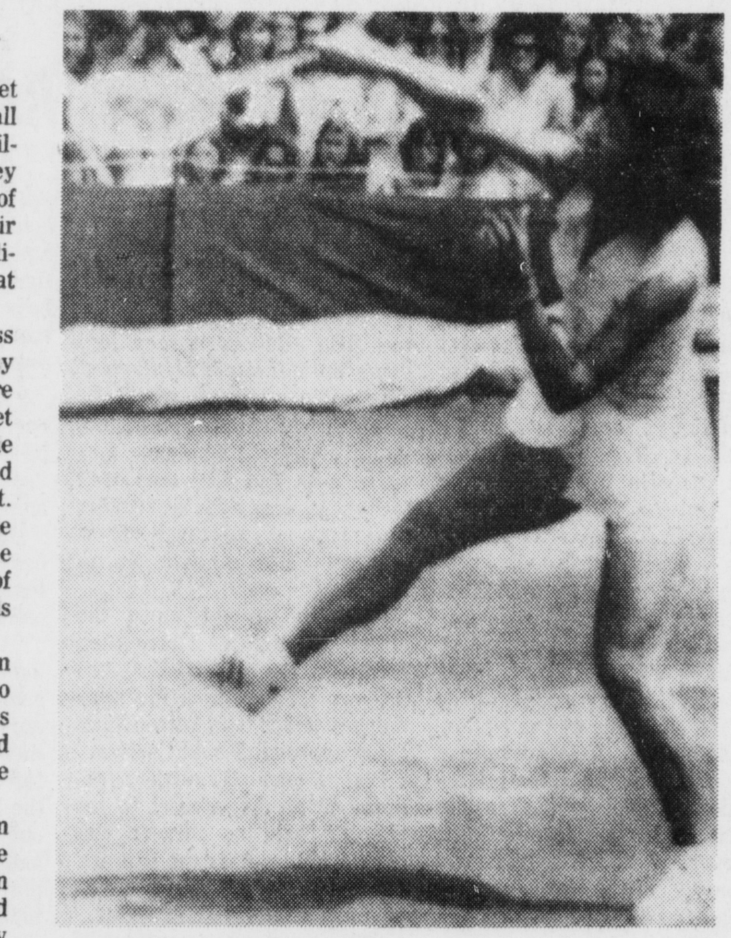
Billie Jean Laments: Tennis Isn't Understood

By PHIL ELDERKIN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service



STRONG RETURN — Professional tennis star Billie Jean King of Hilton Head, S.C., a strong advocate in women's professional tennis, returned a shot en route to her Wimbledon tennis championships title in July. (UPI Telephoto)

"I was at a sports banquet recently with some pro football players," said tennis great Billie Jean King. "And when they started talking about some of the technical things in their game, everybody in the audience understood exactly what they meant.

"But if I tried to discuss where to return one of my opponent's shots with the score 30-40 against me, all I'd get would be blank stares," she continued. "Nobody would know what I was talking about. Even though tennis has made tremendous progress in the past few years, not enough of the public really understands the game."

The fact is until 1968, when amateurs were first allowed to compete against professionals in open tournaments, tennis had not really had an explosive growth year with the public.

"But when people began reading about the size of the prize money being offered in those open tournaments and then saw how well everybody played on TV, they couldn't believe it," Mrs. King said.

"By the end of the season all sorts of people were tapping me on the shoulder in airplanes and telling me how much they liked women's tennis. They'd say things like: 'I watched you girls on television and you're doing a terrific job' or 'I never knew anybody could make so much money playing tennis.'

"But to me, that was only part of it," she continued. "For the first time in my life people were talking about Billie Jean King as an athlete and a personality and not just a woman."

This was also the time Billie thinks that she and her friends finally broke the image that all women who play tennis well aren't feminine, aren't fashion conscious, and aren't good cooks.

"The whole thing was pretty ridiculous," Mrs. King explained. "When people talk about male athletes, they don't ask how handsome they are. They want to know things like — can he block, can he tackle, can he hit a forehand under pressure? But cuteness was always the big thing with us. Well, now people are starting to ask sensible questions about women players.

"I'm all for these new kids, like Chris Evert and Evonne Goolagong, who have come in and helped the game. I think they're great. Strong personalities are always desirable in pro sports.

"But I'm definitely in the minority with my fellow players on the subject of yelling at tennis matches. I say let the crowd roar if a good shot turns them on. After all, without paying customers you've got no pro sports.

"Yelling wouldn't bother my concentration, but some of the others think it would bother theirs. But, as I've told them, they'd adjust to it."

When did Billie Jean King feel she became the complete tennis player?

"I can't remember the year, but it was when I gained total awareness of myself and my game," she replied. "You have to understand yourself and know when to let off steam on the court and when to keep quiet.

"One of the things I had to teach myself early was to stick to basic tennis," she continued. "I've always been an experimenter. I like to try different spins and make impossible shots.

"This has always made me feel great. But it's no way to win tennis matches against someone just as experienced as you are, so I've had to discipline myself to almost always play the percentage when it's there."

What is Billie Jean's routine on the day of a match?

"Well, if I'm scheduled to play at one in the afternoon, I'm generally up by 8 a.m.," Mrs. King replied. "And getting up in the morning is no easy thing for me. I'm just one of those people who can't get started before 10.

"Then there are the routine things — shower, breakfast, etc. About two to three hours before I play, I go out on the court and hit for 45 minutes to an hour. And I mean I really work at it. After that I try to get away for an hour or so by myself either to nap, relax or read."

Mrs. King also makes it a point to never underestimate an opponent.

"As far as I'm concerned," she said, "my opponent is always the greatest athlete in the world on the day I'm playing her. I believe in psyching myself up for a match and this is the best way I've found to do it."

Nicklaus Better Prepared For PGA

By MIKE HUGHES
Executive Sports Editor

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus, getting the breaks for the first time in a major event this year, loomed as the potential winner as the wideopen Professional Golfers' Association championship entered its third round today.

Nicklaus stood poised for the kill with a 36-hole score of 140, where he was joined by Gibby Gilbert and Dan Sikes, one stroke back of longshots Mason Rudolph and Don Iverson.

Before play started Thursday over the rolling, tree-lined 6,852-yard, par 71, Canterbury Golf Club, Nicklaus said: "I feel better prepared than I was for the U.S. and British Opens." He kept his game under control Friday in shooting a three-under-par 68 which included three birdies and no bogeys.

The 33-year-old Columbus, Ohio, millionaire, who became a golfing legend early in his brilliant career, said Friday, "I could have shot a very low round. I had a lot of good opportunities to get the ball in.

"But golf is a game of patience. If you don't have patience you keep missing putts, and all of a sudden you shoot 75."

He lost his patience at the Masters and U.S. and British Opens when he came up with morale-shattering rounds of 77, 74 and 76 to drop out of contention. Yet he charged so hard in the final rounds he ended with a third and two fourth place finishes.

If Nicklaus can keep it together for another two rounds to win the title Sunday, he probably will pencil in Friday's 12th hole as the turning point.

His drive at the par-4, 372-yard hole ran through the fairway into the rough before stopping at the base of a buried tree stump. He didn't know what he was hitting when he swung, but although the ball barely flew out, it cleared a trap, rolled 30 feet and came to rest four feet from the cup for a makeable birdie. There was no way he should have had a birdie.

Should Nicklaus blow it over

AFTER TOPPING GIANTS

Met's Seaver Says: 'I've Pitched Better Games'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — It wasn't one of Tom Seaver's better games, but the way the San Francisco Giants are playing these days it was good enough.

Seaver gave up eight hits and walked two batters Friday night and his infield did its best to give the game away, but Tom got tough when he had to in pitching the New York Mets to a 7-1 victory over the bedraggled Giants.

Seaver struck out seven batters for a season total of 175 and in the process reduced his earned run average to 1.85. Both the strikeout total and the ERA are tops in the National League. Seaver's latest triumph was his 14th compared to six losses, but better still it put the Mets, still last in the NL East, only seven and one-half games out of first.

Seaver agreed it wasn't a performance with which he was thoroughly satisfied, although he did get big men out in key situations. What pleased him is that it helped the Mets shave off another game in their late drive to get out of the cellar and back into the race.

"I've pitched better games," said Seaver, "but when you get down to this part of the season all that counts is winning. In that we won I'm satisfied."

Seaver also contributed a two-run double to the 12-hit attack that saddled Juan Marichal with his eighth loss in 17 decisions. An error by Tito Fuentes on a smash to second by Rusty Staub after two outs opened the gates in the fifth for four unearned New York runs.

Marichal, obviously upset at the miscue, gave up back-to-back singles to John Milner and Cleon Jones for one run and Wayne Garrett finished things off with his eighth homer for three more.

Seaver lost his shutout in the fifth on a walk to Gary Thomasson, a single by Fuentes and a sacrifice fly by Bobby Bonds.

Yogi Berra, the Mets skipper was upset at the way his infield kicked the ball around but had nothing but admiration for Seaver for the way he extricated himself out of trouble. The Giants had men on base off Seaver in every inning, but the seventh and eighth and twice had the bases loaded but Tom worked his way free.

"That's the sign of a good pitcher," said Berra. "He got tough instead of folding."

Charlie Fox, the Giants skipper, echoed Berra.

"No question," said Fox, "he's a great pitcher. He didn't let the mistakes behind him upset him. He just leaned back and threw a little harder."

The Mets and Giants continue their series today with George Stone (7-3) pitching for New York against Tom Bradley (9-11).

See Giants' box score on inside page.

Catchers Wrecking A's Hopes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American League is blessed with many outstanding catchers these days—and they all seem to be bent on wrecking the hopes of the Oakland A's.

After Bill Freehan of Detroit all but singlehandledly beat Oakland Wednesday night, Thurmon Munson of the Yankees belted a three-run homer and a run-scoring bunt single to lead the Yanks to the hectic 10-9 win Friday night before nearly 30,000.

It was a key loss for Oakland, which fell two back of red-hot Kansas City in the American League West. Hard-throwing Vida Blue (11-7) battled control artist Mel Stottlemyre in today's Yankee Stadium confrontation and then Oakland must head for Boston Sunday where another fine receiver, Carlton Fisk, will presumably be waiting to do the A's dirt.

Although Munson's belting ul-

Volatile Reggie Leaves Red Sox

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Boston Red Sox can't seem to relegate their fighting to the ballfield.

The Red Sox, whose internal problems over the years have become legendary, have had more than their share of player personality differences this season, and now a new crisis has arisen in the presence of tempestuous Reggie Smith.

Smith, a talented but temperamental outfielder, pulled a disappearing act on the Red Sox in the second inning of a game with the California Angels Friday night after getting into a run-in with the crowd at Boston's Fenway Park.

Smith was roundly booed by the fans when he failed to run out a double play ball in the first inning and was booed again in the top of the second when a pop fly fell in front of him in centerfield for a hit.

As he returned to the dugout in the middle of the inning he doffed his cap mockingly to the fans then threw it into the dugout. He then walked straight to the clubhouse, got dressed and left the park. His walkout helped contribute to a costly 5-3 defeat, which dropped the Red Sox 2 ½ games behind first place Detroit in the American League East.

"He went home. Smith walked out with permission," said Red Sox manager Eddie Kasko. "I don't know if he said anything to anybody. He didn't say anything to me. I don't know what action we'll take. I don't know if it'll be a suspension, or what. I'll have to talk it over with (Red Sox' general manager) Dick O'Connell."

Smith, who is second on the team in batting with a .291 average, has missed about 20 games this season with various ailments and has been involved in several squabbles with teammates. He was the subject of trade talks last winter but O'Connell was unable to deal him.

His replacement in Friday night's game, Dwight Evans, came through with a solo homer but was shaken up in the sixth inning while trying to make a shoestring catch in short right. Orlando Cepeda also had a two-run homer for Boston, but Frank Robinson drove in three runs for the Angels with his 20th homer and a single.

In other AL games, New York edged Oakland 10-9, Kansas City nipped Baltimore 2-1, Detroit beat Chicago 7-3, Milwaukee downed Minnesota 5-1 and Cleveland topped Texas 8-1.

Hal McRae and Lou Piniella hit fifth inning homers to pace the Royals' to their 10th triumph in 12 games. The triumph, coupled with Oakland's loss, boosted the Royals' lead to two games in the AL West Division.

Gates Brown hit a three-run homer and Al Kaline followed with a bases empty blast in the fourth inning to power the Tigers past the White Sox. Fred Scherman allowed only four hits in 8 1-3 innings of relief for Detroit to gain his first victory of the year.

George Scott's two-run homer triggered a five-run fourth inning that enabled the Brewers to defeat the Twins. Billy Champion worked six innings of relief, allowing only four hits, to gain the victory.

Gaylord Perry tossed a six-hitter for his 12th victory in leading the Indians over the Rangers. The Indians benefitted from five errors to defeat 18- year-old David Clyde, who dropped his fourth game in seven decisions. Walt Williams homered for Cleveland while Jeff Burroughs hit his 19th homer for Texas.

Trying Times For Cardinal Manager

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

"Can't anybody here play this game?" is an old Casey Stengel line but you couldn't blame Red Schoendienst for using it one of these days.

Schoendienst, the patient Cardinal manager, is having his patience tried again.

The Cards, who lost 20 of their first 25 games this season but then played at a torrid 56-30 pace to take a five game lead in the National League's Eastern Division, now seem to be in another slump. They lost their fifth straight game Friday night by an 8-4 margin to the Cincinnati Reds.

The only consolation for the Cards is that their closest rivals—the Expos, Pirates and Cubs—keep losing and their lead is four games.

But if the Cards keep kicking the ball around the way they're doing now, they can't expect the margin to last.

They've made nine errors in the five games. They started the streak on Monday night when they lost to the Mets by a 10-3 margin while making three errors and misplaying four other playable balls into Met hits.

Against the Reds Friday night, they had a 2-0 lead for four innings before their defense fell apart again. Mike Tyson made an error and third baseman Ken Reitz failed to come up with two other balls as the Reds scored four runs in the fifth. In the eighth inning, the Reds wrapped it up with four more runs as Joe Torre and Lou Brock both made errors.

While the Cards are having problems, the Reds have won six of their last seven games to move within 2 1-2 games of Los Angeles in the Western Division.

Joe Morgan started the Reds' fifth inning rally with a single. After Dan Driessen walked, Tony Perez hit a bouncer off Reitz for a run-scoring single. Johnny Bench then hit a liner that Reitz couldn't hanle for another run-scoring hit. Bobby Tolan followed with a bouncer to Torre at first but the throw to second was dropped by Tyson. Geronimo's sacrifice fly and Darrell Chaney's single scored the final two runs.

In the eighth inning, Bench walked and advanced to second when Torre's throw on Tolan's grounder hit Bench in the back. After a sacrifice and an intentional walk, Phil Gagliano hit a two-run single and the third run scored when Brock misplayed the ball. Pete Rose then singled in the final run.

In other games, Philadelphia beat Los Angeles 5-3, Houston downed Chicago 6-4, Atlanta edged Pittsburgh 5-4, New York routed San Francisco 7-1 and San Diego beat Montreal 4-3.

Pittsburgh blew a chance to gain on St. Louis when it lost to Atlanta. Frank Tepedino and Marty Perez hit run-scoring singles in the ninth inning to boost Atlanta's lead to 5-2 and offset two Pirate runs in the last of the ninth. Phil Niekro pitched a five-hitter for the triumph.

Chicago also lost a chance to gain on St. Louis when it lost to Houston. Bob Watson and Tommy Helms each collected two hits and drove in two runs for the Astros. Rookie James Rodney Richard went 5 1-3 innings to get his fourth victory.

Ditto for Montreal. The Expos lost a chance to gain on St. Louis when they lost to San Diego. Steve Arlin and Mike Caldwell combined on a seven-hitter and Fred Kendall hit a two-run homer to lift San Diego to its victory.

GET THIS THING OFF OF ME

Bill Loercher seemingly found himself with a tennis ball balancing on his nose in the Reading and Suburban Tennis Tournament in Reading, Pa. recently, but he was merely following the old sports rule of keeping your eye (and nose) on the ball. Loercher, of Manheim, Pa., won the singles title.

Redskins' Coach Smiling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George Allen was smiling again.

His Washington Redskins "managed" a 14-10 victory over the Denver Broncos Friday night, the first pre-season victory for the 1972 National Football Conference champions.

"We managed to struggle through, but I'm happy to get that win," Allen said. "We played everybody we hoped to, and we held them to one touchdown."

If Allen was smiling, Dave Robinson, the linebacker coaxed out of retirement after being acquired from Green Bay, was "estatic."

"This team is any linebacker's dream," bubbled the 11 year veteran. "I always said that when the urge to play hit me, I'd be in there. I just like to keep hitting, that's my job."

The defense that held Denver to eight first downs, two in the second half, and 10 points, was revamped since last week's 17-14 loss to the Detroit Lions. Robinson started at left linebacker in place of Steve Kiner and Ken Houston played the whole game at safety in place of the injured Rosey Taylor.

But the Redskins spotted Denver a 10-0 second quarter lead, mostly on Charley Johnson's passing, including a 33-yard pass and run play to Joe Dawkins that set up the Broncos' only touchdown, a one-yard plunge by Floyd Little.

Jim Turner added a second quarter field goal before the Redskins, powered by a 42-yard Bill Kilmer to Frank Grant pass play, scored on a one-yard run by Duane Thomas.

Grant, a rookie starting for Roy Jefferson, who is nursing a slight muscle pull, snagged five passes for 100 yards and earned a game ball.

Thomas, making his first start as a Redskin, rushed for 60 yards in 11 carries, including a 41-yard spurt on the game's third play, and caught five passes for 45 yards.

Sonny Jurgensen started the second half, his first game action since rupturing an achilles tendon Oct. 29, 1972. After shaking off the rust of two third quarter interceptions, both by rookie Lyle Blackwood, the 39-year-old veteran engineered an 86 yard drive that culminated in Bob Brunet's three yard touchdown sprint.

The Washington-Denver game kicked off the second big weekend of National Football League pre-season activity that includes 10 games tonight and one each Sunday and Monday nights.

Tonight's action finds Dallas at Oakland, Pittsburgh at Minnesota, Philadelphia at Cincinnati, New Orleans at Miami, Chicago at Houston, Cleveland at Los Angeles, Buffalo at Green Bay, Baltimore at Atlanta, St. Louis at San Diego and San Francisco meeting the New York Jets at Tampa, Fla.

New England plays host to the New York Giants Sunday night and Detroit is at Kansas City Monday night.

timately cost the A's the verdict in Friday's affair, Oakland fought back with a pair of Reggie Jackson homers and nearly pulled the win out of the fire in a tense ninth.

With Yankee fireman Sparky Lyle trying to protect a three-run lead, the A's pushed across two runs on hits by Jackson and Deron Johnson, who wound up the evening with four rbi's apiece.

Rookie Tom Buskey came in to strikeout Gene Tenace with two batters on base to nail down the final out.

Buskey is a 26-year-old reliever just called up from Syracuse who doesn't lack for confidence.

"I thought I should have had a shot before this," he said after the game while manager Ralph Houk of the Yanks said that Syracuse manager Bobby Cox told him that Buskey "ain't scared of nothing. He won't beat himself. He showed me a lot of guts tonight."

Jackson's two homers gave him 26 for the year while Johnson hit number 15 and Campy Campaneris his third. For the Yanks, Munson had 16 and Roy White number 12 for the Yanks and Ron Blomberg his ninth.

Way Cleared For Pro Cage Merger

NEW YORK (UPI) — Earl Monroe goes one-on-one against —Julius Erving? Yes, if Bob Carlson has his way.

Commissioner Carlson of the American Basketball Association revealed Friday that the two major pro basketball leagues have been authorized by a federal court to seek a new merger agreement without Congressional approval.

Carlson said ABA attorneys obtained an order from Judge Robert L. Carter permitting "representatives of the National Basketball Association and the American Basketball Association to meet for the purpose of discussing and negotitating a merger, without Congressional approval, of the two basketball leagues or any of their member teams."

Commissioner Walter Kennedy of the NBA would not comment on the statement, although Carlson said NBA attorneys have received copies of the order.

Carlson stated that "the Federal court, which previously handed out the injunction, has modified the prior order and now says a merger agreement can be reached. As long as Congress has failed to act, and if the merger seems in the best interests of the concerned parties, it will be approved."

When a merger was first proposed by the two leagues, the NBA Players Association, using the defense that players' bargaining positions would be jeopardized, obtained an injunction preventing the union.

The NBA and ABA then tried to bypass this ploy by seeking congressional approval for a merger, but met with no response.

"It now depends upon the efforts of Players Association Attorney Larry Fleisher and the two leagues to agree upon merger terms and obtain final court approval," said Carlson.

But Peter Gruenberger, member of the counsel to the players, said no merger was conceivable unless the players' counsel of record is present at all talks affecting their rights.

"The court was cognizant of this fact and so expressed it," Gruenberger said.

Gilberg Scores 27, Leads Cage Victory

Erik Gilberg scored 27 points to lead the Cardinals to a 58-56 Drake Summer League basketball victory over the Trojans Friday night at Drake High School.

In other games, Crusaders downed the Pilots 57-56, while Red and Blue trounced Gilmore Photo 46-29.

self with winning games that don't count. That's not to say he and his staff won't be trying to figure a way to beat the Cowboys. More important to them, though, is to get a good look at some of the new men.

"The Cowboys use just about every formation we are likely to see this year," said Madden, "so training to play them will help us later."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry has been known to use his regulars almost all the way in exhibitions.

"I hope he (Landry) goes a long way with his regulars," said Madden. "We won't with ours. We'll get the veterans in there for some sequences but for the most part we'll go with the kids. Now is the time to find out if they can play. Before long we'll have to cut 11 more players and it would be unfair to the younger men if we cut them without getting a chance to see them in action. That's what the exhibitions are for."

Finley Remains Hospitalized

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

CHICAGO — Oakland Athletics' owner Charles O. Finley, admitted to the passavant pavilion of the Northwestern Memorial Hospital here Tuesday night after suffering "episodes of chest pains" in his Chicago office, remained hospitalized for observation today.

Finley, 55, who also owns the National Hockey League California Seals, was in good condition but was being kept in the hospital for observation, a hospital spokesman said. Friends said preliminary tests indicated a mild coronary occlusion.

Football

NEW YORK — Sid Gillman, the general manager of the Houston Oilers, has been put on "probation" by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle but the action is strictly routine unless Gillman fails to maintain the "highest standards of conduct" in the future.

Rozelle spoke with Gillman after players testified in the Houston Ridge case that Gillman had ordered them to take illegal drugs when he was a coach and general manager with the San Diego Chargers. Gillman is now the GM of the Oilers.

Ridge is a former Charger who settled out of court for more than $260,000 after he charged that improper use of drugs compounded an injury that ended his football career.

Basketball

HOUSTON — Larry Siegfried, a nine-year veteran of the National Basketball Association, Friday was named assistant coach of the Houston Rockets.

Siegfried, 34, a former Boston Celtic, played on five championship Celtic teams and spent half the 1971-72 season as a Rocket.

Golf

WADSWORTH, Ill. — Debbie Austin, never a pro winner, took a special golf lesson two weeks ago and wound up Friday with a three-under-par 70 at Midlane Country Club to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the $30,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Child and Family Services open. Trailing her with 71 was Sharon Miller, also seeking her first win.

Palacio Is 'Playing Very Well Today'

(First in a series)

Mat Palacio Jr. of Marin Country Club in Novato is "playing very well today," and that may prove to be bad news for his opponents in the Marin County Men's Tournament of Champions golf Sunday, Aug. 19 at 8 a.m. at Indian Valley Golf Club.

The two-handicapper won the only previous Champs Tourney he entered — in 1971 at Peacock Gap. The 1936 California State Amateur champion is determined to be two for two in Champs Tourney play.

However, he will receive stiff competition from five others in the seventh annual event. He faces: Jack Sterley, Peacock Gap; Al Randig, Indian Valley; Roy Hruska, San Geronimo National; Byron Eggleston, Mill Valley; and George Frazer, Meadow Club.

Palacio tabs Frazer as the logical favorite. "I've played with Frazier and I know what he can do. He plays my kind of game; he hits the ball down the middle."

Palacio believes the Indian Valley course will be a challenge. "It's a thinking man's course. There are many out of bounds places up there. There are all kinds of holes, flat holes and hilly holes. You've got to use many types of shots. And you have to make them."

The San Francisco car salesman states that his pin-point type game will be well suited for the demanding Indian Valley course.

The two-time Marin Country Club champion also dominates play at Sonoma National Golf Club where he has won the club title nine times since learning to play golf in Sonoma in 1932.

"Sam Snead says that Sonoma is one of the finest designed golf courses around. I agree. And I model myself after him. I'm a hand-swinger like him. I try to finesse shots."

And if Palacio can duplicate Snead's winning ways Aug. 19, Palacio could become the first two-time winner in the men's tournament of Champions.

the next two rounds, then there are three other recent champions handily placed to take up the challenge, while there are altogether 12 men within three strokes of the co-leaders.

Tom Weiskopf, the hottest player on the tour currently and recent British Open winner, former U.S. and British Open titleholder Tony Jacklin, and Dave Stockton, the 1970 PGA winner, were grouped together at 141.

Stockton shot a 69 Friday while Jacklin and Weiskopf had 71s.

Weiskopf and Jacklin both had up-and-down rounds. Weiskopf said he had no luck the first two days when he found the rough seven times and blamed "poor putting" for his ills, while Jacklin failed to make makeable putts.

But Stockton played flawlessly. He had 16 pars and picked up birds at the seventh and 18th holes to hoist himself up the leader board.

Weiskopf certainly has not ruled himself out of the running.

"I have not got the pace of the greens. I either hit them too hard or too soft," he said. But when he won the British Open last month to break into the big-time ranks, he said he had no idea how to play Troon!

While Nicklaus may have had a break, Weiskopf complained that none had come his way during the first two rounds. "I missed the fairway seven times and seven times I made bogey. If I had saved par only three times, I'd be leading."

Sam Snead, still swinging sweetly at 61, and Lanny Wadkins were in a six-man group at even par 142. Snead, showing signs of tiredness, bogeyed the last two holes Friday.

Arnold Palmer was one man who failed to survive the cut for the first time in 16 attempts to win the PGA, the only major title to have eluded him. But he took his failure gallantly, blamed "ridiculous putting" for his woes, which totalled 150, and left to watch the finale on television.

The cut was made at 149 leaving 76 players to battle for the top prize of $45,000.

A gallery of 15,760 paid spectators watched play Friday on an overcast, humid day during which scores were lower than on the opening day.

8 Double Winners In Track

Eight youngsters each won two events in the San Rafael Junior Olympics Friday at San Rafael High School.

In the 6-8 year-old competition, Jana Lee of San Pedro School was the lone double winner. She won the standing broad jump (4-feet-9) and the 75-yard dash (12.5).

There were three twin victors in the 9-10 year-old class. Rosiland Bryant of Bret Harte School took the girl's softball throw (117-4) and the 50-yard dash (7.5); Cortney Helms of Albert Park School won the boys' running broad jump (11-9) and the 440-yard dash (1:17.7); and Phil Berardi of Sun Valley School won the boys' softball throw (154-8) and the 50-yard dash (7.9).

In the 11-12 year old bracket, four youngsters won two events each. Eileen Brennan of Victor Jones School took the girls' running broad jump (11-8) and the 50-yard dash (7.1); John Noguchi of Oliver Hartzell School won the boys' running broad jump (14-6) and the 50-yard dash (6.9); Tangee Johnson of John Mac Phail School took the girls' softball throw (193-10) and the 100-yard dash; and Ivan Ladizinski of Don Timoteo School won the boys' softball throw (180) and the 100-yard dash.

TIME MACHINE

LeBaron, All-Stars Beat Eagles, 17-7

CHICAGO — The Korean battlefield news occupies the front page of most American newspapers on Aug. 11, 1950.

On the sports page there are reports that Sugar Ray Robinson is asking for a shot at Jake LaMotta's middleweight boxing crown.

The National League standings show the "Whiz Kids" from Philadelphia still setting a torrid pace and leading the Boston Braves by five games.

But it's not Korea, boxing or the phenomenal Phillies that's on the minds of the 88,855 fans here tonight at Soldiers Field in Chicago.

They've come to see if the best collegiate football players from the 1949 season can figure out a way to beat the world champion Philadelphia Eagles in the 17th annual College All-Star game.

The chances of that happening aren't too good even though the collegians have a larger than usual line anchored by Minnesota's Clayton Tonnemaker and Leon Hart from Notre Dame.

In the opening minutes, Eddie LeBaron, a 5-foot-8, 165-pound quarterback from College of the Pacific, dazzles the Eagles and this huge crowd with a ball handling exhibition they will never forget.

Working like a magician, LeBaron effectively calls on the break-away ability of another unexpected starter, Charlie "Choo-Choo" Justice, and guides the All-Stars on a 54-yard drive to a quick first period touchdown.

The All-Star defense stymies the potent Philadelphia attack long enough for LeBaron to strike again in the second quarter. He hits Justice at the Eagle 35 with a perfect pass. "Choo-Choo" steams into the end zone for another score.

The Eagles finally score late in the game after some tough, hard-earned yardage by Steve Van Buren. But it's not enough. A field goal adds three more points to the All-Star's total. The final score indicates a stunning upset. The world champion Eagles have been defeated 17-7 by the All-Stars and their pint-sized, bag-of-tricks quarterback, Eddie LeBaron.

Hoffmann, 11, Bowls 592 At Country Club

Jeff Hoffmann didn't break 600, but the San Rafael bowler is smiling today.

Hoffmann bowled a 502 series last Saturday — a personal high —at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. He started off with a 189, and then followed with 163 and 150 — not too bad for a junior, especially when you consider Jeff is just 11 years old!

"I was really excited and scared," Jeff said.

Jeff, who attends Oliver Hartzell Elementary School in San Rafael, learned the game from his mother, Beatrice, six years ago. Since then, he has been bowling in the junior league every Saturday at Country Club Bowl. Bea is one of Marin's top distaff keglers.

The 4-foot-9, sixth-grader bowled a 198 when he was 10 years old for his personal high game.

ED HENRY of San Rafael is 20th in the Masters Tournament qualifying of the 28th California Men's Bowling Tournament at Holiday Bowl in Hayward. Henry has 1,219 in the tournament, which ends Aug. 26.

BETTY CALAWAY and Ken Brown of Hamilton Air Force Base are the Division B leaders at the ninth annual California Junior Bowling Association state championships at 1,380.

COOKIE BAER

Defending Champion Says Golf Tourney Win 'Lucky'

(Second in a series)

"I was just lucky last year," claims defending Marin County Women's Tournament of Champions golf queen Cookie Baer.

Mrs. Baer, a 14-handicapper, is the six-time champion of Peacock Gap and will be representing her course Friday at 9 a.m. at Marin Country Club in Novato.

Going into her fifth Champs Tourney, Mrs. Baer states that; "I don't have much of a chance, but I'll certainly be trying. I'm just hoping for the best."

Her opponents in the sixth annual, 18-hole event will be: Laura Cann, Meadow Club near Fairfax; Terry Nichols, Mill Valley Municipal; Nancy Gapinski, San Geronimo National Golf Club; Tillie Gondak, Marin Country Club; and Virginia May, Indian Valley.

In assessing her rivals' abilities, Mrs. Baer believes she will need a little luck this year, too. "You have to have a little luck in anything. I'm not likely to win it again this year. But you never know."

In preparation for her title defense, Mrs. Baer has been playing golf about two to three times a week.

"I played over my head last year, while the other ladies weren't at their best. This year, well. . ."

Mrs. Baer, whose husband Harold is a San Francisco real estate broker, has three children: Hal, 25, Carol, 23 and Janet, 21.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Soaring Interest Rates Hurt Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — Against a gloomy background of soaring interest rates stocks tumbled for the second week in a row in sluggish trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average cracked through the 900 level at week's end, closing 16.49 lower at 892.38, its lowest level in a month. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index fell 1.72 to 104.77. The NYSE index declined 0.95 to 55.84.

The list took a beating, with 1,283 declines, against 480 advances, among 1,962 issues traded.

The trading tone remained cautious, with little in the news to inspire much interest in stocks. Turnover for the week totaled 62,029,790 shares, compared with 60,265,908 a week earlier, and 75,350,142 a year earlier. Many analysts said a slowing in the action is typical for this time of year.

There was talk, too, that the Federal Reserve's 7 per cent discount rate—the interest it charges on loans to member banks—soon would shoot higher. Key members of the Nixon administration believe the economy must cool down, and one traditional means to that end is higher interest rates, starting with increases in the Fed's discount rate.

Following Friday's increase in the prime rate, Treasury Secretary George Shultz called the 9¼ per cent rate a "desirable" short-term measure in cooling the economy. With a prominent Nixon economic adviser on record applauding the new prime rate, a general increase by the nation's banks was virtually guaranteed.

Investors in stocks could only be gloomy about the higher rate, however. Many tied Friday's rise in the prime to a general climb in money rates and bond yields that now stand at historically high levels. Analysts have expressed the fear for some time that common stocks, in general, will be finding it difficult to compete with debt instruments, like commercial paper, which promise returns of more than 10 per cent, or bonds that yield 8 per cent or more.

"It's very difficult," said Ronald Cooper of W.E. Hutton, "to envision a sustained market rally with double-A bonds yielding 8.50, and short-term money rates 10 per cent or more. A lot of the money that might be finding its way into stocks is looking for other havens."

Utility issues, in particular, have felt the effects of soaring interest rates, since utility companies traditionally are among the nation's largest borrowers.

Translated into day-to-day market performance, the list suffered this week from lack of buying interest, which led to widespread declines and light volume.

Archer-Daniels-Midland, the nation's largest domestic soybean processor, rose 4⅞. Early in the week, it announced plans for a 100 per cent stock dividend.

Question Of Holy Spots In Jerusalem

By FRANCIS OFNER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

JERUSALEM — More than a quarter of the over 300,000 inhabitants of this city hold the citizenship of an enemy state, yet move freely in both Israel and Jordan.

The Jordanian part of Jerusalem has been declared by the Knesset (Parliament) to be part of the Israeli Jerusalem; yet the area has not been formally annexed by Israel.

The most sacred site for the Jewish religion, the Temple Mount, lies in the old city of Jerusalem. Yet Israeli police arrest any Jewish worshipers there because the clergy of the nearby Muslim shrine feel offended.

These are some of the contradictions that mark daily life in a city that already is unique as the cradle of Christianity, the center of Judaism, and the third-holiest site of Islam.

It was the religious aspect, with its international political implications, that worried the Israelis most after they had taken Jerusalem in bitter fighting in 1967. A few days later, Prime Minister Levi Eshkol called the heads of all religious communities together and promised them Israel would guarantee freedom of access to the holy places.

In the same year this guarantee was given the form of a law that makes the denial of free access to a holy place a punishable offense.

Many complaints have been raised against the Israeli administration of Jerusalem, but none has concerned the holy places. If anything, they have been made more secure.

Representatives of the major non-Protestant churches have set up a coordinating committee for the holy places to adjust differences between them. The committee is recognized by the Israeli Government.

The Vatican has, it seems, shelved the idea of internationalizing Jerusalem. At the conclusion of the audience Pope Paul VI gave Prime Minister Golda Meir earlier this year, he drew her attention to the fact that he had not mentioned the word "internationalization" even once.

Most of the complaints that have been raised against the Israeli administration of united Jerusalem concern the large-scale building program undertaken on some of the hills surrounding the city.

Since 1967, construction of 25,000 housing units has been begun or completed on nine major sites.

A little less than half of these apartments are part of public housing projects for which a total of 4,000 acres had to be expropriated when the owners refused to sell. They all received financial compensation. Part of the land — 30 percent, according to official figures — was taken from Jewish owners. However, apart from the Jewish quarter of the Old City, care was taken to avoid as far as possible inhabited land, farmland, or church property.

The situation was different in the Jewish quarter of the Old City of Jerusalem, from which the Jews had been driven out by Jordanian legionnaires in the war of 1948. Under the Jordanians, Arabs were encouraged to settle in the Jewish quarter, and 4,000 did so. The Israelis regarded them as squatters and moved them out to make the reconstruction of the quarter possible. All the evacuees received alternative accommodation, however, officials here have stated.

Most of the new housing projects are being built for the city's Jewish population, which has grown from 195,000 in 1967 to 224,000 today. Israelis do not deny that they want to strengthen the Jewish character of Jerusalem — it has had a Jewish majority since the end of the previous century.

Meanwhile, the Arab population of Jerusalem, which had been decreasing under the Jordanian regime as a result of emigration, has grown from 66,000 in 1967 to 80,000.

Arab emigration from Jerusalem has practically stopped and, municipal officials believe, there is in fact some immigration as a result of a reunion-of-families plan.

A major factor in improving the atmosphere here is the mayor of this city, Teddy Kollek. The Vienna-born Israeli is a staunch believer in coexistence of Israelis and Arabs.

The administration claims a proud record: It has broadened welfare, added 20 playgrounds and five libraries, tripled the acreage of public gardens, and has built 10 sports grounds and a sports center with a football field.

Recently, the Arabs of Jerusalem have been receiving one of the more doubtful benefits of Israeli administration. They have to pay the full amount of municipal taxes.

They had been given five years of adjustment, beginning with 20 percent of regular rates and jumping by another 20 percent every year. A city spokesman said: "Where taxes are concerned, they act just like the Jews. They don't like them."

A SACRED PLACE — This ancient house of worship — the Dome of the Rock — in Jerusalem is considered one of the most holy places in the walled city. Since 1967, denial to free access to a holy place has been punishable by law, but there are still some "gray" areas.

Jesus Revolution To Be Discussed

A talk on the current Jesus Revolution in Berkeley will be held by Hubert Lindsey at the Church of the Open Door Sunday night.

Reverend Lindsey is an ordained Baptist minister who can recall leading hundreds of young drug addicts and revolutionaries into the Christian faith. He's written a book about his experiences as a campus evangelist titled, "Bless Your Dirty Heart." In his eight years in Berkeley students have affectionately dubbed him 'Holy Hubert,' he said.

The program is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the church at Scout Hall, 177 East Blithedale, Mill Valley. Reverend Lindsey will give his talk as a sermon titled "With Christ On the Campus."

Deacon Made Priest Unexpectedly At 84

BOULDER, COLO. (AP) — When Francis Wolle was made a perpetual deacon of his Episcopal church almost a decade ago, he thought his religious ministry was fulfilled. Now, at the age of 84, he has been ordained a priest.

"I'm extremely pleased and gratified and I hope I can live up to such a high calling," said Father Wolle after celebrating his first Mass.

Bishop William C. Frey, who was once a student of Wolle's at the University of Colorado, said he believes the retired English professor is the oldest man ever to be ordained.

Father Wolle is assigned as an assistant at his own parish, St. Aidan's, and will continue his work in visiting hospitals and nursing homes and making house calls, says his pastor, the Rev. A. B. Patterson.

"Father Wolle has a beautiful ministry to the people in hospitals and nursing homes which can be helped by his ability to celebrate the Eucharist and minister in a priestly fashion," said Father Patterson.

"My being able to administer Communion will make a difference to them," agreed Father Wolle, who also plans to preach one sermon or more each month in his parish.

Father Wolle said the bishop's offer of ordination came as a surprise because he is so far past the Church's retirement age.

"I was overcome with awe and joy at such an idea, which hadn't occurred to me at all. I was very stunned at first and then gradually accepted it."

The elderly priest had taken all the required canonical examinations before being made a deacon 13 years ago and done "marvelously" in them, said Father Patterson.

Father Wolle said his interest in church work really only began after he retired from the university.

Before that, "I was one of those awful people who went to church only on Christmas and Easter."

What does his wife think about him being a priest?

"She likes everything about it but the clothes," he said. "Being an artist, she likes colors and doesn't like to see me in black.

Vacation Bible School Slated

With emphasis on reaching out to Jesus, the annual vacation Bible school of the First Baptist Church of San Rafael will open Aug. 13.

The schedule will include Bible study, games, handicrafts, arts, field trips and refreshments. The classes are offered free to children, aged 3 to 15.

Sammy J. Pitts is the director and Carl Blankenship is the school grandfather. Pastor of the church is Rev. Barret M. Lampp.

Film On Russian Jewry Is Set

A San Rafael church will present a film Sunday depicting the persecution of Christians in the Soviet Union. The First Assembly of God will show a Russian propaganda film first, then a film that they say proves the Soviet film a lie.

Showing will be at 6 p.m. at the church at 1695 Grand Ave., San Rafael.

MAJOR RELIGIONS

The Descendants From The Puritans

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

Two major American denominations are—in the phrase dear to society writers' hearts—"descended from the Puritans."

They are the United Church of Christ and the Unitarian Universalist Association.

As every schoolboy had better know if he expects to pass history, the first Puritans —a separatist group known as Pilgrims—arrived in America in 1620, landing at Plymouth Rock.

They crossed the dangerous Atlantic in a frail 180-ton ship called the Mayflower because they considered the perils of the voyage—and of establishing a new colony on a strange continent—were preferable to living in England, where they were being subjected to severe religious persecution.

Their movement had originated within the Church of England in the 16th Century. They were called "Puritans" because they wanted to "purify" the established English church of "papalistic" survivals of its Roman Catholic heritage, such as kneeling at communion, using the sign of the cross, and observance of holy days. They also took a dim view of bishops.

Instead of tolerating these non-conformist views, King James I, a notoriously pigheaded man even by the standards of British royalty, launched a ruthless persecution of Puritans. Many of them fled for safety to Protestant Holland. Some after 1620 an ever increasing stream—immigrated to America.

Although they came seeking religious freedom for themselves, they were not disposed to grant it to others. They refused to allow Jews or Catholics to settle in their communities, and granted only intermittent and grudging toleration to other Protestant sects.

By the time of the American Revolution, they were not only the dominant but virtually the only religious body in New England, with the exception of Rhode Island, where Baptists under Roger Williams had established a haven of tolerance for people of all faiths.

The Puritans were stern, hardy people, full of religious zeal that not infrequently lapped over into fanatical acts such as "witch" burning. In theology, they took their cue from Geneva's dour reformer, John Calvin.

In their eagerness to purge all remnants of "papalism" from their churches, they adopted a severely simple form of worship, built around scripture readings and marathon sermons that often lasted for two hours or more. Functionaries were appointed and armed with long rods to awaken, with taps on the head, any hapless child who fell asleep during one of these long-winded orations.

Although their Calvinist asceticism demanded simplicity in church architecture, their conscience found no offense in tall steeples because, it was felt, they pointed skyward to honor God. This little quirk of attitude has been a notable blessing to America, for it yielded some of the most beautiful buildings in the land, the high-steepled colonial churches of New England villages.

Congregationalism placed its stamp on American history in many other ways. Many of the founding fathers were Congregationalists, and their insistence on democracy in political government directly reflects their tradition of church government. Congregationalists also were great founders of schools and colleges, creating among others such renowned institutions as Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Williams, Amherst, Oberlin, Smith, Mount Holyoke and Wellesley.

Still another Congregationalist contribution is America's unique national holiday, Thanksgiving, which stems from a Puritan adaptation of the Jewish harvest festival of Succoth.

Over the years, Congregational churches edged further and further away from the strict Calvinism of the original Puritans and became relatively liberal in theology.

But the liberalization was too little and too late for one faction of the Congregationalist family led by William Ellry Channing and Ralph Waldo Emerson. In 1819, they broke away to form a separate denomination. They called themselves "Unitarians" because they objected to the traditional "Trinitarian" concept of God held by most Christian groups.

The Unitarian movement flowered rapidly and within a few years, a large number of New England's leading Congregational churches had become Unitarian. Thomas Jefferson, who was strongly attracted to Unitarian beliefs, once predicted that within a generation all Americans would be Unitarians.

This forecast proved highly inaccurate. The movement peaked with a membership of about 200,000. But among its members were such notable figures of American history as John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, John Marshall, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Henry David Thoreau.

Although early Unitarians continued to speak of Jesus as "Our Savior," the denomination moved steadily away from classic Christian doctrines. By the start of this century, relatively few Unitarians attributed to Jesus any status other than that of a human teacher. Even belief in God became optional in Unitarian teaching, and many leading Unitarian ministers publicly proclaimed themselves atheists.

Both Congregationalists and Unitarians have in recent years entered into mergers. Most Congregationalist churches in the country merged in 1957 with the Evangelical and Reformed Church, a Calvinist body formed during the colonial era by German and Dutch immigrants to Pennsylvania. The new body is called the United Church of Christ, and has a membership of more than two million.

The United Church of Christ has been in the forefront of Protestant social action, particularly in such matters as seeking justice for Negroes, resisting the Vietnam war, and, currently, seeking amnesty for those who refused to serve in that war.

Some Congregationalist churches remained aloof from the merger and continue under the old name.

Unitarians merged in 1961 with the Universalists, a small denomination whose first congregation in America was founded at Gloucester, Mass., in 1779, under the leadership of Hosea Ballou. Their distinctive theological doctrine was insistence that God's mercy would never tolerate the eternal punishment of anyone in hell. Therefore salvation eventually would be "universal." Since the merger, the Unitarian Universalist Association has been officially creedless, and many of its adherents do not believe in a heaven for anyone, let alone everyone.

Bible School Dates Set

The First Baptist Church of Novato will offer a two-week vacation Bible school beginning Aug. 13. "Joy to the World" will be the theme of the school. Primary emphasis will be on Bible and mission study, but there will also be fellowship, recreation and Christian music. Field trips and special projects are planned.

The school is offered to children of ages 4 through junior high school. Classes will be held weekdays, 9 a.m. till noon. The school is free, but parents will be given an opportunity to contribute at a "free-will offering" on parents night, Aug. 23.

Rev. Sherman Moyer will serve as coprincipal with Mrs. John Nunn. The pastor says he expects the enrollment to be about 200. The church is located at the corner of South Novato Blvd. and Arthur St.

WILL THE REAL FRUSTRATED FARMER PLEASE STAND UP

Impeccable is a "dirty word" compared to the condition of this residence. The garden abounds with a wide variety of vegetables, the home has 2 oversized bdrms. The huge family room was a welcome addition, complete with used brick fireplace. There is a guest cottage on the premises. Oh yes! This home is on a level site & within walking distance to all modern conveniences. The price? I'll give you a hint - it's under $41,000. A brand new listing.

Changes In Yosemite — For The Better

YOSEMITE — If it has been a couple of years or more since you visited Yosemite Valley, you will be struck by the changes.

The miniskirted misses who seemed ill prepared for their jobs as forest rangers are not much in evidence now. The "old pro" rangers are back giving the slide talks and leading the nature walks. The average age of slide talk watchers and nature walkers is much lower than a few years back when only the elders were interested.

Youth is everywhere but they seem much less irresponsible and less inconsiderate of others than the hippie hordes of a couple of years ago.

The combination of rangers who seem more professional and youth who seem more mature in their behavior adds up to a striking improvement.

The systematic effort to discourage unnecessary use of automobiles in the valley seems to be working. The new model buses are a big improvement over their make-do predecessors. Now you can see out to enjoy the magnificent views. With more fresh air and fewer bathless hippies, the atmosphere inside the buses is much more pleasant.

IN AN AGE when the neighborhood store has been zoned out of existence, it is difficult for most of us to get out of the habit of jumping into a car for even the most trivial of errands. Yosemite has pointed the way; close nonessential roads and plow them under. Prohibit convenient parking and even near access to stores by autos. Install free shuttle buses which are comfortable and offer frequent service. Presto! One is surprised how quickly the car habit is broken. With auto traffic much reduced or eliminated, walking alongside the road becomes much more pleasant and inviting. So does bicycling.

It is not likely that the accommodations provided by Yosemite Park and Curry Co. will earn accolades. Around Yosemite Lodge, the sound of a vacuum cleaner is still too rare. Your room is not likely to be vacuumed daily. In fact, it is not likely to be vacuumed after the previous occupant leaves, before you move in.

You can deduce the nature of previous occupants from the dog paw prints on the sliding glass doors.

But the young people employed by the YP&C Co. do seem more friendly and eager to oblige. Some in the dining rooms show signs of having either training or prior experience, or both. This is an improvement over a couple of seasons ago. But waiting in line to eat at mealtime is the order of the day. A 10-minute wait for a table in a dining room scarcely half full tells you there has to be deficient management.

There seem to be more foreign visitors than ever before, especially Germans. Fortunately, most speak enough English to get by.

IN SPITE of wounded cries from super-conservationists, the valley is as magnificent as ever. Early August finds waterfalls unusually impressive for this time of year. This is due in part to the wet, cold winter which brought a heavier-than-normal snow pack on the high peaks. In recent days, continuing thundershowers have provided more water to replenish the falls.

After the rains the air is sparkling clear and all Yosemite is at its best. It is all as breathtaking as Ansel Adams' pictures.

—Jack Craemer

Two Million Starve

Every winter an average of two million deer reportedly starve to death. Most of these are in snow country, where the deer became confined to a limited area and were unable to find trees or shrubs on which to browse. By clearing the land and keeping the deer out, and then killing off the wolves, coyotes and pumas, the deer's natural enemies, we have caused the deer to suffer this most unnatural, lingering death. Yet, we have committed this crime with good intentions. Even in Marin some deer are poorly nourished because their numbers are too high for the limited browse.

National Park Service Solves Ticklish Law Enforcement Problem

(Reprinted from Sacramento Bee)

The National Park Service seems to have fashioned a workable handle to deal with the law enforcement problem in the nation's parks.

The "friendly but firm" approach has evolved since mounting crime rates and disturbances in the parks forced rangers into hardline police roles, climaxed by the July 4, 1970, Stoneman Meadow riot in Yosemite National Park.

THE PARK SERVICE drew sharp criticism for its handling of that episode. Yosemite rangers had called for assistance from surrounding law enforcement agencies to deal with a confrontation involving 500 to 700 persons.

In the aftermath a management team was moved into Yosemite to develop an approach which would preserve the friendly, helpful presence of the ranger while protecting the security, beauty and serenity of the park, which are the main attractions for most visitors.

The answer has consisted mainly in creating a police force within the ranger force and giving on-the-job training in law enforcement techniques to the 100-man ranger force.

The idea is, as it should be, to make the park enjoyable for the maximum number of people, to make all feel welcome but to tolerate no abuse and to deal firmly and quietly with it.

IN INSTITUTING this new approach at Yosemite, the Park Service transferred some personnel who had become associated with hard-line law enforcement.

These park officials were dealing with a new and increasingly troublesome situation as best they could — a situation for which the Park Service itself had provided little in the way of guidance.

And out of their experience, the heat they took and perhaps even the mistakes they may have made, has come a happier blending of the dual role of the park ranger.

THE NEEDLE

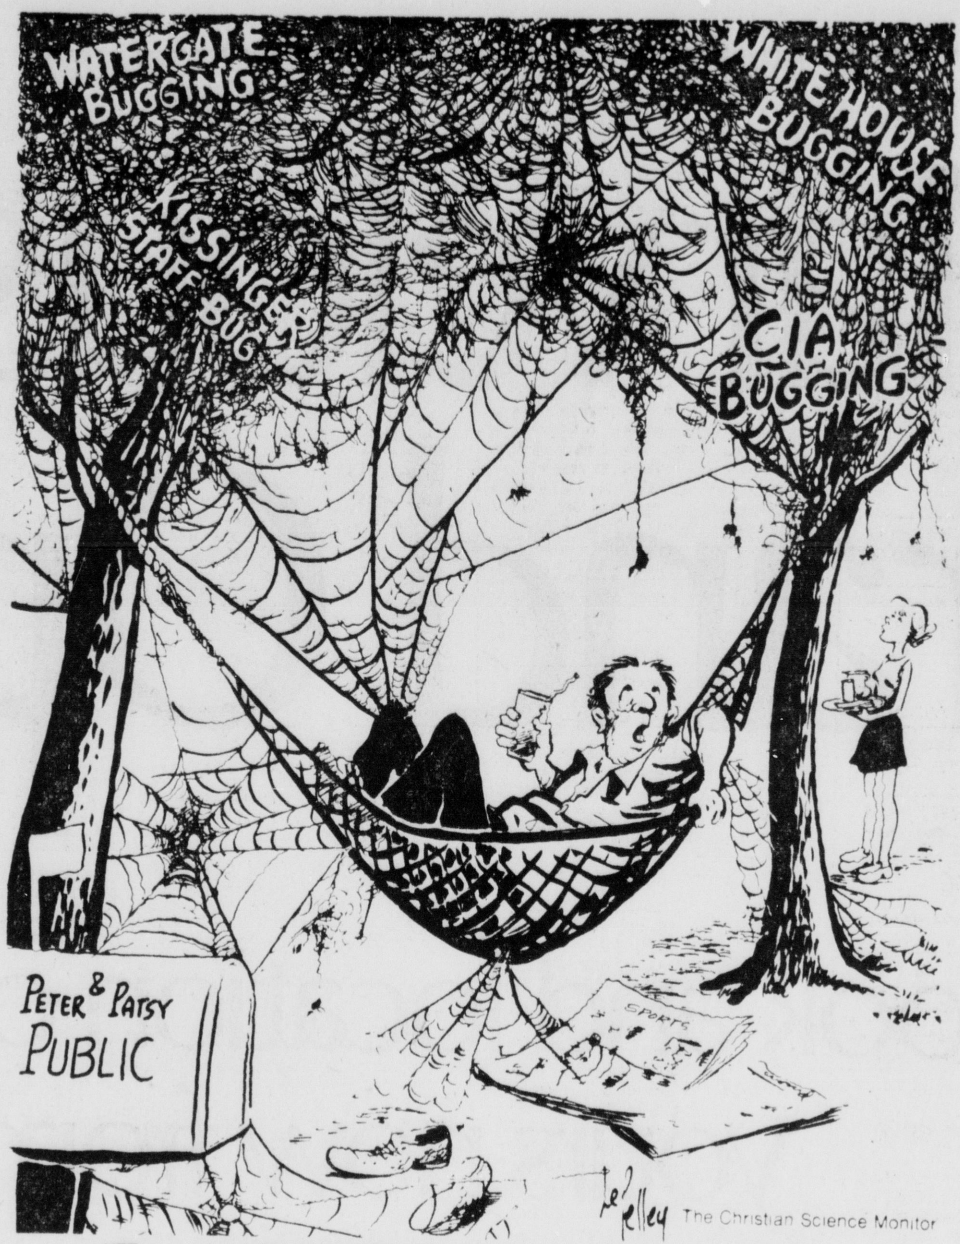
By HAROLD COFFIN

Uganda's President Amin has decreed that a man may have as many wives at one time as he can.

That's family planning, Ugandian style.

Being surrounded by all those wives could ruin a fellow's ecology by unbalancing his environment.

The fact that a woman can't have more than one husband seems unfair and chauvinistic.



"Hey, sweetheart! What's going on all of a sudden?"

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Criticism Of Hub Police Raid 'Presumptuous'

Reference is made to your "What Our Readers Say" column in the I-J of Aug. 7. You have printed two letters, one written by J. Michael Carney of Mill Valley and the other by Carol C. Ryan of San Rafael. Both writers strongly criticize the San Anselmo Police Department concerning an LSD raid occurring in San Anselmo some days ago. . .

Both Mr. Carney and Ms. Ryan do not hesitate to criticize the San Anselmo Police Department yet neither of them are residents of this community. I would not be so presumptuous as to criticize either the Mill Valley or San Rafael Police Departments unless I resided in that city and had an intimate knowledge of their municipal operations.

Intertie Proposed As Part Of New Plan

In response to your recent editorials and articles, we believe the board of the Marin Municipal Water District is being unfairly criticized. Our board has moved positively in its attempt to resolve the present water supply problem.

The unanimous thrust of our board during the past year has been to coordinate our future water supply with countywide planning. Far from being a "no growth" policy, this is a planned growth policy, if implemented by the supervisors and cities. The countywide plan would establish the parameters which would allow both water supply and sewage treatment agencies to plan projects and facilities in accordance with sound management principles. This would eliminate the moratoriums that result when these systems become overtaxed. It would assure the community that authorizing these projects and facilities would not result in undesirable and uncontrolled growth.

Our board has neither the time, nor the ability, nor the desire to be planners beyond the scope of our duties as water resource managers . . .

The North Marin Intertie, which has been the subject of much board debate the past three years, is now being engineered into the first phase of a staged, modified Sonoma-Marin aqueduct to be presented to the voters this November. Monies already approved by the voters will reduce the total cost of the project.

The intertie has not been constructed sooner, because of contractual and engineering problems, the defeat of Proposition B (a much larger Sonoma-Marin aqueduct), the concerns of some directors about management of Russian River and Eel River water resources, and the ability of the Sonoma Water Agency to deliver promised supplies. But our board is working to resolve these concerns and present a responsible water supply project to the voters.

We believe the I-J has misjudged the purposes and goals of the present water board. Attacking individual directors, encouraging contention on the intertie and moratorium, and constantly impugning the credibility of the district can only cloud the issues in the coming bond election.

Always Forecast Fair Weather; That's What The Sponsor Wants

WASHINGTON — After the Senate gets finished investigating the Watergate, I have another subject for it to delve into. And that is the weathermen on television who promise you a sunny weekend, and then it rains like hell.

Here is how this investigation would go:

SENATOR: Please state your name and profession.

HARGILL: Archie Hargill. I am the weather forecaster for television station WFOG.

SENATOR: Now on July 27, according to your own statement, you predicted that there would be clear skies, warm and sunny weather. Do you have that statement in front of you?

HARGILL: Yes sir I may have said it, but I don't recall it.

SENATOR Those remarks are in your handwriting?

HARGILL: That is correct.

SENATOR: NOW ACCORDING to witnesses, it rained on both Saturday and Sunday of the weekend. Could you, in your own words, explain why you predicted a nice week end?

HARGILL: I think we have to look at this in perspective. At that point in time, I had received information from the Weather Bureau that a cold front was moving in from Canada I assumed from this information, which I believed to be correct, that the week end would be sunny.

SENATOR: Didn't you think you owed it to your viewers to go outside and check to see if it was raining?

HARGILL: In hindsight, that is probably what I should have done. But in the period we're talking about, I accepted the Weather Bureau's assurances that this cold front would move in.

SENATOR: NOW WHEN YOU realized you had made a mistake, why didn't you go back on the air and admit you had erred? Don't you think that would have been the decent thing to do?

HARGILL: I'm not sure. It could have cost the station a sponsor.

SENATOR: Are you trying to tell me that a sponsor is more important to you than the thousands of people who were making plans to go away for the week end?

HARGILL: Senator, I believe you're putting words in my mouth.

SENATOR: Let's go back to your log for early July. You predicted, and I'm using your own words now, "great sailing weather and a blue sky from Boston to Nantucket."

HARGILL: I assume you're talking about the day there were hailstorms all across Cape Cod and a tornado on Martha's Vineyard.

SENATOR That's the day.

HARGILL: I KNOW THIS may sound strange, but I don't recall it.

SENATOR When you found out about the hailstorms and tornado, why didn't you tell the president of your station? Don't you think he should have been informed about this catastrophe?

HARGILL: He was in Key Biscayne at the time; I did tell his administrative assistant that I thought something was flukey. But until the tornado actually hit Martha's Vineyard, I had nothing more to go on than hearsay.

SENATOR So, as far as you know, the president of the station did not hear of your forecast until the houses were wiped out by the tornado.

HARGILL'S LAWYER: Mr. chairman, is this relevant to the hearings?

CHAIRMAN: In North Carolina we think it is.

SENATOR: ONE LAST question. How can we avoid bad weather reporting in the future? How can we keep young men like yourself from falling into the same trap of perjuring themselves before the television cameras every night? What I'm trying to say is, what advice would you give to other forecasters who are thinking of going into the same business?

HARGILL: I'd tell them to become disc jockeys instead.

Proliferation Of Bugging Should Get Congress' Attention

WASHINGTON — As Congress departed, intent like a flustered housewife on a long-promised vacation, so much was swept under the rug. While a beginning was made on reform of campaign spending, in other areas where recent shocks have shown urgent need for congressional action, the rule was to put it off to an indefinite future.

First and foremost is the invasion of privacy by bugging. The practice has proliferated at a fanstastic rate, not only in government at every level but with private eyes and snoopers using with impunity the latest and most-sensitive electronic devices. Capable of penetrating solid walls, they leave not a shred of privacy to unsuspecting individuals.

The revelation that President Nixon had secretly taped the conversations of every visitor to his office, from heads of state to Watergate conspirators, was a shattering example of the practice. But, quite apart from government tapes and taps, the way this insidious surveillance has spread through the channels of law enforcement is even more alarming.

IN A CASE in Federal District Court here where the government pressed a perjury-conspiracy charge with secret tapes made by an informer, Judge Gerhard A. Gesell spoke out with characteristic forthrightness. Nothing in the Constitution nor in present law prohibits this practice, Gesell noted.

"Whatever incidental good flows from this invasion of privacy is submerged by the growing appearance of police surveillance typical of totalitarian states," he wrote in denying a defense motion to suppress the tape recordings.

The informer carried on his person, unknown to the other persons in the room, a recording device. Since it would not tape a lengthy conversation, as a precaution he was also wired to a device that broadcast the entire conversation to an FBI car parked in the street. Judge Gessell had no choice but to deny the defense motion, since he had been overruled by a higher court when in a previous case he had struck down similar taped conversations.

As any experienced trial judge knows, he observed, secret taping is an increasingly common practice. Only legislation requiring a warrant in such cases can correct the growing intrusion of privacy.

SEN. GAYLORD NELSON, D-Wis., has introduced a bill which would create a bipartisan Joint Committee on Individual Rights made up of 10 senators and 10 representatives. The committee would hold regular hearings covering every agency of government that collects, stores and uses personal information about specific individuals. The CIA, the FBI and all military surveillance groups would be required to testify under oath and produce all relevant documents covering the extent of their operations.

Nelson has come up with figures showing that since court-authorized wire taps were made legal in 1968, more than 1,623,000 conversations involving 120,000 or more individuals were overheard. The Army, on a rampage of electronic snooping, put together dossiers on 100,000 citizens now stored in 300 record centers.

The proposed joint committee is a start. Out of the hearings could come a law to check the spread of the private snooper who now operates without restraint. It is a practice destructive of all trust and confidence.

WHETHER THROUGH such a joint committee or in legislation requiring a warrant for private use of electronic snooping, this should be high on the agenda when the Congress returns. So much was left undone in this first session. If in the Watergate hearings exposure is merely for the sake of exposing, then a sense of futility and resentment is bound to develop.

Congress has a long way to go to demonstrate that it is truly a coequal branch of government, to say nothing about assuming the functions of a crippled and distracted executive. Seldom in our history has government suffered such seeming paralysis of will and resolution.

Results Of Watergate Inquiry Mostly On Positive Side

A lot of gloomy things are being written these days around the theme that the Watergate affair is damaging the process of government in Washington, to the point where it threatens the foreign policies of the country and can cause chaos at home.

There is some substance in the version, but not very much, and whatever the losses from the dislocation, these are offset by substantial gains. Just to mention one gain, there has been no more handing of embassies to campaign contributors. All ambassadorial assignments since Watergate broke have been to career foreign service officers. Considering how poorly the political ambassadors have performed (one was just tossed out of Jamaica for flagrant diplomatic indiscretions), this is a very good thing.

A far more important gain is in White House-congressional relations. Congress is regaining the power to think and act for itself. Independence in the Congress was in danger of atrophying. Not very long ago serious students of government were lamenting the decline of the Congress as an independent branch of the federal government in Washington. Well, scratch that item off the list of national worries. Congress is alive and flourishing again after its long decline.

DOES THIS seriously endanger Mr. Nixon's foreign policies? I think not. The great features of the new Nixon foreign policies are acceptance of mainland China as a fact, a defensive rather than a forward American attitude in Asia, an end to the Indochina war, an end to the "cold war" and detente with Russia.

Not a single element in Mr. Nixon's foreign policies is seriusly controversial. They have become national policies supported by every major political element in the population. And all of them are so well advanced that they need routine servicing, not major new actions. Japan's prime minister did not call off his visit because Mr. Nixon is troubled by Watergate. He came regardless. The United States may be going through a crisis of leadership in Washington, but that does not threaten existing foreign policies.

The only serious foreign policy issue at the moment is over the question of American troops in Germany. Decline of the dollar has raised the cost to the American treasury. The pressure is rising to bring some of them home. Mr. Nixon is resisting. But it is the decline of the dollar, not Watergate, which is making this issue sharper. A reasonable compromise seems likely.

There is some fear that Congress will slip into a mood of dangerous economic isolationism. But this danger was apparent before Watergate and is not noticeably worse now.

GREATEST CHANGE due to Watergate has been the disposition of the Congress to speak its mind on dismantling of federal agencies and withholding of moneys appropriated by Congress. Mr. Nixon has had to give ground on several points. But is this all bad? Certainly not. Congress is a coordinate and equal branch of government. The real change is that there is more, not less, consultation between White House and Capitol Hill and this in turn has broken some of the old legislative jams.

Another important change has been pressure on the White House to do more to try to check the inflation. Considering how unsuccessful Phase 3 was, is there any reason to lament its departure? Phase 4 has yet to prove itself. But if Watergate had anything to do with abandonment of Phase 3 (a doubtful proposition) it should be thanked, not blamed.

Having a more vigorous and active Congress is no national disaster.

Nor is it bad to have a demand in and on Washington for higher ethical standards. Not in a long time have so many people in that city been so busy ferreting out improper practices and working so hard at new devices for raising the moral climate in government.

Truck Hijack Ring Smashed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A sophisticated gang that used radio-equipped cars to hijack at least seven trucks along Route 99 in the San Joaquin Valley the past year has been smashed, the California Highway Patrol said Friday.

Patrol Commissioner Walter Pudinski said up to a dozen gang members were being arrested with hijacking charges being filed in Kern, Tulare, Fresno and San Luis Obispo counties.

Seven trucks along with their trailers, valued at more than $2000,000 have been recovered, Pudinski said.

Five of the stolen loads consited of plywood, lumber and other building material.

Pudinski said that although sold by the thieves within hours after each hijack, about 70 per cent of the cargo, valued at an additional $100,000, has been recovered.

Patrol Inspector B. B. Smith, head of the auto theft detail, said all of the thefts were made at highway locations where truckers stopped to eat, spend the night or have minor repairs made.

He said the gang sometimes crused along Route 99 in radio-equipped cars looking for likely cargoes.

Smith said when a truck was stolen, the first gang car escorted the truck down the highway while some gang members remained at the scene in the second car.

If the theft was noticed before a clean getaway could be assured, they would radio to the escort car and advise them to either abandon the truck or at least get it under cover, Smith said.

One theft was made from a truck repair station guarded by two sentry dogs. The animals were shot with darts loaded with tranquilizing drugs by gang members.

Smith also said much of the three month investigation work was done by the Kern County sheriff's office and city police in Bakersfield, Visalia, Tulare, Paso Robles, Grover City and Pismo Beach.

In an effort to thwart investigation, Smith said, the hijackers confined their sales almost exclusively to San Luis Obispo County.

Once a cargo was delivered there, the stolen truck and trailer was disposed of by parking it at a Route 101 truck stop or similar San Luis Obispo County location where it would not arouse immediate interest, Smith said.

The patrol investigation also turned up information involving some gang members, described as "local talent," in a series of armed robberies and burglaries, Smith said.

Prisoner Freed With Pension

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Ramon Munizaga spent 34 years in jail for murder, theft and assault.

Then the 64-year-old convict "retired" Thursday and left his cell to collect a pension.

Munizaga was sentenced to life imprisonment in the city of San Juan in 1939, but an amnesty law earlier this year allowed him to go free. At the same time, the prison awarded him a pension because while behind bars, he gained the rank of sergeant in the prison guards.

John E. Bryan — The Man With A 70-Acre Garden

By DON KEOWN

To John E. Bryan belongs the title of premiere gardener among residents of gardening-minded Marin County.

As director of Strybing Arboretum in San Francisco's Golden Gate Park, Bryan is in charge of 70 acres upon which are grown well over 5,000 different species of plants, ranging from the most familiar California natives to exotics imported from faraway lands, and from tiny dwarfs to towering trees.

Bryan also has an impressive background of horticultural training in his native Great Britain and on the continent, and of experience with both public and private plantsmen, landscapers, nurseries and parks departments.

BORN IN Plymouth, Devon, England, in 1931, Bryan was educated in the English public (the equivalent of American private) schools.

As a 16-year-old he became an apprentice in horticulture, putting in a 48-hour work week in greenhouses and market gardens for the not-so-princely remuneration of $1.25 a week —plus invaluable experience.

Then, in 1949, he enrolled at Somerset Agricultural College where he graduated with a first class certificate in horticulture.

FROM THE college he joined the parks department of the City of Bournemouth, "one of the best in Britain," for two more years of student work. In 1952 he became a student horticulturist at the Royal Botanical Gardens in Edinburgh, Scotland, receiving his diploma there in 1955.

The Worshipful Company of Gardeners, a horticultural guild, awarded him a three-year scholarship to continue his studies. It was an award made only once every three years.

"My main interest at the time was the propagation of plants, and the use of trees and shrubs in landscape architecture, with particular reference to cities and freeways," he recalls.

YOUNG BRYAN spent his first scholarship year at the Royal Horticultural Society's gardens at Wisley near London.

"There," he says, "I was fortunate enough to meet some of Britain's leading horticulturists — plant-hunters of the stature of King Don Ward, Lord Abercrombie and Lord Digby."

For his second scholarship year he studied with the city parks department at The Hague in Holland, acquiring a fascination for bulb flowers that continues to this day, and traveled extensively on the Continent, including a six weeks stay in Northern Italy and Switzerland, visiting gardens and other points of horticulture interest.

THE FINAL year of his scholarship found him working as a landscape architect for the French government in what translates roughly to the Special Department for Freeways. Much of that work was devoted to the landscaping of the roads from Orly Airport into Paris. And there was a wellremembered and pleasant stay on the Riviera at the French government's expense while he conducted a study on one of that beautiful region's autouroutes.

Next Bryan joined the French nursery firm Vilmorin and became manager of its herbaceous plant department with a staff of 25 men "so that I had to learn French in a hurry."

HE REMAINED with Vilmorin until 1961 "when realizing that there would be no more promotions for an Englishman with this French firm," he began casting about for another job.

The offer of a position came in from the famed Jan de Graaff Lily Farms, also known as the Oregon Bulb Farms. Bryan accepted, came to America, and became the Jan de Graaff sales manager and vice president.

It was shortly after his arrival in the United States that Bryan first visited Golden Gate Park and its Strybing Aboretum.

"EVERYWHERE I went, I always made it a point to visit the botanical gardens," he notes. So in passing through San Francisco, it was natural that he should gravitate to Strybing.

"They were just completing the first phases of a redevelopment program as planned by Robert Tetlow, professor of landscape architecture at the University of California, Berkeley," Bryan recalls. "I admired the wide range of plants that could be grown in San Francisco. And I fell in love with the grace and charm of the city and the area."

He made the acquaintance, too, of Jock Brydon, the Scotsman who was the arboretum's director.

STRYBING Arboretum, Bryan explains, had its beginnings in 1937 when Helene Strybing, a public-spirited San Francisco woman, left the city and county of San Francisco a bequest to be used for an arboretum in Golden Gate Park.

The legendary John McLaren —"also a graduate of the Royal Botanical Gardens at Edinburgh," Bryan says proudly — chose Eric Walther as the arboretum's first director. He retired in the late 1950s, and after a brief lapse Brydon was named his successor.

Brydon retired in 1969, and Roy Hudson, an assistant superintendent of parks, took over the responsibilities temporarily.

MEANWHILE, Bryan left John de Graaff to become briefly a partner with

HIS JOB AS DIRECTOR of the world famous Strybing Arboretum in San Francisc's Golden Gate Park enables John E. Bryan to work in what is literally a paradise of flowers and foliage for the professional horticulturist. Dan Caldwell Is Teacher And Thespian

AS EDMUND, the illegimate son, in the Marin Shakespeare Festival's current production of "King Lear," Marin actor Dan Caldwell has been compared to the late Errol Flynn by a San Francisco drama critic. Caldwell is also directing the festival's production of "As You Like It" running in repertory with "King Lear," "Country Wife" and "Alice in Wunderland."

By JOAN LISETOR

More than once Dan Caldwell has left Marin County to pursue a career in the theater. But he always returns.

"Mostly it's the people, the countryside, the climate, the cultural activities and the quiet," said the Marin native, who still lives in San Anselmo, the town in which he grew up.

Currently Caldwell is directing the Marin Shakespeare Festival's production of "As You Like It" and playing the role of Edmund, the bastard son, in the festival's production of "King Lear" at San Francisco's Palace of Fine Arts.

Drama also reaches into the academic world for teacher-thespian Caldwell. He heads the drama department at Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley, where he has taught since 1962.

"THERE IS NO opportunity to do what I want professionally here," Caldwell said, "but I love teaching, particularly at the high school level, where there is nothing to undo.

"I find teaching in high school more exciting than in college because high school students are in the process of discovering who they are — and isn't that the first thing one has to learn to become an actor?"

His desire to act goes as far back as he can remember, Caldwell said.

He first acted as a high school student, both at Tamalpais and Sir Francis Drake high schools. He majored in drama at San Francisco State College, where he also studied for a master's degree, and he has completed all requirements but the thesis toward a doctorate degree in film and television production at the University of California at Los Angeles.

TEACHING WAS an accident, he said, when he discovered he had met all the requirements except one course in education.

"I heard about an opening in the drama department at Tam, and I was attracted because it sounded like fun," he said.

To pursue theatrical opportunities Caldwell has taken leaves of absence from teaching.

He believes: "A teacher should not stay at teaching too long a time without interruption because he becomes stagnant without exercising his own creativity. Every teacher should take some time off and get away from the ivory tower, out into the real world."

> "A teacher should not stay at teaching too long a time without interruption," believes Dan Caldwell, "because he becomes stagnant without exercising his own creativity. Every teacher should take time off and get away from the ivory tower . . ."

Of his three worlds — acting, directing and teaching — acting is the most frustrating, Caldwell said.

"IN ACTING YOU can't be objective, whereas you can in teaching and directing. It is more painful because you put yourself on the line. But greater moments are possible, and there can be sheer joy when the moments are right," Caldwell said.

"The minute the frustration becomes greater than the rewards, I'm through."

The Marin Shakespeare Festival's repertory company offers Caldwell an opportunity to direct and act in the same company. And that situation, he said, has not created problems in his relationships with the other actors.

"If you can give direction you can also take direction," he said. "And working with such a fine director as Douglas Seale (director of 'King Lear') there is no question who is the director. It is a very together company.

"THE ACTOR GETS caught up in his acting and must agree with the director's point-of-view. There can be chaos when an actor tries to direct."

An actor must be subjective toward the character he is portraying, according to Caldwell, who plays the villain in "King Lear."

His portrayal of Edmund has been compared to that of the late Errol Flynn by the San Francisco Examiner's drama critic Stanley Eichelbaum. The San Francisco Chronicle drama critic Paine Knickerbocker called him "a fascinating villain."

"Edmund is evil, but to play the role well I must have sympathy with the villain," Caldwell commented. "As an actor I am not aware of how well or how

PROFILE OF A MARINITE

From Mormon Background And The Depression Years, Evelyn Porter Developed Firm Belief In Natural Foods

EVELYN PORTER developed an interest in natural foods as a child in a Mormon family in Salt Lake City, and years later it blossomed into a prospering business. She began with a health food store in Novato, and has since added stores in San Anselmo and San Rafael. Here she serves a customer at her San Rafael shop in the Montecito Shopping Center (Independent-Journal photo)

By FRED STREBEIGH

"Our bodies are Tabernacles of the Soul, and we should keep them pure," says Evelyn Porter.

She is the founder of the Evelyn Porter Nutrition Shops with three stores in Novato, San Anselmo and San Rafael.

She traces her early interest in health food to her youth in a Mormon family in Salt Lake City and the nutrition problem of feeding a family with "six athletically-inclined brothers" and two sisters in the years leading up to and during the Depression.

SPEAKING OF her Mormon heritage, she said "Being that I'm from this background, the natural things were more prevalent. We made our own organic bread and grew our own organic vegetables."

"Our people believe in moderation in all things — and certainly we feel that we should take care of the land. Taking care of our bodies is another vital part of ecology," she added.

The poverty her family suffered during the Depression ended both her education at the University of Utah and her aspirations to a career in ballet, an art for which she began her training at age 8.

Today her slim, trim body still retains the physical agility, grace and strength of a dancer.

THE NEED TO keep her body strong first led her to the study of nutrition and to the conviction that food grown organically — without artificial additives or pesticides — is vital to good health.

"The main thing that has attracted people to natural foods is that they've found their bodies weren't getting the strength and energy they need from the food they had been eating, she said. "People are tired of being half-sick all the time."

She said that her husband, a former Standard Oil of California tax analyst who now manages the business side of the stores, learned the meaning of "health food" through hard experience.

BEFORE A HEART attack, which he suffered in 1958, he hadn't believed that her organic and health foods worked any real good for the body's health. "I had to sneak it into the house," she said.

The heart attack, she said, coming at the age of 43, completely cut him off temporarily from all the physical activity to which he had been accustomed.

Four years of treatment, she said, did not restore the physical freedom which he needed. Finally she convinced him to go on a diet of the foods she had been advocating for years.

SHE SAID THAT they combined a diet of fertile eggs, whole grains, organic vegetables and other "good foods" with dosages of fat emulsifiers and vitamins."

His cholesterol level and blood pressure dropped dramatically, she said, and Porter "decided maybe this wasn't as crazy as it sounded."

It was about the same time, in 1962, that Mrs. Porter opened her first store in their home town of Novato, as her project to occupy her time and interest "since the children had left home."

"The main thing that has attracted people to natural foods is that they've found their bodies weren't getting the strength and energy they need from the food they had been eating," Evelyn Porter believes. "People are tired of being half-sick all the time."

Their daughter, Erline Burgi, now lives with her husband and five children on a 100 acre farm in Sonoma, and their son, Ronald Porter, is a construction worker with four children in Ohio.

SHE HAS SEEN her project increase its sales volume ten-fold in the 10 years during which she also has added stores in San Anselmo and San Rafael.

She has seen, too, a big change in her customers, and especially the young ones who she says have been leading the health food movement.

"I have seen it change from the flower children to more stable young persons responsive to the very fiber of our existence as a nation," she said.

Young people have turned away from "the total freedom that they once demanded with its moral degeneration," she said, "because they could see what was coming from this laxity — this permissiveness — was total destruction."

SHE SAID THAT this change might be linked to a spiritual revival among the young. "These young people are groping, she said. They're searching for a better, more noble way of living.

"You have to feed the mind with good things, with something morally good, as well as feed the body with good nutrition.

"For a while they could see only the necessity for good nutrition. Now they have progressed to the point where they can see also that they need a higher moral standard as well as better nutritional standard."

Over the years, she said, the health food business has grown tremendously and thrown off the stigma of eccentricity that it had suffered in its early years.

"IT'S NO LONGER the little old lady in tennis shoes" who manages and frequents such stores, she said.

She said that the growing size of the industry is also subjecting it to closer scrutiny and putting greater demands on the store owner.

She has taken adult education courses in nutrition at the University of California at Berkeley, and has attended seminars with nutritionists including Adelle Davis and Carlton Fredericks, sponsored by the Northern California Retailers Assn.

She says that the news, close scrutiny is good, "because it will come to the point where we are tested, licensed and qulified right down the line from growers and distributors to retailers."

"WE'VE WANTED to be licensed for years, so we could prove ourselves," she said.

While Mrs. Porter sees that health food is becoming big business, she says that her stores will always stay small — "a personal business with a personal touch."

The faith in organic food which she acquired from her Mormon background remains unshaken, she said. "Anytime they tamper with the natural product, it becomes less nutritious. Why change Mother Nature?"

SHE AND HER husband have lived in the close confines of a mobile home park since 1970, and before that on a quarter acre plot, in Novato since 1948.

When they retire, she says, they will get back to the land.

They plan to move to their daughter's Sonoma farm to where even now, Mrs. Porter says, "We get up and put our hands to the plow as much as possible."

When the day finally comes, she says, "we will retire to the north 40 and have our own little plot — raise Cornish hens and have organic-fed sheep."

MARIN POET'S CORNER

THE WORLD IS HOLLOW

When I reached out to touch your hand
I found that it was gone
But I will not cry
For the world is hollow and I have touched the sky.

Darling, I don't need your hand anymore.
For the black velvet heaven is my love.
To you I'll say goodbye
For the world is hollow and I have touched the sky.

If I should reach out again and find your hand waiting
I will probably begin to cry
For the world is hollow and I have touched the sky;
The stars are the sparkle in my eye.

The sapphire blue sky at dawn is my friend—
Sometimes I wish the day would never end
But, of course, it must
Just as the stars sometime turn to dust . . .

Every night I wake up to the moon,
Wish on the loneliest star in the sky,
And for the empty world I cry,
And then I think of you.

So please don't ask me to choose between you both,
For the world is hollow and I have touched the sky
And the sky has loved me
And the moon has explained my destiny.

When I reached out to touch your hand
I found that it was gone
But I will not cry
For the world is hollow and I have touched the sky.

I will not cry
For the world is hollow and I have touched the sky.

POEM TO A FRIEND

To a friend who gave me the scheme
To snare a golden dream,
Gather a glittering star,
Letting all the golden words fall.

I threew out my net
On a stormy sea
To see what I could catch,
Drew in a silvery shimmering web
    of memory.

Once begun there was no stopping,
From my pen the golden words
    came tumbling,
The small fire kindled ever burning.

So a million happy thanks to you
    I'm sending
For this lovely magical world of words—
So elusive and alluring,
Like some sweet siren singing.

Dan Caldwell Strives To Give Theater Back To Audience

badly a show has gone. Actors only see their own performances, and again, it is difficult for an actor to know what is a good or a bad performance because he is creating an illusion for the audience by using a technique.

"IT IS LIKE A show I did that had a year's run — 'Once Over Nightly.' You knew it was technically right. That show was a comedy, so I enjoyed the long run, because with a comedy you get response from the audience."

He prefers working in repertory "because with a different play every night you are fresher," he said.

Last season Caldwell appeared in two episodes of the television series, "Streets of San Francisco," and has had to turn down two being filmed currently for next season because he is too busy with the Shakespeare Festival.

He is sorry to lose the $600 income, he said. But he is more concerned that his career has not yet reached the point where directors will wait for him when he is busy elsewhere.

THE SHAKESPEARE festival's season ends Sept. 10, just eight days before Caldwell is scheduled to begin filming a movie, "Nightmare In Blood." He plays the hero but not the lead, since the lead is a vampire.

The film is being shot on location in San Francisco and will have a contemporary setting.

Other things are coming up, Caldwell said, but he doesn't like to talk about them until they are definite. He acknowledges that he is turning down acting jobs, since he is being offered more than he could possibly take. It is a pleasant and not ordinary situation for an actor.

In fact after seven years as director of Plays for Living, Caldwell has resigned because he does not have enough time for those duties.

Plays for Living is a repertory company sponsored by the Family Service Agency, and performs plays that have social issues as a theme. San Rafael actor-director John Brebner has replaced Caldwell as artistic director.

CALDWELL ESTIMATES he has appeared in as many as 100 plays and 20 films. His latest film appearance was the "Laughing Policeman," not yet released. He had a two-week contract, which meant for most of the two weeks he sat around waiting for a call for the one scene in which he appeared.

Other movies in which he has appeared include "Bullitt," "Skidoo," "Petulia," "The Organizer," "ThX 1138" and "Take the Money and Run."

The stage role Caldwell has enjoyed most was that of Jacques in a Marin Shakespeare Festival production of "As You Like It," directed by one of the festival's founders, Anne Brebner.

The role of Edmund in "King Lear" is enjoyable, he said, as is all live theater.

"The exciting thing about theater is that it is happening now. The audience is only there once, and they are sharing what is happening with you. Each performance is a one-time thing.

"AS A DIRECTOR my philosophy is to try to give the audience back its place in the theater. That place was taken away early in the 20th Century, and audiences had to look through a non-existent wall. Performers were not aware the audience was there because directors ignored them.

"How often does an actor turn to the audience and say something?

"The message I want to relate to the audience as a director is, 'We can't do the show without you. You have a place, maybe even a role.' I like flexible theater. The flexibility doesn't even have to be physical. It can be an attitude."

Caldwell said that as a director putting a show together he enjoys every moment.

"DIRECTING 'As You Like It,' I have told the cast it should be, indeed, as you like it. I am doing it in the late Victorian era because the lines are clean and simple," he said.

To critics who object to Shakespeare played in a non-Elizabethan era Caldwell answers that Shakespeare himself did plays in what was modern dress for his day, regardless of the period in which the work was set.

" 'Julius Caesar' was set in ancient Rome, but he did it in the dress of his (Shakespeare's) day," the director said.

Caldwell also teaches private classes in San Francisco to aspiring film actors and actresses. To them he imparts this advice drawn from his experience, "A good actor is one who relaxes enough to let the spontaneity show through."

Visual beauty is also important, he said.

CALDWELL'S GOAL is to establish himself nationally as an actor-director.

Expense i the only thing keeping him from doing his own films, he said. To reach the goal he will have to take leaves from his teaching, because "all the action is in Los Angeles."

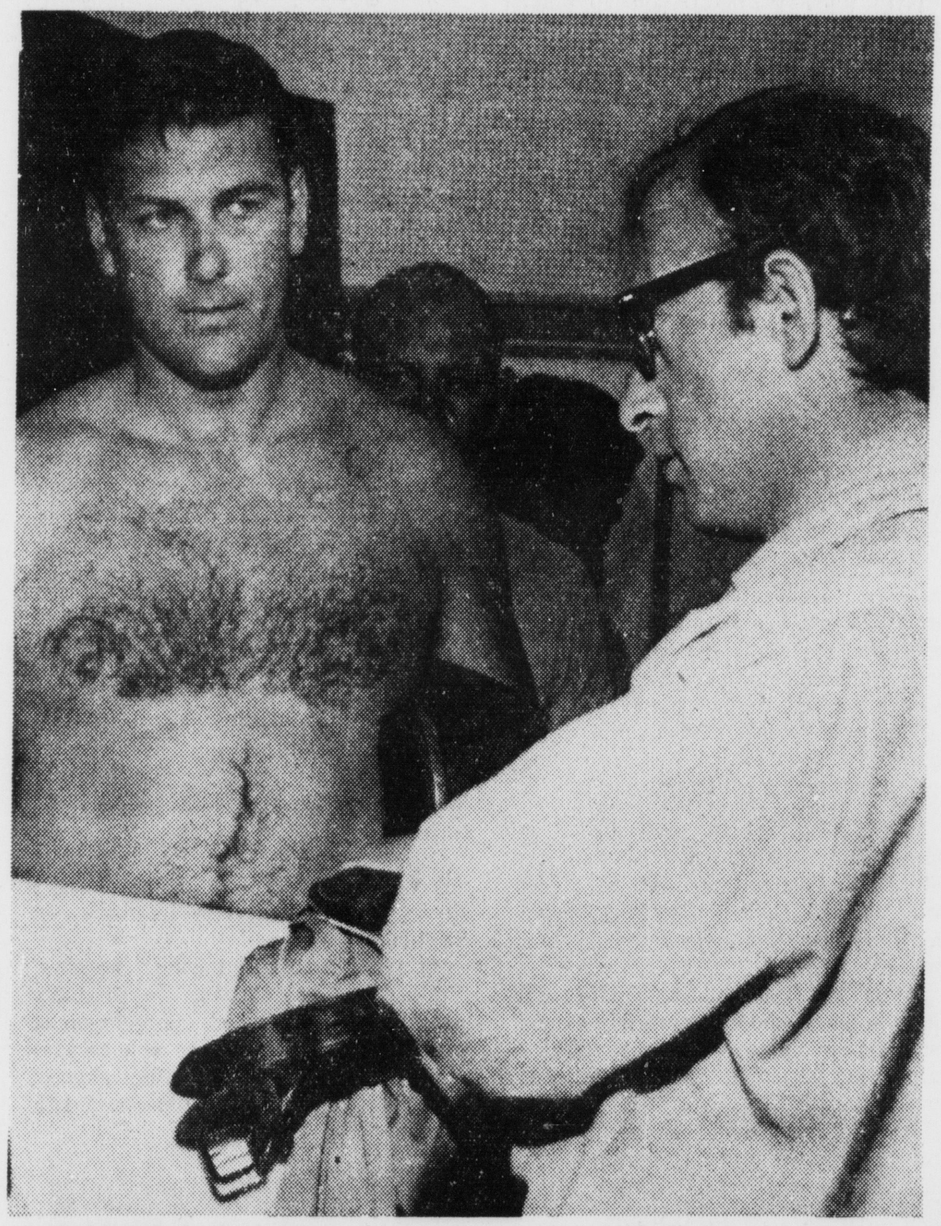
The move some day is inevitable, he said, because, as he tells his students, "You have to be there to get the jobs.

"I have an agent in Los Angeles, but he doesn't call me unless I am there. Still, I will always come back to Marin."

"The exciting thing about theater is that it is happening now," says Dan Caldwell. "The audience is only there once, and they are sharing what is happening with you. Each performance is a one-time thing."

"The message I want to relate to the audience as a director is, 'We can't do the show without you. You have a place, maybe even a role.' I like flexible theater. But the flexibility doesn't even have to be physical. It can be an attitude."

ACTOR-DIRECTOR-TEACHER Dan Caldwell goes over scripts and stage plan drawings in the garden of his San Anselmo home. Caldwell is head of the drama department at Tamalpais High School. He is also a professional actor and director who has had to leave Marin County several times to advance his career, since theater opportunities are scarce in the Bay Area. Right now, however, he is busily involved in the Marin Shakespeare Festival.



ONE OF THE RARE occasions when Marin actor Dan Caldwell, left, did not have to leave Marin County to act was during the filming of "Take the Money and Run," made here in 1968 by actor-director Woody Allen, right. Caldwell also has had roles in a number of other major motion pictures.

Road & Track called the 450SL
"one of the ten best cars in the world."

Phil Hill called it
"the best sports car."
Mercedes-Benz
agrees.

Now from the engineers of Mercedes-Benz comes a brilliant advance. A car which, in an incredibly short time, has earned the almost extravagant praise of the men who know, drive and live sports cars. Men like Phil Hill, the only American ever to win the World Championship of Driving.

The 450SL is powered by a fuel-injected, overhead-cam V-8 engine. All four wheels are independently suspended. All four wheels have fade-resistant disc brakes. All features you'd expect in a high-performance sporting machine. But consider the following: In the 450SL, air conditioning, power-assisted steering and 3-speed automatic transmission are standard. Hardly the usual features you're given in a sports car.

The 450SL is the product of truly enlightened engineering. Mercedes-Benz engineering. Test drive it and you'll experience — maybe for the first time in your life — what a sports machine should be. Call us. It's surprisingly easy to arrange.

MARIN LIVING

For The Professional Horticulturist, Bay Area Is A Virtual Paradise

another Oregon bulb-growing firm. He resigned that position in 1970 to accept the directorship of Strybing Arboretum.

For the appointment Bryan had the strong support of the much respected Jock Brydon. He had the recommendation as well of Joseph Caberley, a San Rafael resident and general manager of the San Francisco Recreation and Parks Department, under which the arboretum operates.

The influential and very active Strybing Arboretum Society also gave him its backing.

UPON REPORTING for his new job, Bryan found as his biggest challenge "the realization of the objectives of the arboretum within the means of a very limited budget."

Those objectives he describes as "making the arboretum a place where even those with only a peripheral interest in horticulture could be stimulated into a greater interest in plants and encouraged to grow a wider range of species in their own gardens; to make of the arboretum a tremendous educational resource for our children; and to increase in people of all ages their appreciation and enjoyment of plants and gardens.

"In gardening," asserts Bryan, "that word —enjoyment — is a very important key word."

THE ARBORETUM extends in Golden Gate Park from Ninth Avenue and Lincoln Way westward to approximately 16th Avenue, and is bounded on the north by South Drive.

Of its 70 acres, Bryan estimates that approximately five acres are given over to native plants, the remaining 65 acres to imported species, "although it is difficult to make a separation because some species, such as the native Monterey Pines, are scattered throughout the arboretum."

"We have the world's finest collection of magnolias," Bryan says proudly. "We have an outstanding collection of Malaysian rhododendrons, good collections of Berberis and Vibernums, and a wonderful collection of dwarf conifers.

"WE HAVE A complete collection of cedars. Just recently we opened the John Muir Nature Trail which will house 13 different plant communities to be seen as they would be found in the wild, growing as natives of California."

Bryan notes that the arboretum has introduced a number of plants to North America. "We have them from everywhere — from China, from Africa, from Australia, you name it and we have it."

A point of special pride with Bryan is the Sunset Demonstration Garden, a joint project of the Lane Publishing Co. (Sunset Magazine and books) and the Strybing Arboretum Society.

THERE SMALL areas are developed as garden settings to give the public ideas as to what they can do in their own backyards.

Bryan is strong in his praise of the Strybing Arboretum Society, "a very active and dedicated body of men and women." Most recently the society presented to San Francisco the Helen Crocker Russell Library of Horticulture. It employs a full-time librarian and a full-time director of education, and functions out of the Hall of Flowers where Bryan's office is located.

An annual plant sale in the spring is a major fundraising event on the part of the society.

GENERAL MANAGER Joseph Caberley's San Francisco Recreation and Parks Department, under whose aegis the arboretum operates, has joined with the Strybing Society in sponsoring horticultural classes.

"The Hall of Flowers and the Sunset Demonstration Gardens are officially the county fairgrounds of San Francisco, and thus share in pari-mutuel racing funds," Bryan explains.

He continues: "What we have is a meeting place where everyone interested in horticulture can indulge their own special gardening interests — and at the same time witness and appreciate the efforts and interests of others."

HE EXPLAINS: "When you go to visit the rhododendrons, you also pass the fuchsias. If you visit the California Association of Nurserymen exhibit, your walk takes you past the ikebana garden. At the time you see the gazebo designed by the famous Thomas Church, you also see the San Francisco Garden Club setting laid out by a state college student.

"In the arboretum we have a meeting of the city and the county, the state, the schools, the private organizations, of business, of the flower and other civic clubs, of individuals. It is a place operated for the benefit of all, and with the help and participation of the widest possible spectrum."

The arboretum has a staff of 10 gardeners, and Bryan says: "I don't know how they get all the work one."

THE SECRET, he suspects, is in the interest these men feel for their work.

Bryan is strong in his praise, too, for the arboretum's volunteer docents who conduct school groups on tours by appointment. "They are very keen," he says, "extremely well informed."

The arboretum also sponsors field trips, such as one this spring to the Bakersfield area to admire and study the wildflower fields.

Although tied to his desk more than he would like, John Bryan, ever the gardener, makes it a point to get out into the arboretum from time to time, "especially when I feel a bit frustrated," and even to do a bit of digging.

"I TRY TO visit some part of the arboretum evry day," he says. And there, and along the way, he talks to the men at their work.

"I like to get them involved," he says. "I want them to know that their ideas are considered when plans for the arboretum's future are made. Man is no good unless he is interested in his work."

Even when pressed, Bryan refuses to pick one section of the arboretum or one species of its thousands of plants as his personal favorite, although he confesses a continuing special interest in bulb flowers and tells with enthusiasm of his arrangement with the Netherlands Flower Bulb Institute last fall to plant more than 30,000 bulbs in the arboretum as a continuing trial for their evaluation.

"THUS WE enjoy these wonderful flowers without any cost."

Bryan's moments of frustration and restlessness at his desk are infrequent "because I know that the paper work is very much tied in with gardening. It all helps the cause, and I feel that I am a part of something that is very important to man's future well-being."

Of ruddy complexion, with reddish tinged hair and mustache and slightly stoutish, Bryan looks the typical Englishman. But he feels today very much the American.

HE HAS returned to Britain and to Europe a number of times for visits. "Man always has ties to his native land." But says he has no regrets over his decision to immigrate.

"I'm happy here," he says. "We have a fantastic climate in the San Francisco area. We can grow stuff from both the north and the south. It is cold enough to grow Far Northern specimens, yet warm enough for semi-tropical plants."

What more could a horticulturist ask for?

Well, perhaps a better growing soil.

"OUR SOIL is not very good," he admits, but astens to add: "But one can very easily change that, and build a good soil. After all, Golden Gate Park, including the arboretum, was once all sand dunes."

Bryan has two children, living with their mother, who appropriately enough bear flower names —Daphne and Jasmine, ages 13 and 9. And both, he adds, love to garden.

Bryan appears frequently on Bay Area television on such programs as Helen Bentley's Channel 5 show. He was a regular on Oregon television. And his slightly clipped voice is heard doing one-minute promotional spots for the arboretum on KNBR and KCBS radio — "I've reached the point where in America I have a slight English accent, and in England I have a slight American accent," he smiles. "Of course, I can still do the English accent pretty well when I try."

HE HAS written frequently on horticultural subjects, and has a book scheduled for January publication by 101 Productions which he co-authored with Coralie Castle of San Rafael.

For his articles, he takes his own illustrative photographs.

He lectures to various garden and service clubs, is a Rotarian, and belongs to a number of professional organizations.

"I'm a strong supporter of Marin Heritage," he says. "I think it is our special duty these days to preserve gardens and plants of merit. We can build buildings. But we can't build trees. Only time will replace a lost tree."

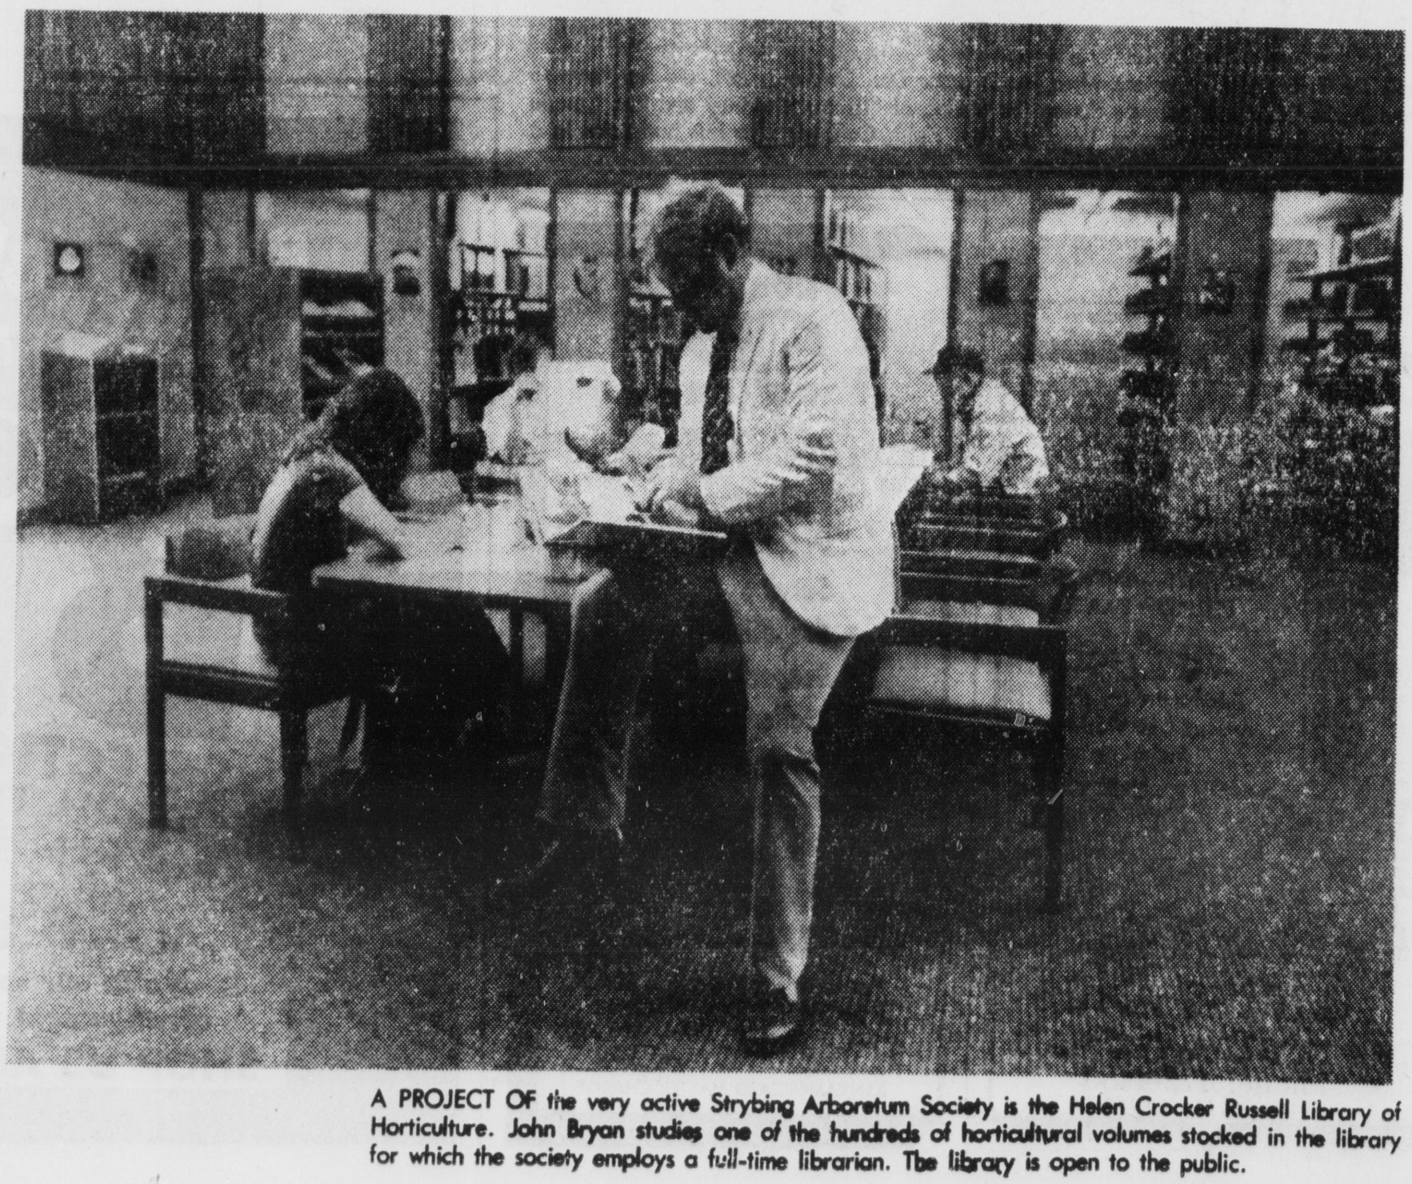
HIS HOBBIES include tennis, cricket, golf and cross country skiing. His tastes in food reflect his stay on the Continent — "I love French cooking" — rather than his British background, "although I dote on English beer."

But John Bryan, the man with the 70-acre garden, remains for all his other interests, first and foremost the horticulturist.

Like he said, "No man is any good unless he is interested in his work." Bryan is interested, very interested, in Strybing Arboretum.

"It is extremely satisfying," he says, "to be able to contribute to so many people's enjoyment and appreciation of plants and gardens —to be able to pass along one's expertise to a wide range of the public, without being concerned with making dollar sales."

AT HIS DESK in the Hall of Flowers in Golden Gate Park, Strybing Arboretum Director John E. Bryan confers with secretary Emily Warner concerning some aspect of his job of administering one of the world's largest botanical gardens. The horticulturist admits he sometimes chaffs at the desk work. But when the "itch" arises, he has only to leave the office to inspect one of the many growing areas in the arboretum.



A PROJECT OF the very active Strybing Arboretum Society is the Helen Crocker Russell Library of Horticulture. John Bryan studies one of the hundreds of horticultural volumes stocked in the library for which the society employs a full-time librarian. The library is open to the public.

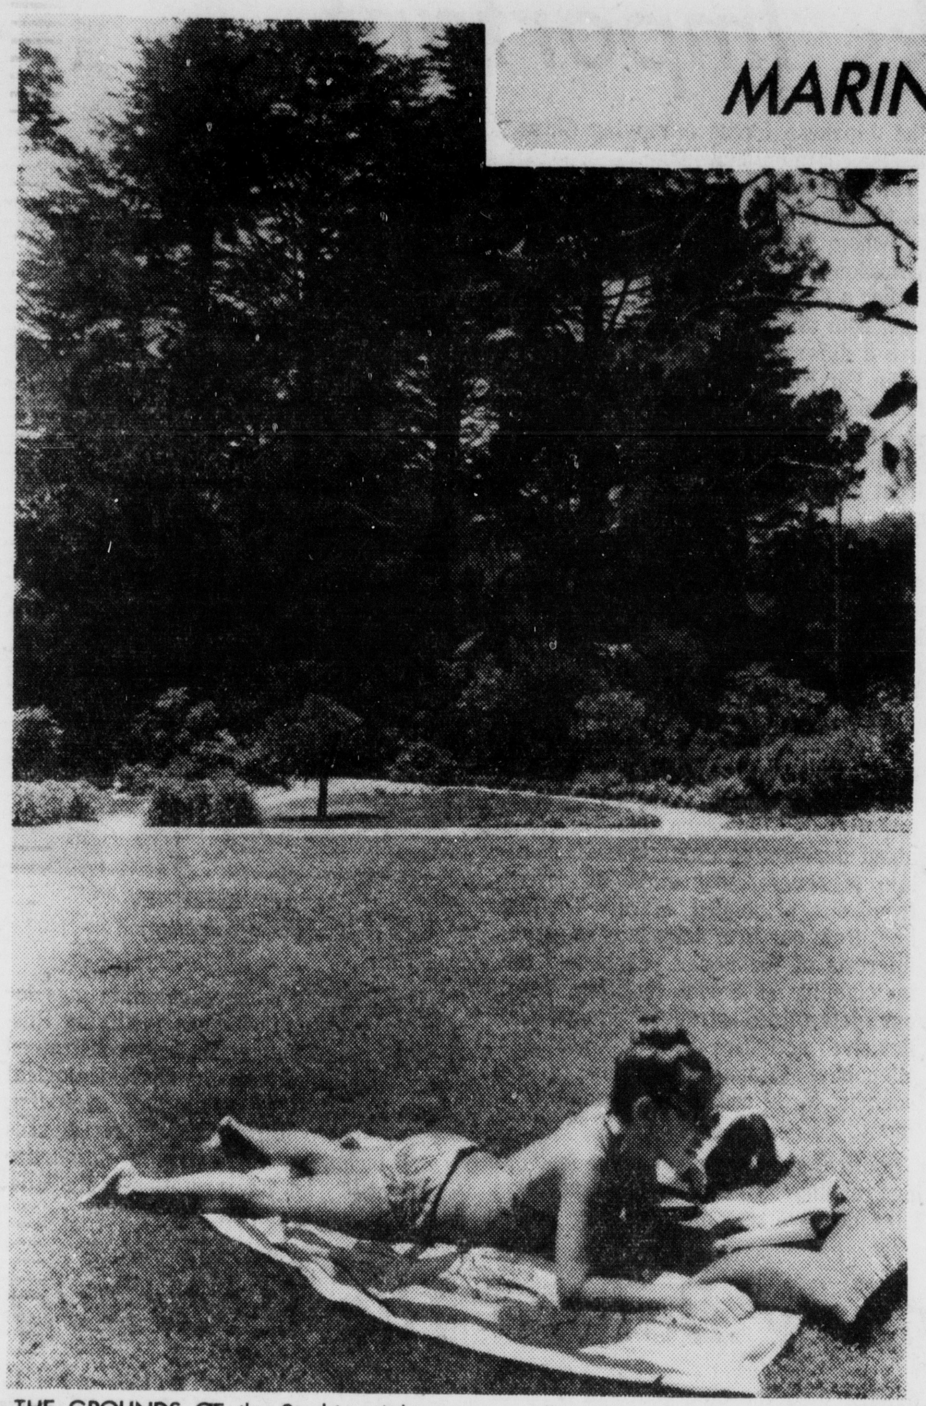
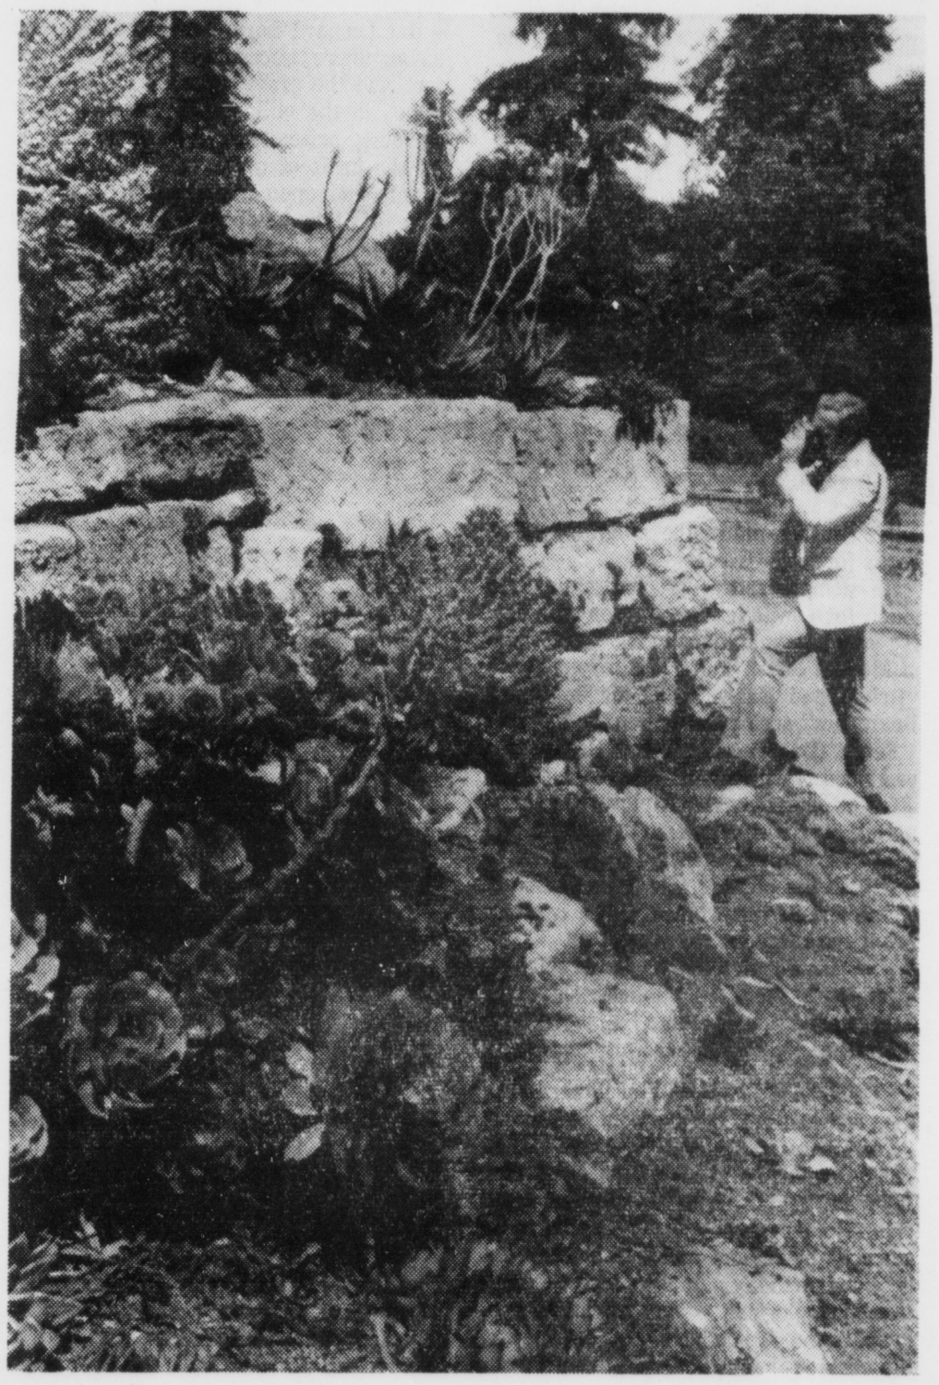
MARIN LIVING

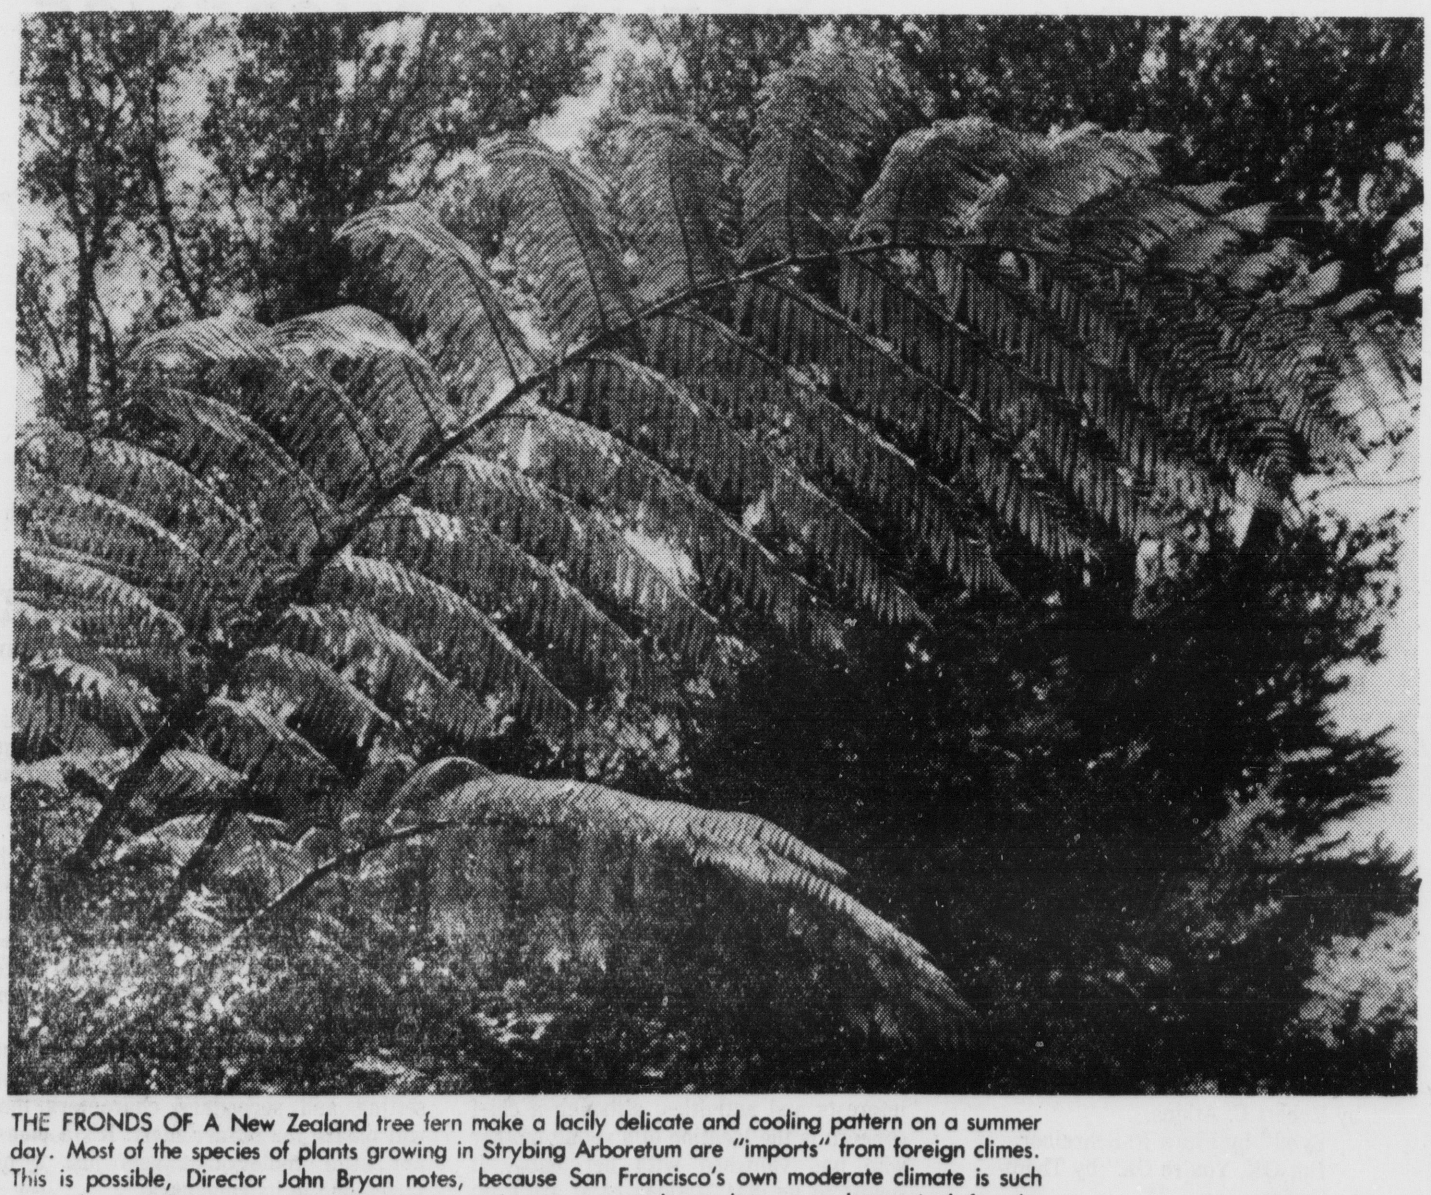


THE GROUNDS OF the Strybing Arboretum, totalling 70 acres, make up one of the most beautiful and most relaxing areas in San Francisco's famed Golden Gate Park. Here Alice Yavorsky takes advantage of those pleasant surroundings to read while she suns on the green of one of the arboretum lawns.

THERE IS ROOM to run and to play, and also places to sit, chat and relax in Strybing Arboretum. And everywhere one finds oneself surrounded by specimen plants and trees, some native to California, many from the far corners of the earth. Strybing Arboretum was begun in 1937 with a bequest left the city by the late Helen Strybing. Legendary John McLaren was driving force in its beginnings.

JOHN E. BRYAN, Strybing Arboretum director and Marin resident, always enjoys an opportunity to get out onto the grounds and to see for himself what is going on. At left, he discusses a terracing idea with visitors Harold and Patricia House of San Francisco. Above, in the greenhouse, he confers with arboretum employee Tom Bass of Mill Valley. And at right he snaps a photograph of the succulent garden section that he will use for arboretum publicity purposes.





THE FRONDS OF A New Zealand tree fern make a lacily delicate and cooling pattern on a summer day. Most of the species of plants growing in Strybing Arboretum are "imports" from foreign climes. This is possible, Director John Bryan notes, because San Francisco's own moderate climate is such that plants ranging from the Far North to the semi-tropical can be grown here. And for the professional horticulturist, that makes the Bay Area the perfect place in which to live and work.

GARDEN DEMONSTRATION areas are one of the prime attractions of Strybing Arboretum. Visitors come there to pick up ideas that they can implement in their own yards. Director John Bryan is especially proud of the Sunset Demonstration Garden, a joint project of the Lane Publishing Co. (Sunset Magazine and books) and the Stryblin Arboretum Society. Together with the Hall of Flowers building, the demonstration gardens constitute the official country fairgrounds for San Francisco.

An Unfriendly Survey Of The Nixon Career And Watergate Scandal

THE IMPEACHMENT OF RICHARD NIXON by Leonard Lurie; Berkeley Medallion Books, 208 pages, paperback, 95 cents. Reviewed by Don Keown.

A contest to get the first "Quickie" book relating to the Watergate scandals upon the market was inevitable. This obviously hurried paperback makes Leonard Lurie, if not the winner, at least one of the winners of that race.

Lurie goes a great deal further than a simple review of the Watergate disgrace, and presents instead a bill of indictment — "a call to action, now!" he labels it — for the impeachment of the President.

He even specifies the transgressions which he claims makes Richard Nixon subject to impeachment, and closes his book: "Richard Nixon has confessed to being a criminal and has challenged his peers to do something about it. They owe him the courtesy of an appropriate response."

Lurie brings some background to his self-assigned task of analyzing the motives and the actions of Nixon and his aides, having previously authored such books as "The King Makers" and "The Running of Richard Nixon." He also brings to his latest task a well demonstrated dislike for Nixon and an antagonism for his methods and objectives. Leonard Lurie is no unbiased, objective analyst of the Nixon record.

What Lurie has done is to merge the material he accumulated in his earlier writing upon the Nixon career with the day-to-day revelations that have been made public by the media as the Watergate shenanigans are exposed, thread by thread. Lurie has nothing new to offer upon either the pre-Watergate or the post-Watergate Nixon. The damaging information he relates upon the earlier Nixon has appeared before in his books and in the books of others. The record of Watergate and related matters can be witnessed by the readers, as well as Lurie, on television, and reviewed in the newspapers.

In short, Lurie's book has been written much too early for any serious impact. The record on Watergate is still being compiled. And most Americans, no matter how great their dismay or disgust over what has come forth to date, will prefer to wait until as much of the information as possible has been pried from Executive department recesses and exposed to public light.

The fact that Lurie's paperback includes testimony before the Senate Select Committee headed by Sen. Sam Ervin by a number of its witnesses is revealing of the hurry-up approach taken by the author and publisher. It hardly speaks for cool, considered analysis.

Lurie would probably answer that Nixon's earlier conduct would have sufficed for the impeachment of any civil servant. But the question before the country is not the impeachment of a congressman, a senator, or a vice president, but the future of the man who holds the office now of President. For that, he must be judged on his actions, or failure to act, while in that high position. Although Lurie might argue that the Nixon past establishes a pattern that has continued, to the country's detriment, to the present day.

If Lurie's book has any significance, it is as a source for a quick summary of Richard Nixon's erratic career for those who might not want to devote the necessary time for a fuller, more detailed review available in earlier books; and perhaps for an overall picture of the events of Watergate, etc., that are sometimes confusing and contradictory as they emerge in testimony and in press reports.

But Leonard Lurie cannot be regarded as an unprejudiced observer or evaluator. And the grave question of impeachment, in the still unlikely event that it seriously arises, will have to be decided on the basis of much less hurried judgments and upon a much fuller exploration of the evidence than has been possible for Leonard Lurie.

SOME NEW BOOKS FOR JUNIOR READERS

Dr. Seuss remains the magic name in books for the wee ones.

He demonstrates that he retains his touch for gentle humor and for stimulating young imaginations in his "The Shape of Me and Other Stuff," a Random House "Bright and Early Books for Beginning Beginners" series newcomer.

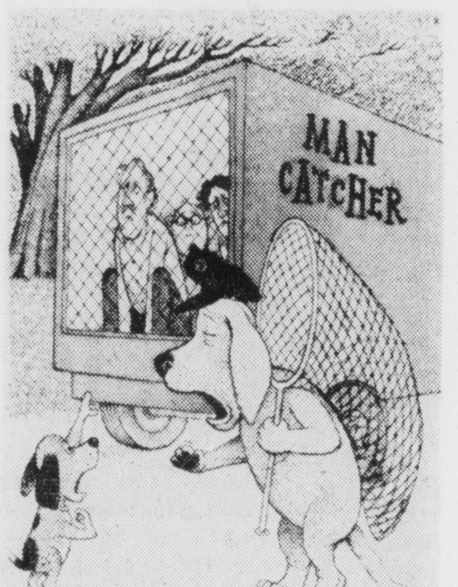
Seuss (Dr. Theodor Seuss Geisel) has produced a variety of shapes in silhouettes as one youngster explores the fascinating world of form to a delightfully poetic accompaniment. Its aim is to instill in the child a new appreciation of shape and its importance. But it is also a great fun romp for the youngster.

For all its simplicity, its a splendid little book. And the publisher is to be commended for keeping the price at a modest $2.50.

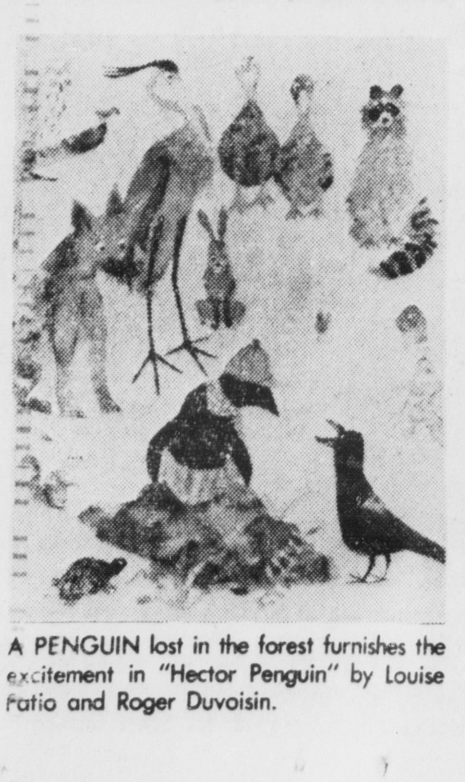
FOR SHEER BEAUTY of illustrations, the watercolors of Symeon Shimin in "The Paint-Box Sea" (McGraw-Hill, $4.95) would be difficult to beat. The talented artist provides some glorious colors to accompany Doris Herold Lund's story of how Jane and her brother use her new birthday paints to depict the sea in all its glorious — and oftchanging — hues. Again, it is a book designed to start the creative juices to flowing and to hone the senses of youngsters. But the Shimin paintings are almost overpowering in their beauty, and may overshadow Mrs. Lund's worthwhile story idea.

A droll little tale is "A Walk Past Ellen's House" (McGraw-Hill, $4.50) by Syd Hoff, syndicated cartoonist with a delightful sense of humor. It is all about one lad bedazzled by the little girl on the block, but afraid to show his interest for fear of teasing by the other boys. Shades of Charlie Brown! The artwork is typically Hoff — funny and friendly.

Richard Armour is another popular humorist who has set his talents to work entertaining children with "The Strange Dreams of Rover Jones" (McGraw-Hill, $3.95). For ages 8 to 80, claims the publisher. In it, Rover dreams about turning the tables on his master, teaching him to fetch his slippers, point out birds, eat on the floor and all the other indignities inflicted upon canines. Tykes will likely howl with laughter. And dad and mom will chuckle, too. The lively drawings are the work of Eric Gurney and fit the tone of the story perfectly.



THE CANINES turn the tables on their masters in humorist Richard Armour's "The Strange Dreams of Rover Jones."



A PENGUIN lost in the forest furnishes the excitement in "Hector Penguin" by Louise Fatio and Roger Duvoisin.

"MORE ABOUT Waggy" (McGraw-Hill, $4.95) returns the appealing woolen dog and his friends dwelling in Little David's room, created by Patricia M. Scarry, for yet more adventures. And again talented Cyndy Szekeres has teamed with Mrs. Scarry to do pictures that should enchant the tots. Timid Lion, Bun-Bun the motherly rabbit, Lumpy the doll and all the others are back for more fun and mischief. It is the kind of cast that endears itself to small ones and never wears out its welcome. There is, for instance, the excitement of the runaway wagon. Or the adventure in the boat. And much, much more.

The title character in "Hector Penguin" (McGraw-Hill, $4.95) is the product of the fertile minds of writer Louise Fatio and Roger Duvoisin, who have scored well with children with their Happy Lion series. Hector should win a lot of friends, too. Accustomed to the zoo, Hector is lost in the forest, where the creatures in the woods, unaccustomed to his like, wonder just what he might be. Hector wonders, too. How he establishes his penguin identity makes an entertaining little tale.

Paddington Bear is another of those children's book characters who won himself a large and loyal following. The Michael Bond creation captivated the tykes with his humorous mishaps and escapades. Now Random House is engaged in bringing him back in repeats of the earlier books, but revised to appeal to younger, just-beginning-to-read boys and girls. The first of the original books, entitled simply "Paddington Bear," is also the first in the new series. There are big, full color pictures on every page by Fred Banbery, and Paddington never looked better. And the price is a bargain, $1.95.

What Brezhnev Thinks Important

ON THE POLICY OF THE SOVIET UNION AND THE INTERNATIONAL SITUATION by Leonid Brezhnev; Doubleday, 261 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

Fortunately, it is not necessary to believe politicians when they write or speak. What we are able to pick up from these political speeches of Leonid Brezhnev is what Brezhnev thinks demands the focus of his propaganda efforts.

From 'On The Policy of The Soviet Union and The International Situation," it is possible to identify a number of situations worthy of special comment by Brezhnev. He feels called upon to defend specifically the actions of the Soviet Union in the matter of Czechoslovakia.

To Westerners the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia certainly seemed like an agressive act. To Brezhnev, who quotes the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Czechoslovakia, it looks somewhat different;

'. . . the entry of the allied troops of the five socialist countries into Czechoslovakia was an act of international solidarity, meeting both the common interests of the Czechoslovakian working people and the interests of the international working class, the socialist community and the movement. This internationalist act saved the lives of thousands of men, insured internal and external conditions for peaceful and tranquil labor, strengthened the Western borders of the socialist camp, and blasted the hopes of the imperialist circles for a revision of the results of the Second World War."

We can ignore Brezhnev's reasoning. What we should not overlook is that at the 24th Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, several years after the fact, Brezhnev felt that he had to bring up the question of Czechoslovakia, which leads one to believe that all of the rationalizations have not quieted all of the internal criticism.

The second fascinating topic Brezhnev touches on is the relationship between the Soviet Union and the Peoples' Republic of China.

In regard to China, Brezhnev's domestic political instincts are better than his historical perspective. At a time when the failure of Russian agriculture requires the importation of American wheat, it is good to have an alternative demon against whom domestic frustrations can be released. Ignoring the fact that China and The Soviet Union have had border difficulties for several hundred years, Brezhnev points out, to the amusement of many of us who have followed Sino-Soviet relationships from the Comintern to the present day,

". . . it is common knowledge that our country rendered the Chinese Communists substantial aid in their struggle against the Japanese aggressors and the Chinese bourgeois."

Mao Tse-Tung would never agree. The Soviet trained leaders were constantly in opposition to him as they tried to apply urban Marxist solutions to agrarian Chinese problems.

Brezhnev goes on to say,

". . . the part played in the history of the Peoples' democratic revolution in China by the Soviet armies defeating the Japanese forces occupying China, is also common knowledge."

The target audience for this speech is not identified so we do not learn exactly for whom this historical fabrication is "common knowledge." It is obviously neither a Chinese nor an American audience, both of whom may be presumed to have a different picture of Russia's role in the Far Eastern aspects of World War II. It does raise interesting questions as to what Russians and other Eastern Europeans are being taught about The Great Patriotic War, as the Russians call it.

After describing the honeymoon period in Sino-Soviet relations when the USSR assisted the Chinese in their industrial development, Brezhnev comes to the present deterioration of the relationship, states the Russian position and places the blame:

. . . we want to see China a flourishing socialist power, and to work shoulder to shoulder with her for peace, against imperialism. But when this will come about depends on China herself. Nothing, of course, will make us depart from our principled Marxist-Leninist line, from our firm defense of the state interests of the Soviet people and the inviolability of Soviet territory, from our determined struggle against the devisive activities of the P(eoples') R(epublic) C(hina) leadership in the socialist world and the liberation movement."

Political speeches don't make fascinating reading. These are no exception. They do give us an opportunity to see what Russia's number one man says for home consumption when justifying Russian foreign policy. He isn't constrained by Marxist, internationalist ideological purity. He does what any capitalist, nationalist politician would do. He uses any technique necessary to rationalize and justify his interpretation of the Russian national interest.

Detente In Siberia — A Century Before The Bearhug

THE COWBOY AND THE COSSACK by Clair Huffaker; Trident Press, 352 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by John D. Yates.

Leonid I. Brezhnev had not been in Washington an hour before he had held Nixon's hand, grasped the 150-pound President in a bear-like hug, clutched the already cringing Chief Executive by the elbow a couple of times, and then whispered something intimate in Richard's ear — and all before the TV cameras.

Brezhnev was probably sober at that time of the morning, and it is altogether probable that Nixon had not taken a nip either, so it was conceivable that a few palms began to sweat in the office of the Chief of Protocol upon viewing this display of Russian affection (or possibly affectation). What might happen at the end of the formal visit? After toasts in vodka, California champagne, White House Bourbon and Scotch, the emotional farewells could really get out of hand. Would the Russian leader do a very Russian thing and kiss Richard Nixon on the lips?

It was possible, and a back-up plan must have been devised in that eventuality: Should Nixon respond with enthusiasm and treat the viewing world to a tableau of the leaders of the two most powerful countries in the world locked in an emotional embrace, or should Nixon do a Puritan pull-back and risk a sort of violent rejection? What really happened was that restraint won out, and we were not treated to an emotional Russian farewell.

CLAIR HUFFAKER
A bridge between peoples

But the very existence of a U.S.-Soviet detente (and the emergence of a latter-day Entente Cordiale) is a flip-flop of extraordinary proportions. A few years ago Richard Nixon was being very rude to Russians, and bragging with the minimum of taste about the superiority of American kitchens over Russian kitchens. The fellow who had the misfortune to have to listen to all that puerile nonsense responded that he would like to "bury" the United States. So the hate period produced an arms race that may be impossible to turn off completely, even in these more enlightened days. And that arms race mortally wounded both the super powers from an economic standpoint. Because it is a matter of survival they have made up —at least temporarily. Thus Brezhnev's tremendous show of affection for Nixon.

In this era of Detente, Clair Huffaker's book about cowboys and Cossacks will probably be a favorite on both sides of the now porous Iron Curtain. A Russian translation of the book has already been completed, and publication in the Soviet Union will follow shortly. The story is about two of the world's toughest breed of men, alike in so many ways including their ability to survive the cruelest climates; significant differences were divergent tongues and weapons — for one the six-shooter, for the other a saber.

Illustrated with line drawings by Brad Holland, the story begins simply enough on a cold spring day in 1880, when 15 American cowboys sail into Vladivostock with a herd of 500 cattle for delivery to a famine-stricken town deep in Siberia. Assigned to work with them is a band of Cossacks.

From the first day, distrust and rivalry between Americans and Russians disrupt the cattle drive. Only the inspired leadership of Shad and Rostove — cowboy foreman and Cossack captain — plus the rich vein of humor native to both sides, prevent nationalism and personal pride from tearing the group apart. Hardships along the trail — flash floods, attacks by wolves and tigers, outbreaks of civil war and a climactic battle with a Tartar army — bring the two groups of men together in trust and mutual respect that knows no national or racial barriers.

It is all offered as further proof that it is only politicians who wreck our international relationships, and if it was left to men of common interests and motivations there would be no suspicions or contrived barriers.

Clair Huffaker is the author of 10 Western novels, and 200 short stories. After travels across the length and breadth of Russia via the Trans-Siberian Railroad, he produced this superb story in its unique setting. The author hopes it "will be a kind of emotional and spiritual bridge between the Russian and American peoples. . ."

BROWSING BOOKMAN

What is almost a foreign language in itself has developed around the new computer technology.

To help you through the maze, Norman and Eileen Sondak have compiled "The Layman's Dictionary of Computer Terminology," published by Hawthorn at $10.95.

If you have encountered and been baffled by such wordage as "delimiter," "integer programming," "truncation error" and "entropy," the Sondaks (he is the head of the Computer Science Department at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Worcester, Mass., and she shares his work) will clear up your questions.

The book, however, seems somewhat overpriced, even in these inflationary days, for a relatively thin reference work.

THERE WAS a time when comedian Dick Gregory weighed a flabby 280 pounds. Today, he's lean as any athlete. And he gives the credit to his fruitarian diet.

He discusses that diet in his "Dick Gregory's Natural Diet for Folks Who Eat: Cookin' with Mother Nature" (Harper & Row, $6.95). With help from his teacher Dr. Alvenia Fulton, Gregory extolls the virtues of apples, pears, peaches, plums, oranges and all the other good things grown on trees. He discusses, too, his propensity for and experiences at fasting. And he puts the blast on the Soul Food traditionally favored by his race. "I personally would say that the quickest way to wipe out a group of people is to put them on a soul food diet." he declares.

Gregory is witty, as one would expect, and quite evidently sincere in his dietary beliefs. But it goes without saying that not everyone is prepared to foreswear the eating not only of meats, but of many other foods as well. The Gregory willpower should impress you, even if his logic does not.

CATS ARE unquestionably among the most photogenic of God's creatures, and thus the 160 color photos by Creszentia Anna Allen of felines of all kinds, ages and sizes steal the show in "Cats 'n Kittens," published by Arco at $5.95 hardboard, $7.95 library edition. But Ted Allen has contributed a text that covers the history of the cats, advice on choosing and caring for a cat, and the special characteristics of the various breeds. A delight for the cat enthusiast.

The Non-Answer To Crime Problem

THE NEW RED BARN: A Critical Look at the Modern American Prison, by William G. Nagel; Walker, 284 pages, $12.50 clothbound, $5.95 paperback. Reviewed by Albert F. Nussbaum.

Prison is a place where you write a letter once in a while; receive a letter once in a while, if you are lucky; and the years pass. Your wife remarries, your parents die, and your kids grow up calling someone else Dad. Friends and relatives "forget" to send you their new addresses when they move, and you get the feeling the bars were installed to shut people out as much as to keep you in.

So you lose yourself in work and books and hobbies; but there are times when you sit in the crowded messhall, or stand in the center of the exercise yard with hundreds of men around you, and you are so overcome with loneliness and frustration that you want to scream.

The four most often stated reasons for the existence of prisons are: (1) to rehabilitate convicted persons; (2) to punish offenders; (3) to provide a place for preventive detention; and (4) to deter people from committing crimes. Just how well prisons perform some of these functions, and how miserably they fail at others, is the subject of "The New Red Barn."

William Nagel visited over 100 of America's "correctional" institutions in 26 states, gathering the material for this well-written and perceptive view of prison. It is probably as honest and accurate an evaluation as any that has been written; and he carries it the next logical step — he suggests changes and improvements and alternatives.

The reader learns that no one — neither prisoners, nor guards, nor society — is made better by prisons. Prisons are lawless places where all that is most valuable to a man — love, loyalty, manly pride — waste away. Like an oil painting or a poem, a prison cell is shaped as much by what is left out as by what it contains. Reform isn't only big projects like prison hospitals and educational centers.

At its most basic, reform is recognizing the fact that prisoners are human and have human needs.

THE REVIEWER: WHO HE IS

Albert Nussbaum, the reviewer of this and other books for the Independent-Journal Marin Living, is a freelance writer serving a 40-year sentence at the U.S. Penitentiary in Marion, Ill., for multiple bank robberies. His articles and short stories have appeared in a wide range of periodicals, from The American Scholar to Alfred Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine.

Whatever question crime may pose, "The New Red Barn" does a fine job of proving that prison isn't the answer.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

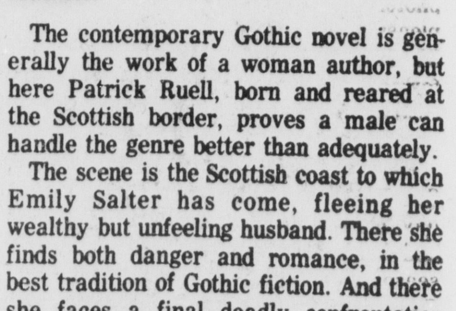
CRIME BY CHANCE by Elizabeth Linington; Lippincott, 273 pages, $5.95.

DON'T WEAR YOUR WEDDING RING by Lillian O'Donnell; Putnam, 222 pages, $4.95.

It was a mistake for this fan of Elizabeth Linington's police procedural novels to follow her latest Ivor Maddox yarn with a reading of Lillian O'Donnell's "Don't Wear Your Wedding Ring." However reluctantly, we must admit that Mrs. O'Donnell outpoints the more experienced Miss Linington rather decisively.

"Don't Wear Your Wedding Ring" has been written loosely around a newsbreak of some time back when police cracked a prostitution ring in which bored young upper middleclass housewives were selling their bodies. The scene is New York City, and Detective Norah Mulcahaney is the central figure among the team of investigators, facing all the special problems of a woman working in a man's field, along with the normal difficulties of the big city police officer. Mrs. O'Donnell makes Detective Mulcahaney and her colleagues interesting and believable, and only at the very end does her well blueprinted plot become a mite frayed.

In "Crime By Chance," on the other hand, Maddox, his police woman wife Sue and the other personnel at Wilcox Street Police Station are more diffused in their interests and activities, although a chief concern is the location of a young mother who has vanished with her baby. It seems to us that Maddox et al are a bit below par in this one, but then, again, that might be the result of the comparison with Mrs. O'Donnell's excellent book.



Anyway, both novels are well worth your reading time.

THE CASTLE OF THE DEMON by Patrick Ruell; Hawthorn, 184 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The contemporary Gothic novel is generally the work of a woman author, but here Patrick Ruell, born and reared at the Scottish border, proves a male can handle the genre better than adequately.

The scene is the Scottish coast to which Emily Salter has come, fleeing her wealthy but unfeeling husband. There she finds both danger and romance, in the best tradition of Gothic fiction. And there she faces a final deadly confrontation with her terrorizers.

One of the better characters in the novel is a dog. But it is the Scottish setting and secondary characters that will please the reader most. It's a pleasant little chiller that gets just a bit farfetched in its conclusion.

English Countryside Still A Bargain

By GEORGE BARKER

It is still possible to spend three weeks in Europe and not be reduced to begging on your return to Marin.

We drove a little, red Hillman Estate about the English countryside, stayed at country hotels and ate very well at prices which compare favorably with those in the U.S. — even with the twice devalued dollar.

We took Pan American's non-stop flight from San Francisco to London, which is very reasonable (about $400 round trip) and takes about 12 hours.

We received our first lesson in money in the jet age as soon as we cleared customs in London. Although we had had extensive correspondence with Avis about the car and had arranged for it to be ready for us at Heathrow Airport, we hadn't reckoned on paying almost $500 deposit. Avis assumed we'd carry at least one credit card. All we had was our Chevron card, and that wouldn't do. We paid.

Next time, we take a bank credit card.

AFTER GETTING lost somewhere around the town of Leatherhead and wandering about for an hour or so, receiving conflicting directions from an assortment of village idiots, we finally hit the road to Tonbridge Wells where we had reservations at the Spa Hotel.

English country hotels have a distinctive Victorian flavor. Most are old and many are simply old homes remodeled.

For example, in Lyme Regis in Dorsetshire, the High Cliff Hotel was once the home of Dr. Joseph Lister, the father of antiseptic surgery. While in adjacent Uplyme the Devon Hotel had been a monastery. The Spa was obviously built as a hotel in England's greater days — thick stone walls like a fortress and a park with huge trees and gardens in back.

ALL THE HOTELS we saw were clean and comfortable. The best were managed by a family, where all the members pitched in to help make the guests feel comfortable.

We stayed at two motels — a relatively new phenomena in England. They were as up-to-date as any anywhere, but they were still distinctly English. One of them, the Mendip Motel outside Frome in Somerset, has a lovely setting amid large trees full of singing birds and with a view across the green pastures and gently rolling hills.

The meals at the country hotels were surprisingly good and very reasonable, with dinners averaging about $3 each. I say "surprisingly good" because the English are not noted for being great chefs. However, this trip we had only one bad eal and that was where the kitchen staff was absent, leaving the manager to struggle with the cooking.

WE HAD MUCH good meat, a variety of vegetables and a choice of good desserts, ranging from rich, mouth-watering cakes to fresh strawberries with thick country cream. The rough, garlicky Dorset pate was delicious and the Devon and Cornish clotted cream teas with strawberry jam and scones were beyond belief.

These are good places to forget the cholesterol and diet of home.

A room with twin beds and bath cost us on average about $25 for the two of us, including value added tax, service charge and huge, many-coursed breakfasts which offered everything from fruit juices, prunes, cereals, toast and marmalade to smoked haddock, sausage, ham, bacon and any style eggs.

ALL THE COUNTRY hotel rooms were cavernous. They contained beds with soft, down-filled mattresses over which were layers of good quality sheets, thick blankets topped by a two inch thick down comforter. The English don't go to bed — they return to the womb.

With all this bedding, it's impossible not to be warm. Sometimes they augment this with a hot water bottle. Too hot for my taste. I put aside the down comfort.

Most country hotels have only a few rooms with private baths. However, this May we only had to share the communal bathroom once and it was clean and no ordeal.

May and September are the best months to visit England, in my opinion. The weather is usually not too bad, the flowers are pretty and abundant, and one avoids the droves of English "trippers" who hit the road on Bank Holiday weekends.

WE SPENT MOST of our three weeks in various little coastal villages in Dorset, Devon and Cornwall — Lyme Regis, West Looe, Mousehold and St. Ives. Then we took a motorway to north of Birmingham to Stoke-on-Trent, where we visited Wedgewood, Royal Doulton, Spode and some of the other china potteries. We returned to Kent through the Cotswold country and turned the car into Avis at Canterbury.

We returned to London by train and took a taxi from Victoria Station to the Pan Am depot nearby, and back to Heathrow Airport.

It was not a trip for nightclubbers or culture-vultures. If big cities are your passion, this may bore you.

But for those interested in flowers and hedgerows, birdsong, and the sight of cattle and sheep grazing peacefully, quaint villages and narrow roads, fresh air and a chance to become acquainted with some rural English and their way of life, this trip is hard to beat. And it's economical.

MUCH OF THE enjoyment of touring rural England comes in the opportunities it affords the American to meet and get to know the English people —such as this fresh-faced, bright-eyed young Briton with a bouquet of flowers picked for "mom" in hand.

For The Balinese, Cremation Is A Happy Occasion

By MURRAY J. BROWN

DENPASAR, Bali (UPI) — "If you are lucky you may also observe a cremation . . ."

That's what it said on page 212 of my guidebook on Bali.

I shuddered — I had seen the pictures of public cremations in other Asian countries and that kind of luck I didn't want.

But when I quoted the guidebook to our Balinese guide, he smiled and said, "yes, perhaps we will be lucky — it is a very joyous ceremony."

I DIDN'T GET to see a cremation ceremony during our four-day visit to this fabled island in Indonesia.

But the Balinese, who practice a unique religion called Bali-Hindu based on Hinduism, Buddhism and island worship, have no fear of death, I was told. They believe in reincarnation and regard death as passing from this life to a far better one.

It is a most joyous time, colorful . . . with the body covered by a large paper, a beautifully decorated horse, cow or fish," an islander said. "Then they are consumed by flames and taken in ashes in a long procession to the sea, to be scattered on the waters."

USUALLY, THE funeral procession is led by a gamelan orchestra which includes flutes, bamboo instruments, cymbals and urn-shaped gongs struck with small hammers. Women, dressed in their best finery, bear baskets and trays of offerings for the gods while the men carrying the body shout and zig-zag sharply to confound the evil spirits.

Incidentially, our guide recalled his grandfather as saying Balinese families should have five children. "Four to carry the body and the fifth to carry the shade umbrella."

Deeply religious, the Balinese believe in good and evil spirits. Every family has its own temple where offerings of rice and flowers are made to the gods every day. In addition, each village has a large temple and shrines stand in the fields and along the roads. All in all, we were told, there are about 20,000 temples and shrines on Bali.

TO KEEP OUT evil spirits, a wall is erected a few feet inside the main entrance to a family compound or home. Persons entering must make sharp left or right turns. According to the Balinese belief, evil spirits cannot enter because they move only in a straight path.

Many Balinese outside the major cities still live in family compounds, usually consisting of a number of buildings and an open space or garden, enclosed by a high thick wall. Each building serves a different purpose — for instance, one may be the kitchen, another the sleeping quarters and still another the workshop.

Bali has many attractions, even for the experienced traveler.

THERE ARE numerous interesting villages only a short distance from this capital city and the Bali beach hotels — Mas, which is noted for its wood carvings, and Ubud, a center of Balinese painting, with a large colony of artists, among others.

Just driving through the lush countryside pays extra dividends: doll-like children perched on the rumps of plodding oxen, graceful women in colorful sarongs balancing burdens on their heads or hips, and peasants in shorts and cone-shaped hats stooping in the flooded rice fields or working the terraced farmlands rising like steps carved out of hillsides by giants.

Then there are the golden sand beaches, fringed with palm trees — like something out of Gauguin — where only the gentle swish of the sea breaks the early morning and late evening silence. And there are the jungles made noisy by the chatter of monkeys and the cries of strange exotic birds, and the breathtaking scenic beauty of mirror-like lakes and thickly forested montains.

STRIKING — TO this visitor at least — was the happiness of the young and old and their friendliness toward the stranger. "Selamat Datang" (welcome) was the first word I heard when I boarded a Garuda Indonesian airliner in Singapore for the flight here.

And the smile on the face of the very attractive stewardess made me feel she meant it. The feeling was reinforced by other Indonesians I came in contact with during my stay.

I visited Bali with a group of 15 U.S. travel writers as guests of the Indonesian Tourists Promotion Board, Garuda, Pan American World Airways and American Express. It was the last stop on a 15-day, three-nation tour in the Far East.

The international airport outside Denpasar is serviced by a number of international airlines in addition to Garuda. Pan Am has a direct flight from Hong Kong, for instance, which continues on to Sydney. Passengers departing on international flights pay a 600 rupiahs (about $1.75) departure tax.

There are shops in the modern terminal for any last-minute purchases.

To Recharge Those Batteries, Hike

There are few leisure time activities more personally rewarding than a good hike through the wilderness. And it doesn't matter whether that "wilderness" is a bonafide stretch of wild country or a nearby forest patch.

One can hike by himself or with others.

ONE OF THE BASICS of the sport of hiking is the well-equipped knapsack, carrying such essentials as extra socks, a first aid kit and soap. For the outdoorsman who properly plans his stroll through the wilderness, the pleasures that reward him can be found in few other leisure-time pursuits.

He can move at his own pace, and range wherever he likes, usually limited only by his desire and stamina. And in today's pressure cooker world, a leisurely hike among the glories of nature can do much to "recharge one's batteries."

There are certain routine rules of the hike that the hiker should observe if he wants to get the most out of his efforts. They're simple, but they deserve mention because they often go unheeded.

1. An absolute must: Always wear footwear designed for outdoor use. Particularly good for this purpose are boots which give ankles that much needed support.

2. On longer hikes, carry along an extra pair of socks. Any former G.I. can tell you about the lift a cool, clean pair of socks will give tired feet on a long trek.

3. Know in advance the area you will be tramping through and dress accordingly. If your hike takes you through rugged underbrush, for example, it's only prudent to make sure your skin is protected by enough clothing. If in doubt about the terrain, it's always easier to overdress and strip down as needed, than to be dressed inadequately and pay the uncomfortable price of scratches and abrasions.

4. Make sure you're in good physical shape before trying the season's first extended hike. Never push yourself beyond your limits. Fatigue breeds carelessness. An accident at the worst, or sore muscles at best, are often the results.

5. Short trip or long, never venture out without a fully equipped first aid kit. Any first aid manual will provide a checklist. Add a bar of antibacterial soap.

Mother Nature will provide many hours of pleasure and fulfillment for the well-prepared hiker. But she will play havoc with those who fail to show a healthy respect for her world.

Seeing France By Slow Boat

Cheval-Voyage, the French men who launches horse-drawn wagons to explore secluded by-ways in Quercy and Brittany at four miles per hour, thought perhaps travelers might like the same pace on France's little-known canals and waterways.

New Nautic-Voyage (located at 8, Rue de Milan, Paris 9) has cabin-cruisers and houseboats for individual rental to launch vacations afloat.

Cabin-cruisers accommodating four to six people leave the Camargue's Port Cassafiere with its access to two different Midi canals. One cruise route threads Aquitaine, the Pyrenees and Cevennes while the alternate plies the wilder Camargue. Handling the helm is easy, no license is necessary, and a quick repair service is always on call. Cabin-cruisers for four range from $120-$300 per week depending upon the season.

For those who prefer the canals of Burgundy, houseboats comfortably sleeping four start from the picturesque town of Verdun-sur-le-Doubs for a weeks' cruise, beginning any Saturday or Sunday. Reservations for both must be made 30 days in advance.

While In South America Try To Think Small

By CECILIA BROWN

"But aren't you afraid?"

This is the question I always get when I own up to a penchant for the small places in South America.

Not that the capitals and cities of industry aren't grand, glorious and impressive — for they are. But like many city folks, I enjoy getting removed from the bustle — which is easy to do in South America, for much of that vast continent is rural.

"Don't you find those little places terribly primitive?" is the other question.

Well, I find them naive, maybe — in that computerized sophistication has not yet replaced the genuinely outgoing friendliness of the country family.

MY FIRST experience with out-of-the-way places occured in Colombia, when I went to watch a local folk festival in the hope of getting the feel of some part of the country outside of Bogota. It was in Ibaque, a pretty valley town, and because it was relatively small I supposed I might be the only tourist. Which is to say, I did not take the precaution of assuring myself of a place to sleep.

And of course I was wrong; seemingly hundreds of Colombians had come from other communities to watch the dancing and the musical competitions.

But something happened that I've since found is rather typical. The lone hotelier, of whom I'd inquired for rooms, mentioned my plight to one or two of the townspeople . . . and as a result I was, before the evening's end, entertained by a group for cocktails; gathered into er group for a stand-up picnic of the many festival foods; invited to a beautiful party in an elegant mansion given for the festival's dignitaries; and — unbelievably — given a bedroom in a luxurious apartment belonging to the local furniture merchant.

AN ISOLATED instance, you say?

Only a few months later, in a village deep in the Macarena jungles of Colombia where I had been photographing, the plane that was supposed to pick me up was delayed a day. And unhesitatingly the family in the house nearest the airstrip made me welcome — in the place of honor, a sleeping hammock in the living room.

In Brazil, Rio is stupendously impressive — but the little mountain town of Petropolis captured my heart. Not only for the scenery, although that in itself is delightful, as the place is nestled into green hills and bisected by a little river that runs along the main street, but because one wanders through quiet lanes and inevitably somebody stops to chat.

Two days in Petropolis, and you know all the people.

LANGUAGE barrier! Not really; some 500 words of Spanish and a dictionary of the Portuguese they use in Brazil, covered the situation very nicely.

I've always loved all of Ecuador, but the northern town of Otavalo became an instant favorite. The Indians for which the town is named, who are as clean as a deodorant ad, are picturesque in their white jump suits with blue ponchos — but they are also pleasurable to get acquainted with.

The Otavalans are inordinately proud of the tapestries they weave, and nearly go into ecstasies when a visitor wants to learn the technique; and the small colony of Ecuadorians and the sprinkling of Americans (mostly missionaries) make an interesting and open-hearted population mixture.

MOST ALL the cities in Uruguay are small, as befits this tiny country, but the community of Maldonado — east of Montevideo, on the way to Punta del Este — is a pleasant village with an overlay of Spanish Colonial ruins. Punta del Este itself is no bigger than a suburb — a place that seems all beach.

(And what beaches! Broad, lined with excellent restaurants — that's where I discovered pickled pigeon — and full of beaming families who come laden with umbrellas, chairs and hampers of pungent goodies.)

No, the little towns don't all fade into just one long South American glow; a close acquaintance shows each one to be different.

THE JUNGLE wonders of Belem and Manaus, in Brazil are soul-seizing — and upriver, there's Peru's port on the Upper Amazon, Iquitos. The communities in Paraguay's Gran Chaco (a sort of Great Swamp) are peopled with hunters and craftsmen, who have an unbridled curiosity about the visitor — enough so as to overcome their natural shyness.

In Argentina's Patagonia area, the lake towns of Chile, the lofty mountain villages of Bolivia, the seaside villages in Venezuela, Surinam and Panama — the story is the same. Intimate surroundings, friendly people, and a special sort of appreciation for the quality of rural life — its butterflies, wild orchids, brilliant lupin, fields of wildflowers, scattered lakes, stern Andean mountains and varied seashore.

As Summer Fades, There Are Must Jobs In Garden

By MILLICENT TAYLOR
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

This is do-it-yourself time of year in the garden — a time of upkeep while enjoying it.

If the days are warm, do a little each day, in early morning or in the cool of the evening.

For example, give the lawn a real lift by inviting it to partake of a breakfast or supper. It will perk right up with that late summer feeding. This, along with deep watering, should help it to cope with any long hot spells without getting brown.

HAVE YOU A vigorous crop of weeds — especially plantain and crabgrass? If so, you can give your grasses a better chance if you spread a turf food that contains a weed killer.

And be sure to water the lawn thoroughly after applying the plant food. This will remove it from the leaves and send it down into the soil where it can go to work.

Since you have been watering heavily nutrients may have leached out of the soil in both lawn and garden. In any case, fairly frequent feedings will be welcomed by the flower border. You can scatter and work in lightly an all-purpose fertilizer, watering it in; or you can do leaf feeding with a water-soluble plant food.

Some gardeners do this every two weeks.

LEAFY VEGETABLES such as tomatoes, squash, and cucumbers respond well to foliar feeding, too. But others such as corn should receive their plant food in the soil. Along your rows of beans you can work in plant food as you cultivate.

Give each rose bush a couple of spoonfuls of rose food about every two weeks well into fall to keep them happy and strong.

As you walk about enjoying the garden, take along a basket and shears or clippers and snip off all spent blooms of annuals and perennials, including roses. This will prevent seed formation and encourage more bloom. It is especially important with hardy phlox, which seeds readily.

The volunteer seedlings that soon come up will fill next season's borders with magenta blooms instead of the color you planted.

HAVE YOUR pansies grown sprawly? Resolutely cut them back and give them plenty of organic plant food (they like dry manure). This will so cheer them they will start blooming again later on and be gay way into autumn.

Trimming the edges of flower beds and walks is a highly rewarding chore. A few minutes at a time can do wonders to improve the looks of the whole place. Hand shears can be used. There are also trimmers run by batteries and others that can be charged through the house electric outlets.

On the market is a spray can filled with a product that, if sprayed along the edge, kills growth. There are also rolls of metal guard to press down along the edge of the border to keep the grass roots from invading the flowerbeds, and there are long-handled tools for cutting the turf along walks.

SPRING-FLOWERING shrubs should have been trimmed back as soon after blooming as possible. Summer-flowering shrubs are trimmed in the fall.

It is important to remove every one of the spent trusses of rhododendron as soon as the flowers have faded; but be sure to do this without damaging the circle of buds just starting into growth at the base of the flower stem. This is the time to give rhodos and azaleas their first feeding too, of special azalea-rhodo-camellia acid plant food.

Privet and other hedges, if kept to a formal shape, should be trimmed a little each year. Leave them wider at the base to keep them from growing leggy.

Forsythia should not be grown as a formal hedge, as you sometimes see it. It may need trimming of non-blooming suckers and weak or dead wood underneath. Its natural shape is graceful and spready. It should be grown where it has room for its beautiful fountain shape.

OTHER SHRUBS attractive as informal mass plantings should also have weak or rampant growth removed. They bloom on new growth.

Fine-needled conifers like yews can be pruned any time, but the best is just after they have put out their new light-green growth. Trim off some of this if you need to shape them.

Long-needled conifers like pines, cedars, and spruces, can be restrained by trimming back the new center shoots.

Most vines need very little pruning. If, however, you have a wisteria, pruning each year is important. It can become rampant. Also, pruning will encourage more bloom.

IN SOUTHERN California, the practice is to prune most heavily at the end of the spring blooming season. But in many regions summer tipping of new growth will encourage flowering. In the fall, all new growth if cut back to spurs of two buds each will help the vine produce more flowers the following spring.

Honeysuckle, after blooming, should be headed back and thinned severely or it may get out of hand. Suckers that reach the ground are likely to root. Keep it pruned to shape and it will bloom better and be neat and bushy.

All the general-purpose garden books give extensive advice on feeding, watering, trimming, and pruning, and most also present a few pruning illustrations.

There are also special books on pruning — a subject most of us know less about. So if you feel the need of more pruning information and diagrams you might borrow or buy one.

A USEFUL volume that recently came my way is "The Pruning Handbook" by Roy L. Hudson. It is a sturdily bound magazine-size paperback, from Prentice-Hall, Englewood Cliffs, N.J., at $2.95.

Hudson is a past president of the California Horticultural Society and a retired director of Strybing Arboretum, Recreation and Park Department, San Francisco. The book is lavishly illustrated with diagrams, and deals extensively with pruning trees, shrubs, and vines, including handling each named variety separately.

It is as complete a treatment of the subject in compact form as I have seen, and should give any do-it-yourselfer quite a bit of know-how.

OVERFLOWING WITH annuals, this six-by-nine-foot planter is the focal point of a patio on a sloping lot. The box was built on-site from four-by-six rough-sawn western cedar, with two pieces flat and then one on edge in an alternation pattern. The flat cap of two-by-sixes has mitered corners.

To Perk Up Patio, Planter

The large patio or terrace calls for a bold accent, especially on a sloping lot that competes for attention with a valley panorama or a blue sweep of sky.

Color, form and texture all can be added to a patio with a big planter filled with flowers. For informal gardening on a large scale, the bolder the materials used the better.

One couple who built their home on a hill with a sweeping view added a raised deck on the side of the house facing the vista. But there was still the problem of the backyard, sloping downhill parallel to the back of the house, rather than away from it.

WITH THE HELP of a landscape architect, the sloping yard was opened up fully to utility and beauty, while blending with the wooded hillside at the back property line.

Several terraces, also oriented to the view, were added. The main one is set off by a six-by-nine foot planter box built of materials complementing the distinctive step-down screen fence at the back of the terrace.

The three-foot high box was built of four-by-six inch rough-sawn cedar, set together vertically rather than horizontally as usual. An alternating pattern was gained by placing two four-by-sixes flat, then one on edge.

THE WALLS OF four-by-sixes are held together by two horizontal stringers of two-by-fours around the inside of the box, and by the cap of flat two-by-sixes, with mitered corners, around the top of the box.

Stability also is provided by setting the planter into the ground, with a gravel base for drainage. The wood was preservative-treated, since it is exposed continuously to moisture.

Your plants can consist of one or a mixture of several of the many colorful summer-blooming annuals available in flower at the nurseries, including the always popular petunias or the attractive dwarf marigolds and zinnias.

The Inorganic Side Of The Argument About Fertilizers

By EARL ARONSON

Our expert today deals with organic farming and understanding how plants utilize nutrients in the soil.

The term "organic," according to Dr. Maurice L. Vitosh of Michigan State University, generally refers to growing crops with natural fertilizers (plant and animal materials) without the help of manufactured chemical fertilizers.

"IN COMPARING organic and inorganic materials, it is a fallacy to think plants considered organically grown are produced from organic nutrients," says Vitosh. "Before a plant can take up nutrients from organic material in the soil, the material must first be broken down and converted to inorganic nutrients. Therefore, the so-called organically produced food actually is inorganically grown."

This means that when a plant takes up a nutrient from the soil, it neither knows nor cares whether the nutrient was manufactured in a chemical fertilizer or grew naturally in plant or animal materials.

"Chemical fertilizers," Vitosh adds, "can provide a readily available source of nutrients where optimum conditions do not exist for organic materials in the soil to decompose or convert to nutrients."

IT IS A MATTER of economics whether to use chemical fertilizer, he says. Several tons per acre of organic fertilizer are needed to prevent nutrient deficiencies in many field crops.

Use organic fertilizer where it is available inexpensively, he advises gardeners.

Vitosh says the inorganic fertilizer, nitrogen, actually creates organic matter in soil. It helps plant growth, thus increasing the quality of organic plant residues returned to the soil as stalks, stems, leaves and roots.

And in his defense of inorganic fertilizers, Vitosh says there was no scientific evidence that food grown without them was more nutritional or better tasting.

A CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

The Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓For a colorful display in the fall and winter garden, plant such berry-producing shrubs as pyracantha, holly, toyon and cotoneaster now.

✓Now is the time to start thinking about winter vegetable crops. These can be planted now: cabbage, cauliflower, brussels sprouts, carrots, beets, turnips, onion sets and garden peas.

✓Take long stems when cutting roses. This renews the established bush. Feed roses if it has been a month since the last feeding. This will help promote a good fall bloom that will be the equal of your summer show.

✓Lantana provides quick color this month. Even in the coldest climes, more and more gardeners are using frost-tender lantana because it is a source of continual color for the summer garden. They treat it as an annual. Here where dipping temperatures aren't a consideration, we can rely on lantana for months and months of bright color in the permanent landscape.

✓Divide and replant crowded perennial plants.

✓For an instant lawn, consider the easy technique of "sodding."

HIDDEN ENTRANCES TO YOUR HOME?

A home anywhere in Marin County might have several hidden entrances and some very unwanted intruders. Termites!

Mud tubes like those shown above are built by subterranean termites to sneak into Marin's nicest homes. Termites invite themselves into both new and old homes. And contrary to popular belief, they love dining at homes built on concrete-slab floors (especially ones with radiant heat). In fact, 60% of all Marin homes have termites present right now.

Once inside, the termites eat their unsuspecting hosts out of house and home. Literally.

Termites eat wood. And since these extremely social insects live in giant nests with up to 250,000 relatives, having the family up to dinner can be a very expensive proposition.

The termite workers shuttle up and down constantly, carrying bits of wood back to the nest. But they are masters at keeping their activity hidden. They work inside of walls and floors, then span open spaces with mud tubes. So a considerable portion of your house can be out to lunch before you know it!

Every homeowner in Marin should check regularly for termite mud tubes around his foundation, post footings, garage, fences, and particularly in winter, the hot water heater and furnace areas. If tubes are found, call Hinkley & Gordon immediately.

Hinkley & Gordon is a state-licensed structural pest control company. For two generations, we've been providing Marin's most expert and thorough pest control services.

The cost of a Hinkley & Gordon inspection is just $35 for the average Marin home. And it certainly beats allowing a sneak attack on your home investment.

FOR THE GOOD OLD SUMMER-TIME

MARIN COUNTY is not unlike most places in that summer is the time when barbecues and patio parties reach their zenith. But here the season is much longer than less favored climes, and the outdoor living often continues late into the fall. To get the most enjoyment out of those open air meals, sturdy, comfortable outdoor furniture is a necessity. With the help of a Steve Ellingson pattern, dad can build the table and benches shown at right, and provide his flock with what soon will become their favorite dining area. To get started, send $1 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and include your zip code number. Ellingson estimates that a handyman can complete the project in about three evenings. The table top is more than four feet in diameter and will seat eight people — but it can be made bigger, if the family is larger. It is designed to support a colorful umbrella to give it a cheerful appearance plus invaluable shade for the diners. Wheels make it easy to move around. You just trace the full-size pattern parts onto wood, saw them out and assemble. Even the bolt and screw holes are located for you. Step-by-step illustrations accompany the directions. It the table and benches project whets your appetite for more do-it-yourself endeavors to improve the looks and utility of the backyard, Ellingson has some other attractive patterns. No. 342, at $1, is a patio cook-out gallery. And No. 162, also $1, is a concrete block barbecue. Somehow when dad, perhaps with some help from Junior, has constructed the furnishings and facilities, himself, the whole thing just seems to take on added fun. And father becomes the big man around the barbecue, as well he should.

Outdoor Lighting Can Add To Delight You Can Enjoy From Deck Or Patio

By ANDY LANG

No matter how functional a particular area of your house, it must have a pleasant appearance if you are to enjoy it to the fullest.

If you consider outdoor living space as an extension to your house, then it, too, should be pleasing to the eye as well as a practical place to relax or savor a barbecued meal.

A TOTALLY NEW environment for a patio or terrace can be created easily and inexpensively by utilizing the wide variety of special lights on the market. And you need no handyman talents to produce the effects that can make a world of difference in an area's feel and looks.

Lights make a patio more serviceable in the evening hours, as well as adding a festive and romantic air. Stringing them up is easy.

All that is needed are a few strategically placed hooks. In fact, the variety of lighting placements is limited only by the imagination. Lights can be strung in tiers, one level above the other. Or they can cross over each other back and forth across the entire patio space.

Another possible arrangment is outlining the perimeter of the terrace with the lights, thereby enhancing the feeling of being "on stage" that is so supportive of party efforts.

BE SURE TO USE genuine patio lighting that is technically fit for outdoor use. Albert Sadacca II, executive vice president of a leading manufacturer of decorative lights, points out that while outdoor lighting is specially designed to be safe under any weather conditions, the majority of lighting is suitable only for indoor use.

Patio lighting sets are characterized by a wide choice of styles. There are lanterns that suggest the Orient, modern motifs, simple globes, even Tiffany-style.

To make a sensible choice, look for a store that sells a full range of the best sets available rather than one with a limited inventory.

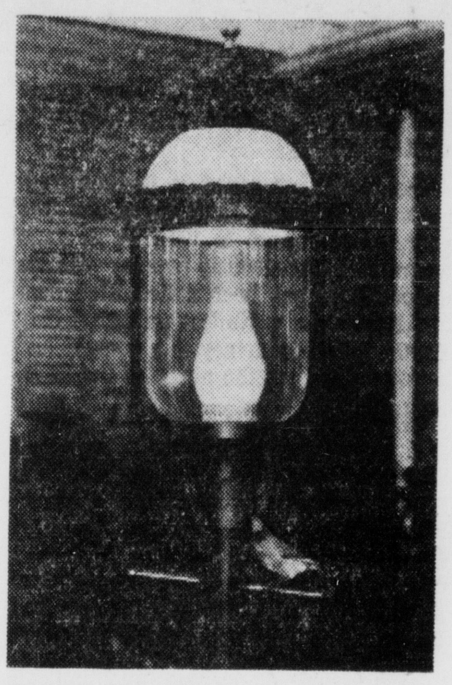
Don't forget the emotional impact of well-chosen colors. Lights sets are available in bright and cheery colors that bring a look of happiness to any terrace or patio.

THE PLACEMENT OF patio lighting can be further enhanced by the effective selection of other supportive elements. A sculpture reproduction, for example, can be instrumental in changing the ordinary to the extraordinary, especially when it is effectively illuminated.

The chances are your house already has at least one exterior electrical outlet. If it doesn't, have one installed.

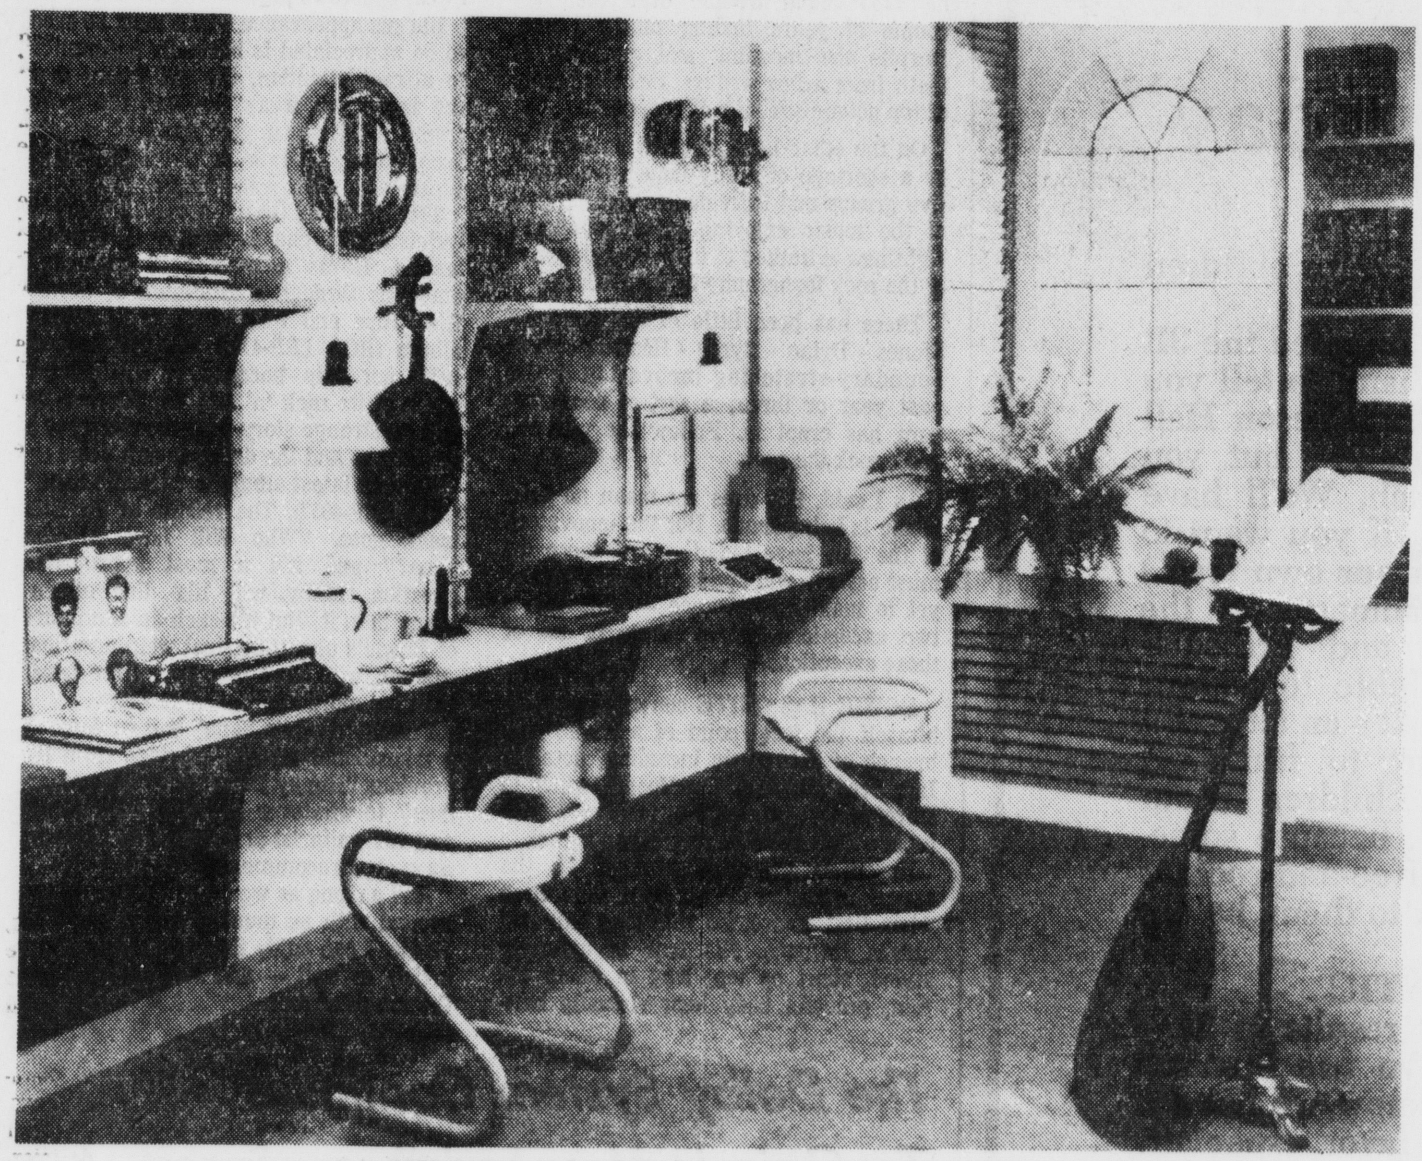
Better yet, have two or three put in, because the cost of the extra outlets is proportionally less than the price of the first one.

(If you fix things yourself, get a copy of Andy Lang's helpful handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to Andy Lang, at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J., 07666.



THERE'S A STYLE in outdoor lighting fixtures to fit your house and to suit the mood of your garden. This reproduction of a Philadelphia street light by Progress Lighting is perfect for the Tudor-type house. And the globe is shatter-resistant, as it should be for outdoor use.

THE HOMES PAGE



KEEP AWAY FROM THE clutter syndrome, was the instruction with which interior designer Emily Malino began the planning of this room for a budding young musician. She achieved an efficient work-sleep-play balance in the room for the youthful occupant, and softened the functional yet fresh appearance with some bright orange Acrilan carpeting.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: Goodbye Clutter

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Do you ever feel like doing a "household strip" — where you'd unload many of the things you've accumulated through the years? Sort of a superglorious garage sale?

Most of us experience this ennui with possessions, yet few of us learn anything from the constant annoyance of the demanding care which we must accord the clutter.

Given an empty space to start with, how many of us would truly keep furnishings on a spare functional level?

One interior designer recently had that challenge presented to her: to develop a no-nonsense room for a serious young musician. The major concerns for furnishings were to be a sleeping pad, a work-snack location, and lots of non-cluttered space where other music buffs could gather.

THE DESIGNER, Emily Malino, settled for a wall system that could grow or reduce in size according to the needs of the teen-ager and the family. And she used color on the walls to define areas between shelves. The system, by Royal Cado, requires wall-mounted brackets.

By using this hardware on a corner-to-corner basis, she provided a great deal of versatility and adjustability.

The youngster owned a simple stereo system, with controls near is bed. But when more sophisticated components or speakers would be added, at a later date, no space crunch would be felt. The owners could merely add shelves to support the additional equipment.

To alleviate the somewhat spare quality of the room, Miss Malino chose a bright-orange Acrilan acrylic carpet fitted to the exact dimensions of the room. Instead of a busy shag texture, there's a trimmer, more functional look and feel to this Cordelia carpet by Bigelow.

NOT ONE PIECE of typical furniture (in the sense of function) appears in the room.

Work surfaces are merely elongated shelf arrangements. Work chairs are contemporary bent, tubular aluminum forms. An interesting window niche gets a dress-up with shutters rather than draperies or curtains.

When Junior Genius vacates the family premises for parts unknown, the room can be converted into a family workroom and part-time guest spot. And, just think — no unnecessary furnishings to unload or donate to the local thrift shop.

Try Lattice-Work Gazebo To Give The Yard A Lift

Why not a lattice-work gazebo, boldly painted in red, white and blue to give that humdrum backyard a zestful new appeal?

One couple has created just such a cooling summer haven in patriotic hues. This one dominates a small yard, but a gazebo becomes a happy accent in a garden of any size.

The structure can have four or more sides, and the frame-work is basically post and beam. Lattice work is half-by-two-inch cedar or other western wood, and can be applied in a horizontal-vertical pattern or crossed diagonally.

The lattice walls can extend from floor to roof on two or three sides, and be brought down only a couple of feet from the top on the front side to leave the remainder open.

The lattice should be stiffened by two-by-fours extending between the posts. Floor can be a wood deck or brick patio.

White is a favorite paint or stain, and a single color will be easier to renew with a spray gun. Doing posts and some sections in blue and red adds to the festive look, enough to make the extra work worth it.

From Closet, An Office? It's Possible

If closets weren't so scarce, one could make one into an office!

That's how important some people consider an office in the home. Even though a closet is small, it's better than none.

The homemaker's office can be a desk in a corner of the kitchen, for example. An office for the salesman or executive would require a bit more space, ideally in a basement, attic or bedroom, while a study spot for a student can be in his room or other area easily accessible.

Prime ingredients for a home office were described by John Concord, home improvement consultant to Masonite Corporation.

Desk, filing space, shelves, adequate lighting, seating and ventilation are important, he said, but no more so than the immediate surroundings.

"An office or study place should be set apart from the rest of the room. There are two reasons for this: The appearance should be attractive and it should distinguish a quiet corner for concentration."

Concord suggest the areas be lined with a prefinished hardboard paneling. Various distinctive interior panels, in a variety of finishes, and even exterior sidings may be used.

To Keep A Gardener Dry In Winter

Gardening, to those who attack it with a fervor, means having something growing all the time, and this calls for a comfortable work area available all seasons of the year.

Granted, even the most devout greenthumber won't linger out for long on frigid days, but even then a sheltered counter serves well for quick repotting of house plants.

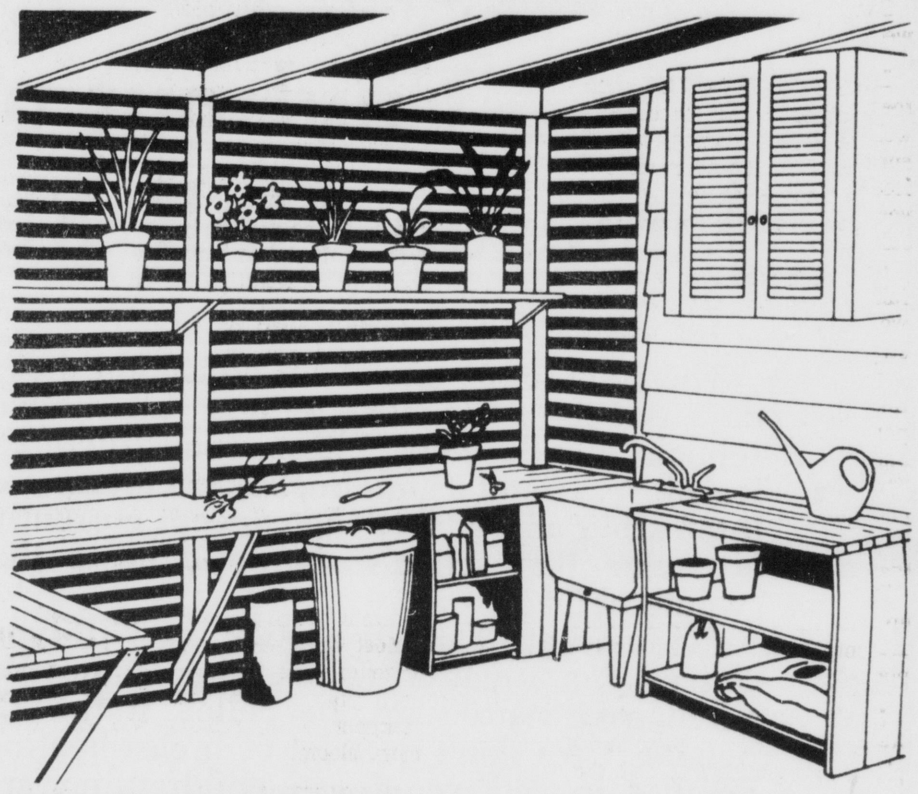
A semi-enclosed structure allows the serious gardener to work late into the fall and be outside before the first blooms of spring.

ALMOST EVERY house has a wall, a jog or a garage where a leanto shelter can be added. A breezeway between house and detached garage is a natural area to enclose for garden work and storage.

Simple post and beam construction requires few tools and skills for erecting a garden workshop, and it needn't be large. Translucent plastic roofing admits extra light and one or two walls of horizontal wood slats allow free air circulation.

Posts of four-by-four-inch Douglas fir or western cedar can be set in the ground or on concrete footings. Parts of the posts that will be in and near the ground should be preservative-treated.

COUNTERS ARE built onto the posts, using slightly spaced two-by-fours for work surfaces. Flooring is wood decking of two-by-four-inch fir for easy cleaning, or stepping-stones in a bed of river gravel.



THIS GARDENING CENTER built onto the house, garage or in a breezeway, will provide you with a year-around outdoor work and storage area. A translucent roof over two-by-six-inch wooden joists adds light plus shelter for rainy days. Wood slat walls on four-by-four-inch posts permit the circulation of air. You don't need the shelter now. But now is the time to build it for later use.

Storage is built in under the counters and a cabinet with lock may be mounted on the wall, for storing sprays and chemicals.

Locating the structure on a water line allows easy installation of a deep tub sink, invaluable to a serious gardener.

If the garden house is near the back door, it also can serve as a mud room where children can clean up before entering the house.

Now is the time to build—not when winter arrives.

HERE'S THE ANSWER TO YOUR QUESTION

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I recently bought a saber saw, the first one I have ever owned. I work mainly with plywood and must be doing something wrong, as every time I cut through it with the new saw, there is a slight chipping of the surface at the start of the cut. How can I avoid this?

A. — Two things can cause that problem — starting the cut after the saw blade is placed against the wood, and keeping the good side of the wood face up. Or, to put it another way, always start the saw motor before the blade touches the wood and always place the plywood so that its good side is facing the floor.

Q. — You recently gave a couple of ways in which spilled alcohol can be removed from a wood floor. I have another that I have been using for 45 years and have found successful. Also, it is very simple. Just rub aromatic spirits of camphor on the spot with a clean cloth. It is good because it not only takes out the stain but also restores the color of the wood.

A. — I haven't tried it, but it sounds logical because camphor is sometimes used to remove certain spots from wood furniture. Many thanks.

Q. — Is there any difference between glazing compound and putty? I have to replace several cracked window panes and have always thought that putty was the material used to keep the panes in place, but I read some instructions recently that called for the use of glazing compound.

A. — The substances are very similar, but glazing compound usually costs little more and is less inclined to dry out than putty. Also, either glazing compound or putty is used principally to keep out the elements rather than to hold the panes in place, although it does play a small part in doing that. What holds the panes in place are glazier's points, bits of metal inserted into the frame and pressed against the glass.

A. — Why is cigar ash sometimes recommended for rubbing off white marks from a table top?

A. — Because it is a very mild abrasive. For the same reason, toothpaste may be used. However, either of these products will work only if the marks are not very severe. In stubborn cases, a stronger abrasive must be used.

Reggae — Hottest Thing In Pop Music

By FREDERICK WINSHIP

It's rock with a bouncy calypso beat, heavy on the bass. The lyrics bubble along like a tropic cola wine. It comes from the heart of Jamaica.

It's the hottest thing in popular music and you'd better learn to pronounce it right!

The fresh new sound is Reggae (reggay). It started in Jamaica as Ska (the poor man's music) in 1958. In England where it is outrageously popular with the under-30s, it has been called Blue Beat and Rock Steady. No less an expert than Beatle Paul McCartney is a convert and considers Reggae the music of the 1970s.

REGGAE MOVED from underground to overground in the United States last year when two Reggae-style discs by American artists climbed to the top of the best seller charts and became Gold Records. They were Johnny Nash's "I Can See Clearly Now", a current radio staple, and Paul Simon's (Simon and Garfunkel) "Mother and Child Reunion."

Nash favors compositions by Jamaican Bob Marley, considered the Beethoven of Reggae.

Kingston, Jamaica, has become a major recording capital, turning out an average of 80 new singles a week. For shantytown musicians, it's a case of from Reggae to riches. Americans Elton John, Cat Stevens, Eddie Floyd, Roberta Flack, and Leon Russell are all into Reggae and working with the natives on location. So are The Rolling Stones, The Staple Singers, The M.G.s, and Free.

TWO GUITARS — one rhythm, one lead — drums and organ make up the typical Reggae combo.

The first Reggae film, "The Harder They Come," opened in Manhattan in February and has been a sellout, with a bigger percentage of whites in the audience than most all-black films attract.

The film is Jamaica-made, Jamaica-financed, and confers stardom on a Jamaican singer, Jimmy Cliff. He is a popular entertainer in London, where there is a raging Reggae cult with special newspaper columns, clubs, and groupies.

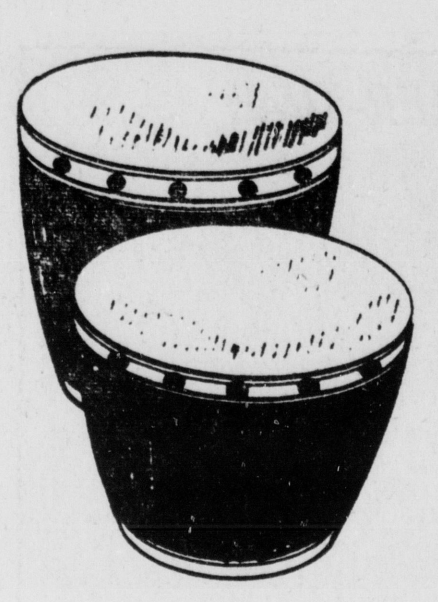
The film, which was praised at the Venice Film Festival last summer, portrays a Reggae singer named Ivanhoe Martin fresh from the Jamaican hill country who is taken advantage of by Kingston record producers and turns to crime. You can understand everything Cliff sings, which is not true of all Reggae singers.

MANY REGGAE lyrics are made up of contracted dialect words, unintelligible to Americans. Following calypso tradition, there are plenty of political and sexual references "Slave Driver, the Tables Are Turned," "Belly Rub". The insinuating and hesitant rhythms are complex and won't be mastered easily by dancers who normally have trouble with Latin beats.

Reggae has a long way to go before it dominates the discotheques.

In Jamaica, black establishment society frowns on Reggae because it often is vulgar and raunchy and, in spite of its upbeat tempo, expressive of social unrest and protest among the lowest economic class of the island. In search of a wider audience, the best singers gravitated to London, which has a large West Indian population.

Reggae has been on the scene in Britain for at least 10 years and is regularly represented in the Top Twenty listings there.



Reggae records have grown in popularity here, too. Johnny Nash's 1967 hit, "Hold Me Tight," and "Israelites" and "007" recorded by Jamaican Desmond Dekker and The Aces in London stimulated the trend. Now companies such as Capitol are busily distributing platters for Jamaica-based groups. Capitol's Mango Records include an album by The Wailers and another of the film, "The Harder They Come."

With prestigious recording firms in the picture, Reggae composers are getting a fair share of profits for the first time and better material is emerging as a result of keen competition.

Jameson Hall Sets "Test Saturday"

There's a lot of talk about education these days. Much of it centers around "alternative schools" with new classes, unstructured learning . . . and so on. Such curriculums are interesting and add to the concept currently in vogue that schools should educate the "whole child."

At Jameson Hall we stick to "3R-type classes. (As a matter of fact when James W. Kirchanski started up, he called it the 3R Schools.) We don't do a lot of breast-beating about how well we educate children, nor are we "reformers" because these things would take away too much of the time we devote to instruction in our classrooms. But we can show you some positive results.

READING FIRST GRADERS

Last year we tested thirty-nine Jameson Hall First Graders. Here's how they scored:

Subtest	Grade Placement	National Percentile
Word Reading (Vocabulary)	2.9	96
Paragraph Meaning (Comprehension)	2.7	96
Spelling	3.2	97
Arithmetic Computation	2.9	96
Grand Mean	2.9	96

These Jameson Hall students had not yet completed the First Grade (the test was given in April) and these results make us feel confident that we're accomplishing the difficult job of teaching young people.

What we do is work closely with each child and monitor progress regularly. We issue report cards every week. Not many schools do that. A lot of schools are dropping report cards altogether. And tests. That makes it difficult for parents to keep track of a child's progress.

TESTING OFFER

If you don't know the level of your child's learning, now you can find out exactly what it is. To help you do this, we're turning Jameson Hall into a Testing Center for one day. That day is Saturday, August 18.

On that day we'll administer Reading and Arithmetic Tests for children in Second through Eighth Grades. If your child has completed the First Grade, we'll test.

HOW IT WORKS

Bring children to the school, 3833 Redwood Highway, San Rafael (across from the Marin Civic Center). Be prepared to spend about ninety minutes with us. Each child will be tested and this takes about an hour and fifteen minutes. We'll score the tests immediately and you'll receive the results.

While the testing is going on you won't be subjected to any high-pressure sales tactics, so don't worry about that. What we will do is offer you some refreshments of the coffee-and-cookies variety while we explain what's happening in the room where your children are being tested.

James W. Kirchanski, who founded the 3R Schools in 1955, will be on hand to tell you some of the history of the 3R/Jameson Hall Schools and how they work . . . but you won't get a glossy sales pitch. We'll have some of our books on hand, if you want to see them. (We write some of our own tests.) Colonel F. R. Whiting, Headmaster of the San Rafael Jameson Hall and Principal Patricia Hicks, will be available to answer any questions you may have. It's an altogether low-key affair from start to finish. A couple of parents who have children in our school will be on hand, too, because somebody has to attend to the coffee-and-cookies business. If you want to talk to them, be our guest.

TESTS AUTHENTIC

You'll leave with the test results in hand to do with as you want. We use Stanford Achievement Tests so you know we haven't rigged anything in anyone's favor, especially ours. We believe parents have a right to know how their children are doing in school and we believe this is the way to accomplish that. If we can tell you something about ourselves while we're performing this service, that really isn't a bad price to pay.

Speaking of price — the testing isn't completely "free". The fee will be two dollars per child to help us cover some of our costs. We honestly believe it is a very small price to pay to measure something so important.

This service is available to everyone whether your children attend public, parochial or private school but you must use the coupon below to make a reservation. Send it to us along with two dollars for each child you wish tested. This test does not obligate you in any way whatsoever and we will contact you later to confirm your reservation for testing.

ON THE STEREO SCENE

'The Orchestration Of The Century . . .'

By WILBUR LANDREY

Superlatives are dangerous, but perhaps the most brilliant orchestration of the century is Maurice Ravel's transcription of "Pictures at an Exhibition" which Modest Mussorgsky wrote for the piano.

Mussorgsky's musical promenade through the posthumous St. Petersburg picture exhibition of his dead friend Victor Hartmann in 1874 is a great piano piece in the right hands.

It has been orchestrated several times, but since Ravel did it for conductor Serge Koussevitsky in 1922, that version has become a part of the orchestral repertory, and is even more frequently heard than the piano original.

To have both versions on one record, the Ravel orchestral arrangement played by the late George Szell and the Cleveland Orchestra, and the original piano score played by Sviatoslav Richter, is a treat.

Columbia has done it for its budget Odyssey label (Y 32223).

RICHTER'S MONO recording comes from a concert performance in Sofia, Bulgaria, on Feb. 25, 1958. From the amount of coughing in the background, it was a cold winter in Bulgaria, but the Richter performance is brilliant.

So is the excellent Cleveland's performance of the richly-colored Ravel score.

The practice of reissuing performances of some of the great recording artists and groups of the past on lower-priced labels is an exellent one, and presumably a profitable one as well, since most of the companies have their budget labels.

On Odyssey, there have recently been Szell and the Cleveland orchestra playing Richard Strauss' Don Quixote with cellist Pierre Fournier (Y 32224), Szell and the Cleveland playing Brahms piano concerto No. 2 in a fine performance with Leon Fleisher (Y 32222), Bruno Walter conducting the Columbia Symphony Orchestra in Brahms' Symphony No. 3 and the Academic Festival Overture, and Eugene Ormandy conducting the Philadelphia Orchestra in Prokofiev's Symphony No. 4 (Y 32226), all worthy of being noted.

ALSO RECOMMENDED: Heinz Holliger playing "Famous Oboe Concertos" by Leclair, Marcello, Vivaldi and Telemann (Philips 6500 413) — Excellent. A record for the collection played with virtuosity. The oboe deserves, and has seldom got, the attention that these baroque composers give it in writing for it as a solo instrument.

This is the latest of several Holliger oboe recordings.

Has Rock Gone Conservative? Well, Not David Bowie Anyway

By BRUCE MEYER

Unlike some rock journalists, I haven't had too much trouble over the past couple of years finding music I like. Despite the moaning and gnashing of teeth from a few writers, there is plenty of top-notch rock 'n' roll around.

On the other hand, there does seem to be a shortage of really innovative, creative groups and individuals. Virtually all of the music enjoying mass popularity right now is limited to further exploration of the rock topography of the 1960s.

There has been little of the Beatles - Stones - Dylan - Byrds - Hendrix sort of boundary-stretching innovation in the past year or three; a sort of conservatism has crept in. Follow the pattern, don't rock the rock.

As I said, this does not mean no good music is being made. But the innovators of the '60s have faded — and those we must assume will appear in the '70s have yet to make an entrance — with one or two exceptions. David Bowie is one of those exceptions.

BOWIE HAS QUITE consciously made himself the focal point of a whole new branch of pop music including, notably, Lou Reed and Mott The Hoople, which in sterotypical journalistic fashion I will label with a hyphen: androgynous-rock.

Bowie is the fulfillment of all the apprehensions of the big band generation when first confronted with long hair and unisex fashions. His hair is carefully styled, short on top, long in back; his thin, graceful body kept virtually hairless, his cheeks powdered, eyes shadowed, eyebrows plucked, lips sticked.

But his appearance which must be seen to be appreciated is basically a gimmick to attract attention, the old theory that the more you freak 'em out, the more free publicity you get, word of mouth. What really counts is the music, and Bowie's music is something special.

THERE ARE ONLY a handful of rock lyricists who can even stay in Bowie's league. He is a master of conveying emotions through a minimum of words. His "Rise and Fall of Ziggy Stardust" album (RCA LSP-4702) was the best of 1972, not only because of the driving poser of its rock 'n' roll, but because he told its strange story with the clarity of a novelist — and the delicacy of a poet.

Bowie's latest album is "Aladdin Sane" (RCA LSP-4852). The refrain of the title track goes, "Who Will Love Aladdin Sane?" and it's a most appropriate question. Many will like this album, many hate it. But it's such an admixture of Bowie's ultratheatrical weirdness that Aladdin will have few lovers far fewer than the more approachable Ziggy.

I think "Aladdin Sane" will go down as a transitional album, a bridge from the previous "Hunky Dory" and "Ziggy Stardust" to whatever lies ahead for Bowie and his guitarist-arranger Nick Ronson. As such, I recommend it highly.

And as long as we have a writer or two around with as much creative talent as Bowie, I can enjoy the music from lesser artists as well — and feel secure about the future of rock.

The Dolby System Continues To Gain In Use And Acceptance

By PRESTON McGRAW

The Dolby system of reducing noise on magnetic tapes now is available in prerecorded, open reel tapes and the result is music of broadened dynamic range out of a background of almost velvet silence.

The system was developed in 1965 by Ray Dolby, an American engineer working in England. After putting in several years with Ampex in the United States working on tape video recording, Dolby went to England to get a Ph.D. at Cambridge.

Bugged by tape noise — mainly hiss — Dolby worked out a sophisticated system that divides the frequency spectrum into four separate ranges, each independently treated.

In recording with the system, all signals whose strength is above a certain level pass through unchanged. But signals below a certain level are increased 10 or 15 decibels. The recording engineer winds up with a tape whose only weak signals are the noise on it.

ON PLAYBACK, the Dolby system cuts back the boosted signals by the amount they were increased. The music comes out as it entered the recording microphone and with about the same noise-free background.

Prerecorded tapes for use by high fidelity hobbyists were about the last medium to use the Dolby system. The first medium was master tapes for records.

Then a reasonably priced Dolby system — the Dolby "B" — was added to cassette machines. Cassettes, with their 178 ips speed, as opposed to 712 for open reel tapes' were especially victimized by hiss.

Some FM broadcasting tuners employ the Dolby system. By eliminating noise in the broadcast signal, the quality of music is enhanced and the effective sensitivity of tuners extended.

LAST DECEMBER, Ampex Stereo Tapes announced a series of Dolbyized open reel tapes. The series was introduced with 20 titles. Others are being added.

The only Dolbyzied open reel recorder available then was a Revox model, which sells for around $1,000. To get the full benefit of Dolbyized tapes, they have to be played on such a machine.

But other manufacturers are reported to be bringing out more modestly priced machines so more hobbyists can take advantage of the process.

But the Dolbyized tapes make a significant difference, even on decks not equipped with the system. Any kind of noise works to the disadvantage of high grade sound, as any person who has tried to listen to a high fidelity rig with an air conditioner vent hissing in the room knows.

SO EVEN ON orthodox but highgrade tape decks, hiss is almost inaudible. Music seems clearer, sharper.

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In January, 1972, in desperation, NBC put up a new show against the hit "All in the Family." The industry figured it was aptly named — "Emergency!"

"All in the Family" had been giving the opposition its lumps. First, in the 1971-72 fall season it knocked off two situation comedies, NBC's "The Partners" and ABC's Bobby Sherman show.

At midseason NBC came in with "Emergency!," and ABC switched over its veteran comedy "Bewitched." Archie Bunker took the magic out of "Bewitched" and kept the firemen of "Emergency!" at the bottom of the ratings ladder.

THIS PAST season NBC stuck with "Emergency!" and ABC tried a new with its tongue-in-cheek Wwestern, "Alias Smith and Jones." They went down the tube and at midseason ABC tried for a wedge in Archie's audience with the provocative "Here We Go Again." That didn't work either and in the fall ABC will try for wholesomeness and music with "The Partridge Family."

NBC hung in there with "Emergency!" and may at least get a chuckle — if not the last laugh. In recent ratings periods "Family" has slipped out of first place and "Emergency" has become firmly rooted in the top 20.

Robert A. Cinader, producer and co-creator, offers a simple explanation for its survival and success.

"NO TELEVISION show has universal appeal," he reasoned. "Even 'All in the Family' doesn't appeal to everyone. You look for the areas where it doesn't appeal. And that's to the action-oriented kids. You design a show around kids.

"We're successful because it's the only show designed to counterpunch by going into the one area where 'All in the Family' has its lowest audience level. The others tried to beat them at their own game — with comedy — and lost."

"Emergency!," like another show Cinader helped create, "Adam-12," is done in vignettes. The short episodes follow the paramedic firemen and the emergency room of a hospital.

A TIP FOR MOVIE BUFFS

Because of a newsprint shortage, the "TV Movie Marquee" listings appearing in this section will not be repeated with the daily television logs in next week's issues of the Independent-Journal. TV movie fans, therefore, will want to save their TV Watch for reference during the coming week.

KEVIN CORCORAN as Toby Tyler, a runaway lad who has joined the circus, hugs his friend, Mr. Stubbs the chimp, in "Toby Tyler," a two-part adventure story to be presented on "The Wonderful World of Disney," this Sunday and Aug. 19 at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

The Outspoken Elizabeth Baur

Elizabeth Baur, who will be seen frequently this fall as the new "lady cop" on the NBC Television Network's "Ironside," is a tiny, brown-haired beauty whose forthright answers to questions have a disconcerting way of stopping further conversation.

For instance, the casual question "What happened to your black patent leather boots?" received this answer: "I split them showing off. I was trying to get out a car gracefully to impress a man I was dating. If he had been somebody I didn't like, my boots would have been fine. As it was I wrecked the boots and the fellow was unimpressed."

FORTUNATELY, Elizabeth's answers are not always negative.

Asked by a quartet of teenage girls — who observed her posing for publicity photos in a park — if she enjoyed being an actress, Elizabeth said: "I love it. It's the most exciting thing to do I could ever have found, and I'm delighted to be working."

The root of Elizabeth's directness may lie in the technique her mother used (at a pediatrician's suggestion) for curing her temper tantrums as a child. Furious when her mother chose babyish smock dresses to flatter her violet eyes, Elizabeth would throw herself on the floor kicking and screaming.

"THE TANTRUMS never lasted long," Elizabeth recalled, "because she would throw cold water on me. Of course, the beauty of it all was that the dress was soaking wet, and I didn't have to wear it after all."

Elizabeth's entire life has been spent in the atmosphere of motion pictures. Her father, Jack Baur, is a casting director for a major studio and takes performers and the so-called glamor of show business in his stride.

"What did your father say when he found out his only child wanted to be an actress?" Elizabeth was asked.

"He said, 'I have a better idea. Why not acquire a skill so you can make a living'. "

TUNING IN ON TV

By JACK GAVER

On Sept. 8, via NBC, actor Bert Parks will be making his 19th successive appearance as master of ceremonies for Atlantic City's Miss America Pageant.

Roberto Clemente, Puerto Rican star of the Pittsburgh Pirates who died in an airplane accident last Jan. 1, is the subject of a 90-minute special to be aired by NBC during the 1973-74 season. Singer-actor Harry Belafonte is expected to play the baseball idol.

Two stars who will show up as guest players in the ABC "Marcus Welby, M.D." series during the new season are Tige Andrews and Kim Hunter. It will be the program's fifth seassn.

No one knows what the content of the new "NBC Follies" variety series will be in the way of principals and material, but it is certain to have a chorus of 12 dancing girls. That may not be progress, but it could be most interesting.

Another night-time series spins off an animated version for children that will be on NBC Saturday mornings beginning in the fall. The parent is NBC "Emergency!" and the offspring will be "Emergency plus 4," a half-hour version of adventures of paramedics. Randolph Mantooth and Kevin Tighe, who star in the one-hour Saturday night skein, will do voice-overs for their animated counterparts in the new program.

SOME FACTS ON TOWER

Some statistics on the new Sutro Tower beaming television over Northern California:

It stands 977 feet high and 1,811 feet above sea level — within a few feet of equalling the Eiffel Tower in height.

The steel in the basic tower weighs 3,400,000 pounds, and in the antennas 200,000 pounds, for a total of 3,600,000 pounds.

There are 25,000 feet of radio frequency transmission wire — copper-coated coaxial.

There are no rivets in the structure. It is all bolted, welded construction.

Dr. Welby Still Makes House Calls

ROBERT YOUNG
Three million feet of film

Three million feet of film have curled through the color cameras since June 2, 1969, when Robert Young donned his white coat to speak his first lines as star of the ABC Television Network's "Marcus Welby, M.D." at Universal Studio.

The hour long series, which begins its fifth season this fall, premiered Sept. 23, 1969, with the episode "Hello, Goodbye, Hello" with guest star Susan Clark.

Young, James Brolin (Dr. Steven Kiley) and Elena Verdugo (Consuelo Lopez) recently celebrated the filming of the series' 100th episode. Titled "The Tall Tree," the episode features Tony Musante, star of the new ABC series, "Toma."

Unlike many series which go through trial and error traumas and growing pains, "Welby" in the four years it has been on the air, has undergone comparatively few changes.

STILL AT THE helm are executive producer David Victor, who created the series, and producer David J. O'Connell, aided by Nina Laemmle, executive story consultant.

"Marcus Welby, M.D." began airing Tuesday nights at 10 and its hold on that time period has never wavered. Its position in the Nielsen ratings has also remained constant; more often than not it is in the top five.

Dozens of awards and citations have been earned by the series and its stars. The series itself has received two Emmys and three nominations. Young has one Emmy and two nominations, Brolin, one Emmy and three nominations, and Miss Verdugo has two nominations.

EACH EPISODE begins with a 15-page outline, followed usually by first and second drafts, then a final script.

Among the 250 performers who have guest starred during the past four years are two who, practically unknown at the time, are now stars in series of their own.

AN ANGRY IRISHMAN

COCOYOC, Mexico (UPI) — Irish actor Richard Harris is giving the British — from Queen Elizabeth on down — advance warning not to consider him for any possible film awards.

His anger over what he calls "England's inhuman treatment of the Northern Irish" is such that he took time out from filming on location here to announce advance rejection of any British Academy Award or other honor that may be proffered in the future.

"Even if Queen Elizabeth herself were to offer me a knighthood or something of the sort, I would tell her to shove it," the outspoken actor said.

"Life Begins at 8:30"

More people read the I-J every evening than any other newspaper in Marin County.

REDD FOXX, as Fred Sanford, fancies himself ready for his movie debut, so he dresses appropriately to impress all concerned in "Rated X," to be telecast on "Sanford and Son," Friday at 8 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

MARK DONOHUE, RACING'S "MR. BUSINESS": "Anything Besides Winning Is Failure"

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

Would you say that the dirty doings of Watergate are a "sign of the times"? — Robert Beaton, Ventnor, N. J.

● Watergate is a penalty being exacted from the public for living according to the theory that the informer is a fink and the guilty party is a martyr. Like the general public, the people in Watergate have accepted the theory that loyalty is first and honesty second, no matter what the crime. The tragedy is that the young people know about Watergate and are forming a dubious opinion of the basic concepts of honesty.

FOR CHARLES SCHULZ

Any comments about the third-century etchings resembling "Snoopy" that were recently found by archaeologists in Rome?—William H. Curtis, Bakersfield, Calif.

● Snoopy may well be descended from ancient Rome, as evidenced by his taste in art, literature and Olympic contests. But as far as I know, his only prototype was a black-and-white spotted dog named Spike—my childhood pet and the best friend I ever had.

FOR PAT NIXON

Are you an orphan? We never see or hear anything about your family.—Mrs. L. M. Biggers, Clarksville, Tenn.

● My parents died when I was a teenager. I raised my brothers and sister and helped support them through college. But I do not choose to draw a great deal of public attention to them. They prefer to lead as much of a private life as possible.

FOR MARILYNN SMITH, professional golfer

I was playing pretty well, and now all of a sudden I've hit a slump—does this ever happen to pro golfers?—Mae Swan, Santa Ana, Calif.

● Definitely! And each of us has her own way of getting out of slumps. I know several golf instructors I have confidence in, and when I hit a slump I have one look over my swing. My problem usually boils down to tempo—I'm too fast. My exuberant personality works to my detriment in my swing. But some pros just take off and go fishing, and come back with a fresher outlook.

FOR SEN. WALTER F. MONDALE (D-Minn.)

You've proposed an Office of Federal Elections to enforce election laws. Don't we have enough prosecutors and grand juries running around already?—K. N., Elgin, Ill.

● Watergate has made it clear that politicians are not likely to investigate themselves, and that prosecution of political crimes will not likely be vigorously pursued by political appointees. We need an agency insulated from politics to investigate and prosecute political crimes.

FOR AL PACINO, star of "The Godfather"

Was that a real horse's head that was placed in the Hollywood producer's bed as a warning from the Godfather?—Sharri Klassen, Myrtle Creek, Ore.

● It was a real horse's head. It was taken from a horse that had been shot because of a broken leg three days before the scene was filmed.

FOR HOWARD COSELL

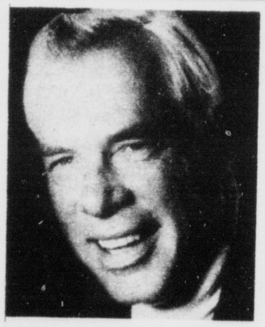
Your comments about the bad aspects of intercollegiate sports interest me. Do you believe that there will be another college-basketball scandal?—D. L. King, Atlantic City, N. J.

● There was a college-basketball scandal in the forties, one in the fifties, one in the sixties, and there will probably be one in the seventies.

FOR CHER BONO

You're always joking about Sonny's height. Really, how tall is he and how tall are you? Also, is that last part of your show, when you bring Chastity out, rehearsed?—J. B., Mt. Angel, Ore.

● I'm 5'6" and Sonny is an inch taller. No, Chastity needs no rehearsal, she's a natural-born performer.



FOR LEE MARVIN,
star of "The Emperor of the North"

How do you manage to keep your self-confidence?—L. M., Rock Spings, Wyo.

● I'm not self-confident—that's what makes me so good!

FOR JEANE DIXON, clairvoyant

Did you at one time or another foresee the Watergate affair? —Mrs. H. Brensike, New London, Wis.

● In my prediction of October 21, 1968, I said: "A wiretapping scandal which I have predicted previously is yet to come. It will involve Richard Nixon, but will show him as a sincere man and will help his public image. I saw a ball going round and round in what seemed to be a roulette wheel; the ball seemed always to stop on a double-O. It seemed to indicate a name or names which I could not interpret. A tall, dark man also appeared to be involved. The entire matter will affect Mr. Nixon favorably and would seem to put him in a position to right a great wrong, which would be for the good of the image of the U.S."

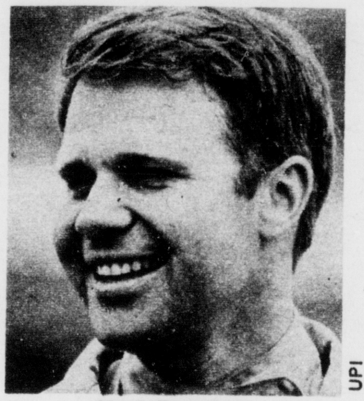
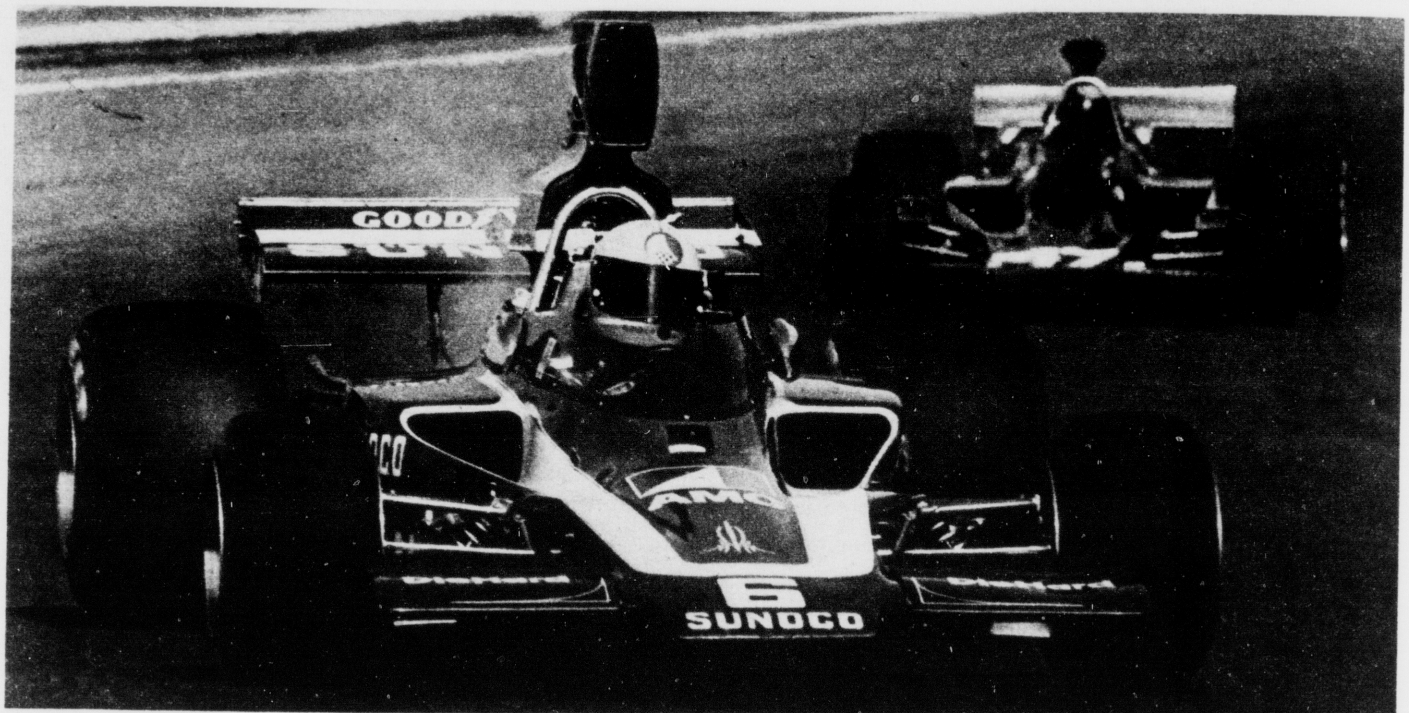
Mark Donohue: "Anything Besides Winning Is Failure"



UPI

Mark Donohue

By Larry Bortstein



"Speed is not the primary goal in racing," says Mark. "What good is it if you have the fastest car if it only lasts a few miles?"

Dressed in a dark suit and conservative tie, Mark Donohue could pass for almost any other high-salaried young business executive.

Donohue, who is a young 36, could even be a business executive. He has a degree in mechanical engineering from Brown University in Providence, R.I., and an additional one and a half years of graduate study in business.

But Mark's attire when he's at work is not the kind you buy at a men's store. It's a fireproof suit made of a plastic-type substance called Nomex. That's because Donohue is a race driver—perhaps the best in America today, and certainly one of the best five or six in the world.

While other race drivers often act and talk as tough as the pavements on which they drive, Mark, who's known as "Captain Nice," presents quite a different image. He is notoriously easier to deal with than, say, A. J. Foyt, who is called "Tough Tony" because of his often-irascible manner. Donohue suggests that his "Captain Nice" label is not entirely accurate. "It's true that I don't mouth off a lot, and I'm usually agreeable with people. But if it's a couple of days before a big race like the Indianapolis 500, and someone comes up to ask me something not directly connected with the race, he's going to walk away thinking I'm pretty awful. I'm not in a mood for small talk then."

Mark brings his businesslike demeanor to what is perhaps the most businesslike operation in racing today. He's the No. 1 driver for Roger Penske Racing, headed by former sports-car whiz Roger Penske. Leaving little to chance, Penske employs as brilliant a corps of mechanics and engineers as exists in American racing. Often working from 8:30 a.m. till past nine at night, these men turn out the racing machinery that enables Donohue and other Penske drivers to wage all-out assaults on the nation's racetracks.

When he's not racing or inspecting cars here and abroad, Mark is a regular at the Penske Racing headquarters, near his home in Newtown Square, a Philadelphia suburb. "I'll put in incredibly long hours at the shop," he says. "When you're at this level of racing, you have to invest the time and hours because this is your business." Donohue has been known to spend the night sleeping on a cot in the garage in order to get an early start the next morning.

"At high speed, the engine cover lifted, and the magnesium car went crashing into a wall, turning cartwheels as it spun sickeningly into fragments."

Excesses of this type have led to separation from his wife, Sue, the mother of two young sons, Michael and David.

Starting with his own Elva Courier, a small sports car that he drove in his first amateur race at Lime Rock, Conn., in 1960 (he finished fourth), Mark has become one of the most prosperous men in motor sports. He has won on the oval-track courses of the U.S. Auto Club and the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing; he is also one of the finest road race drivers this country has produced, with victories in the Canadian-American Challenge Cup series (Can-Am), the Trans-American Championship (Trans-Am), and the Formula 5000, or Continental Championship.

Despite all the triumphs, Mark feels that "speed is not the primary goal in racing. What good is it if you have the fastest car if it only lasts a few miles? We strive to see that the car stays together for the full distance of a race, like the 500 miles at Indianapolis and the other big races. You have to finish all 500 miles in order to win. And anything besides winning is a failure."

Mark's experiences in the Indianapolis 500 offer graphic proof that speed isn't everything in racing. In 1971, his car was the fastest in practice runs, achieving speeds of more than 180 mph. But on race day, after building up a sizable early lead, Donohue was forced to drop out on the 66th lap of the 200-lap event due to a broken gear.

In 1972, on the other hand, Donohue could summon less horsepower from his machine than several competitors at Indy. But at the end of the 500-mile grind, Mark had the nose of his number 66 dark-blue McLaren in front of the field. His purse for winning the race amounted to nearly $200,000, the largest one-day haul of his career. His annual earnings now are said to approach the $500,000 mark.

Bumps and bruises are constant riding companions of every man who steps into the cockpit of a racing machine. Most drivers accept pain stoically, and Donohue is no exception. A couple of years ago Mark appeared at a press conference in New York with heavy bandages over his left eye and cheek. When asked what had happened to his eye, Donohue shrugged and said, "Oh, a piece of metal was on the track yesterday when I was testing the car and it flew up and hit me in the eye. I just needed a few stitches."

Shortly after his Indianapolis 500 victory in 1972, Donohue was testing his car in Atlanta for an upcoming race. At high speed, the engine cover lifted, and the magnesium car went crashing into a wall, turning cartwheels as it spun sickeningly into fragments.

Mark's left knee was badly damaged. "The bottom of the leg was turned away from the knee," he recalls, and a lengthy hospitalization was required.

Mark's passion for cars first overcame him as a boy in Summit, N. J., where he started driving his father's car in their curving driveway when he was nine.

Though his parents opposed Mark's racing in the beginning, they are among his big fans now. Mark, Sr., is a patent lawyer and a partner in a New York law firm. His wife Hazel is a retired fifth-grade teacher.

Mark has two younger sisters. Nancy is a greeting-card artist, and Mary Ellen runs a horse stable. "As you can see," says Mark, "we have very diverse interests. But we had the kind of parents that let us do what we liked for the most part. There were objections to my racing, but this is not the type of profession you go into lightly. I think my parents wanted to make sure I knew exactly what I was getting into. I haven't been sorry and I'm sure they're not sorry either."

Move to the pool

August usually seems to be the hottest month. A good time to move an active sport like basketball into the water to keep cool.

The more time you spend in the water, the more you should know about Tampax tampons. They're sanitary protection worn internally, so you can go swimming. They're hygienic and comfortable for all girls of menstrual age.

Tampax tampons are softly compressed and expand to fit your inner contours. The silken-smooth container-applicator makes insertion easy. And the withdrawal cord is chain stitched the entire length of the tampon so it can't pull off.

August heat means more time in the water. And even more reason to rely on Tampax tampons.

"Oh, Mr. Welk! My (Grand) Mother Just Loves You!"

Lawrence Welk and his wife, Fern: "Even when I was a young man," he says, "it was always the girl's mother who liked me best."

By Lawrence Welk,

With Bernice McGeehan, especially for FAMILY WEEKLY

> " 'Lawrence Welk!' screamed one of the boys. 'Are you kidding! Migawsh, my mother used to make me look at him! Boy, he's terrible!' The rest of the boys laughed right along with him, and I must say the conversation died a little after that, till one of the boys asked me what I did...."

The wonderful fans I've met during my 50 years in the music business keep saying such nice things to me I sometimes worry I may start to believe them. But just about then, along comes someone who brings me down to earth!

Like the lady who came backstage one night as we were getting ready to televise our weekly show. She had somehow slipped past my secretary, Lois Lamont, who generally keeps an eagle eye out for unexpected visitors, and then tracked me down in the makeup room where I was getting made up for the cameras. Rudy Horvatich, who has been with me for years, was busy applying the paints and powders, and the lady was absolutely fascinated at the sight. She hung over Rudy's shoulder watching every move he made, scarcely daring to breathe. When he had finished she came over to me, inspected me closely from all sides, and then turned to him. "Sir," she said, "you are a real genius!"

Well, that's the kind of thing that keeps your ego down to size. And so did the lady who cut in on me one night during a tag dance that we were featuring on the show. She was a large lady, weighing close to 200 pounds, and she came shoving up from the back of the line, elbowing everybody else aside. The other ladies had been tapping me lightly on the shoulder – but not this lady! She hit me such a crack I nearly went down on my knees; and then, before I could recover, she grabbed me around the waist with one hand while she beamed and waved vigorously at the camera with the other. "I've never danced a step in my life," she announced as I regained my balance, "but I always said if I ever got out here to Hollywood I'd come down and dance on your show." Well, I have danced with literally hundreds of thousands of ladies in my time, and I've never had the slightest trouble with them, but this lady was something else! No matter how hard I tried, I just could not get her on the beat, and we struggled for some time in full view of the cameras. Finally she pulled back and eyed me with disgust. "You," she said flatly as she turned to leave, "certainly look like a much better dancer on television!"

Mothers are, and always have been, the heart and soul of our audience, and even though our listeners have grown to include an increasing number of young people in the past few years, it's the mothers who hold our first affection. I think I've always had somewhat of a problem with mothers. Even when I was a young man, fresh off the farm in North Dakota, and just beginning to date, it was always the girl's mother who liked me best! And whenever a beautiful girl would come up to the bandstand and smile prettily at me, chances were she was only going to tell me how much her mother loved me. (They're still doing that, only now they tell me how much their grandmothers love me!)

But of all the people who have burst my bubble over the years, I think the five young boys I picked up one day as they were on their way to the beach must rank among the most unforgettable. They had no sooner gotten in the car than my ego took a blow, because not one of them recognized me. Nothing daunted, I maneuvered the conversation around to music. "Which orchestras do you boys like best?" I asked.

"Oh," they said, "we don't listen to orchestras. We like groups–rock 'n' roll, you know, like that."

"Mmmm," I said. "Well, do you ever look at television?"

"Sure, all the time."

"Do you ever watch the Lawrence Welk show?"

"Lawrence Welk!" screamed one of the boys. "Are you kidding! Migawsh, my mother used to make me look at him! Boy, he's terrible!" The rest of the boys laughed right along with him, and I must say the conversation died a little after that, till one of the boys asked me what I did. "Well," I said, "you fellows won't be mad at me if I tell you, will you?" (I was a little concerned they might be embarrassed if they knew who I was.) "No," they said, "why? Are you a cop?"

I laughed. "No. No, I'm not a policeman, I'm a musician."

"Yeah? What do you play?"

"The accordion."

There was a brief and terrible pause as the awful truth began to dawn on the boys, and then the one who had yelled the loudest said weakly, "Oh boy. You're . . . Lawrence Welk, aren't you?"

When I nodded he turned white and made a grab for the door handle on his side of the car. I think he would have jumped right out if I hadn't reached over and pulled him back. "Oh, Mr. Welk," he moaned, "I'm sorry I said all those dumb things. I didn't mean them, please excuse me, will ya?" I assured him I would, but he sat miserably for a few more seconds. Then suddenly his face cleared.

"Hey!" he cried triumphantly, "it doesn't matter what I think of you anyhow, Mr. Welk, 'cause, listen . . . my mother just loves you!" fw

Did you know your horoscope could mean the difference between happiness or sorrow; between success or failure?

Picture a long room with doors at each end. In this room there is money, attractive persons of the opposite sex, books that tell you the secret of happiness and many other valuable articles. But, also in this room are bottomless pits, traps, hostile persons and dangerous beasts chained in various places around the room. You must walk through this room, but you may take out of it anything you can.

Now if you had a choice, would you choose to 1) go through the room blindfolded or 2) go through the room with your eyes open and with written instructions on which places an and people to visit or avoid.

Of course, all of us would pick the second choice in a case such as this. Isn't it ridiculous, then, that we would choose to go thru life, the same situation, blindfolded! Even when there is a means to go thru life with a map and our eyes wide open! The means provided is Astrology. The map is our astrological horoscope.

How does it work? Nature's cosmos imprints each of us at the time of birth - when the umbilical cord is cut. We then become ourselves. Until the cord is cut, we are part of our mother. Why or how we presently do not know. The movement of the large solar bodies then times potentials for events in our lives. Astrology does not cause events but is timing of events. But, it's not fortune telling. It's a prediction of potentials which free will can override.

Here is a common misconception about astrology. Some people say, "how can stars millions of light years away be related to our lives." The error here is the word stars. Astrology deals with the relationship of our lives with the sun, moon, and planets–not stars.

And, anyone who doesn't think that the sun, moon, and planets do not regulate earth and its inhabitants, had better think again. We all know how the moon controls the tides. We have all heard of the famous clam experiments where the clams open and close by the cycle of the moon, sun, and planets. Police departments and insurance companies show exact relations with crime and violence with cycles of the moon, sun and planets. Doctors are finding direct relationships with successful operations and the cycle of the solar bodies. Authenticated research is now proving that astrology can predict natural disasters, wars, diseases a person will suffer, personalities of people and much more.

What does a natal horoscope analysis by a qualified astrologer contain? A natal horoscope analysis contains the best psychological analysis of yourself that you can get today. Because, in a controlled experiment in 1960, astrologers beat psychologists in predicting case histories.

In addition, a natal horoscope analysis includes discussions on the following: financial outlook; taxes and inheritances; early home environment; relationships with family; relatives and parents; lovelife and marriage; children; career and occupation; hopes; wishes and goals; and subconscious attitudes. In a major analysis, a one year forecast is also included.

Many people think that astrology only appeals to "way out" unscientific people. Nothing could be farther from the truth. In fact, studies show that astrology appeals most to intelligent and logical people.

Consider these famous scientists: Galileo-astronomer, Carl Jung-psychologist, Johannes Kepler-astronomer, Roger Bacon-mathemetician, Tycho Bache-astronomer. Want to know what they all had in common? They all were astrologers themselves or used astrology in their work. Even Albert Einstein was impressed by the accuracy of astrology when he studied it in his late years.

Astrology appeals to people in every walk of life. A horoscope has meant the difference between success and disaster for famous people throughout history. Your horoscope can mean the same to you.

Your horoscope can help you be in the right place at the right time.

Did you know that the three wise men who found the Christ Child were astrologers? The "large star" which guided them to the Christ Child was really a cluster of cosmic bodies which were, as predicted by astrological charts, in line at that particular time. This was the reason it was so bright.

Your horoscope can help you avoid disasters while guiding you to your beneficial opportunities.

Did you know that astrology helped the allies win W.W. II? The allies employed astrologers. The axis powers started out employing astrologers. But, this was ceased early when the famous astrologer, Karl Ernst Krafft, predicted the exact time and place of an attempt on Hitler's life in 1939. Hitler thought the astrologers were conspiring against him, so they were imprisoned.

This proved to be a tragic decision for Hitler. A decision that may have altered the course of the war. Because, if Hitler had studied his horoscope, he would have used different strategy. Why? Because two horoscopes, one of Adolf Hitler, drawn by two different astrologers, in two different countries, at two different times exactly predicted the course of W.W. II.

Hitler did get to see these horoscopes . . . . too late. He read them in the last hours of the war as Berlin burned around him. The following is an authentic account of the incident.

Here is a direct quote from THE RISE AND FALL OF THE THIRD REICH, by William L. Shirer:

> "They sent for two horoscopes, which were kept in the files of one of Himmler's multitudinous "research" offices. One was the horoscope of the Fuehrer drawn up on January 30, 1933, the day he took office; the other was the horoscope of the Weimer Republic, composed by some unknown astrologer on November 9, 1918, the day of the Republic's birth. Goebbles communicated the results of the re-examination of these two remarkable documents to Krosigk.
> An amazing fact has become evident, both horoscopes predicted the outbreak of the war in 1939, the victories until 1941, and the subsequent series of reversals, with the hardest blows during the first months of 1945, particularly during the first half of April.* In the second half of April, we were to experience a temporary success. Then there would be stagnation until August and peace that same month. For the following three years, Germany would have a hard time, but starting in 1948, she would rise again."

*Hitler committed suicide in April, 1945.

On the other hand, astrologers aided the allies in forecasting the axies moves. The most famous astrologer, Louis de Wohl, employed by British government, predicted the exact events leading to the downfall of Mussolini. He gained the faith of the American military when he predicted Pearl Harbor a year before it happened.

More on avoiding disasters, here is a story from a recent newspaper article in the Miami Herald's Sunday magazine.

–Mary Kelly is a computer programmer. She credits astrology with saving her from an operation on her legs that would have left her crippled. "It happened in New York in 1963," she says. "My doctor decided an operation was needed, and told me to check into the hospital Friday for the procedure on Monday. I consulted my astrologer, who did a special lunar return chart and came up with the possibility of a wrong diagnosis for Monday. She told me to have the operation changed to Wednesday, in order to allow the planet Neptune, amongst others, to change position. I did this, and on Tuesday the doctor suddenly discovered a blood clot was causing the trouble. Had he performed the operation, as any doctor would have on Friday's symptoms, I probably would never have walked again."–

Also in the Miami Herald article, was a story about a noted Miami astrologer, Clifford McMillen. Here is an excerpt.

–McMillen is also listed as the official astrologer to Sen. George McGovern, and predicted in February, 1972, that he would lose in November to President Nixon. At the same time, he forecast the victory of his Democratic nomination at Miami Beach.

As he explained to his afternoon museum class recently, "The planet Saturn came into conflict with a planet of McGovern's career area, setting up a T-square, which means considerable difficulties to overcome. In October, Nixon, a Capricorn, will be benefiting from the good planet Jupiter, while McGovern, a Cancer, will have the trouble-giving planet Saturn in conflict with his career area, from the 12th House, building up unknown enemies. Really, in the coming race, he might as well say home."–

Your horoscope can bring you wealth. Famous business tycoon J. P. Morgan, used astrology to acquire his fortune. Morgan did not make a financial move without checking his natal horoscope forecast.

From the article in the Miami Herald come these stories:

–Stockbrokers on Wall Street are as likely to call an astrologer in this decade as Hollywood film stars would call a psychiatrist in the last. David Williams, a 75-year-old retired financial expert who lives in Clearwater, has made $150,000 from the stock market in 13 years by using astrology as an investment guide.

Robert Cooper is a classic, middle-aged establishment sort with silver-rimmed glasses - but he wouldn't move a penny in the $4-million St. Petersburg corporation from which he retired recently as vice president, before charting the planets.–

Your horoscope can show you the way to success and happiness in love and marriage. Horoscopes of Grace Kelly, Jackie Kennedy, and Liz Taylor predicted their current successful marriages. Grace Kelly to Prince Rainier, Jackie Kennedy to Aristotle Onassis and Liz Taylor to Richard Burton.

Princess Grace and Prince Rainier have recently had their horoscopes done together by American astrologer, Keith Clayton. As with these famous people, your horoscope can help you find and keep a lasting and meaningful love relationship.

Is a natal horoscope analysis a good investment?

By knowing how to advance your career or making a correct financial decision, you would get back your investment thousands of times. Success in the areas of lovelife, marriage, children relationship and peer relationship is of infinite value. Knowing what future potentials to take advantage of and which ones to avoid can offer a priceless feeling of security.

Now and through the ages a good natal horoscope analysis has meant success for many people. In other cases many men have missed their opportunity; some with tragic consequences, such as Adolf Hitler.

Will you miss your success opportunities? Will you stumble into pitfalls you could have avoided?

Today, right this moment, you can have your natal horoscope cast and analyzed. You can get it for only the cost to make your duplicate copy. You get the expensive casting and analyzing process–FREE. The article below will tell you how. The means are available, but the choice is yours.

Ten Gas Saving Tips Most Drivers Don't Know...

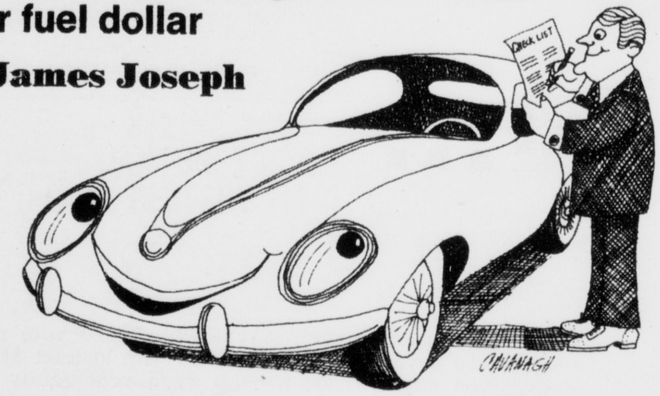
How to be a "Mileage Miser" with Your fuel dollar

By James Joseph



Drive like a "mileage miser," and you can stretch your gasoline mileage 20 to 40 percent. Maybe more. Here's how expert fuel savers (most of them professional drivers) do it. And how you can, too.

Think hot. Right off, you can cut fuel use 8-20 percent on summer days by not using your air conditioner. Among accessories, it's your car's No. 1 power (thus gas) squanderer. You can shave off another five percent simply by operating your engine normally hot: 240°F. when your radiator is filled with the usual 50/50 mix of antifreeze and water, and is capped with a high-pressure cap. A hot engine burns fuel most efficiently. To raise engine temperature in around-town driving (where, normally, an engine never warms enough for complete combustion), reduce the amount of air that can flow through the radiator. Simply blank out a portion of the radiator grille with any air-resistant material. That's what those sports-car "radiator blankets" do.

Fifty mph — the "magic" speed. Everybody knows speed wastes gas. Not many know how much—or precisely why. Above 50 mph, fuel consumption soars. The fuel wasters are wind resistance and the high-speed "jet" in your carburetor, which, above 50 mph, literally gushes gas. You can reduce fuel consumption a hard-to-believe 25 percent by cruising the highway at 50 mph instead of 70—and 11 percent by keeping to 50 rather than 60 mph.

Spark plugs can save you ten percent. A tune-up, new spark plugs and a little grease in the right places can whack another ten percent – or more—off fuel consumption. Burnt or worn spark plugs—which prevent full combustion—can waste one gallon in ten! Mistimed ignition systems, fast-idling engines, dirty air filters or carburetors—all waste gas.

Yes, over-inflate your tires! Friction is a mileage murderer. Poor lubrication on wheel bearings, for example, saps engine power—and mileage. So do too soft tires. Keep yours inflated to the maximum recommended by the manufacturer – and, say the experts, inflate them four pounds higher than recommended on long trips or with heavy loads.

And use only lightweight oil in the engine, transmission and rear axle. Using SAE 20 motor oil instead of heavy SAE 40 can save you 1.2 miles per gallon.

Thermometer vs. gas. Don't travel in really blustery weather—especially if you'll be driving most of the way against the wind. Head winds can cut your mileage 20 percent (up to 50 percent if you drive a camping-type vehicle). In winter and on the hottest summer days, restrict how far and how much you drive. Both seasons are gas robbers, particularly winter. Fuel mileage plunges as the thermometer falls.

The miles-per-gallon meter. Even if you think you know most of the tricks of fuel-economy driving, you'll learn more if you install one of the new fuel-flow meters. It tells you at a glance how many miles per gallon you're getting. Or wasting. Average drivers should recoup the electronic device's cost (about $80) in as little as 12,000 miles. The meter shows the gas waste in jackrabbit starts, quick lane changes and accelerating as you climb a hill.

Here are some more metered tips for gas-saving driving:

—Maintain steady speed and a steady foot on the accelerator.

—Anticipating a stop, get off the accelerator as soon as you can.

—Spend as little time (and fuel) idling as possible. Stopped in traffic or waiting for a light, shut off your engine. And rather than idling to warm up the engine, start right out, warming it at a modest speed.

—Use second gear only when you must. Driving in second rather than in fuel-economizing high gear cuts mileage 15 percent. fw

I turned $1,000 into $1 MILLION in the world's safest investment—in my spare time!

I'll show you how you can, too...

There is a safe and steady road to riches any man or woman can travel. You need no special education, no training, no experience—and age is no factor. If you have a steady job, some spare time and spare cash, you can build a sizable fortune and live an exciting new life. Read on and find out how.

by William Nickerson

WHEN I STARTED on my personal road to riches, I was 25 years old and working at a small salary for the telephone company.

I had saved a total of $1,000 in cash to invest . . . and had just a little spare time after work to devote to investing it.

By the time I was 42, I had pyramided that $1,000 into a net estate worth $500,000—all in my spare time. I quit my job to manage my investments—and did a lot of hunting, fishing, swimming, traveling and loafing, too.

Two years later, I had doubled my net worth to over $1,000,000!

Today, things cost more. If you have $2,500 in cash to invest...or if you can put aside $50 a month for 4 years with interest...you can build your nest egg into an estate worth $219,972 in 14 years...$1,187,195 in 20 years.

What's more, your chances for success in this field are better than 400 to 1—in fact, 1600 times better than if you went into business, according to actual U.S. government statistics.

And most, if not all, of your new wealth will be yours to keep tax-free—not even subject to capital gains tax.

And you can do all this even if you've never had the slightest bit of investment experience in all your life.

Why you can still make a fortune in the world's safest investment

I don't exactly blame you if you're raising your eyebrows as you're reading this.

I know it all sounds a little too good to be true.

But I made a fortune because I instinctively recognized two facts about America which are even more true today:

1. The population of the United States is increasing every year.

2. But the supply of good usable land is strictly limited.

This means that when you invest in land and apartment dwellings, you are investing in one of the most basic needs people have. The market for your investment is always growing, and the limited supply constantly tends to drive prices up. You don't have to worry about your "product" becoming obsolete or going out of style. You have as secure an investment as it's possible to have in an uncertain world.

If you can acquire ownership of good, well-located land, your chances of becoming rich are excellent. If you can take sub-standard housing and improve it—your chances of selling at a profit are tremendous. And—most important of all—if you can get other people's money to work for you, it's almost impossible NOT to make a fortune for yourself in real estate.

My basic investment principle. It works even better today.

Ten years ago, I revealed my investment secrets in a book called "How I Turned $1,000 into $1 Million in My Spare Time." Since then, the book has gone into 18 printings. It documents the four basic principles of attaining great fortunes that are still open to the average person. Many of the people who became wealthy with the help of my book are included in last year's list of 8,000 new millionaires.

If you think things have changed in the intervening years ...if you suspect it may be tougher now to earn great wealth in real estate...let me tell you that I have since tripled my $1 million to $3 million—using the very same techniques I always used.

Over the years, I have never changed my investment principle—and I probably never will. But, in view of recent developments, I decided that a new edition of my book would be helpful. One reason is that financing, for example, has become very tight—and I'd like to show you how to invest when this situation prevails. The "land contract loan" I discuss is a good example. Also, there have been changes in the income tax laws, and I want to pass on to you some valuable new tax pointers I've learned from my own experience and those of other successful investors.

My new edition is entitled "How I Turned $1,000 Into Three Million in Real Estate—in My Spare Time"—and it is literally the product of a lifetime. Into its 544 pages I have poured every ounce of practical knowledge I've gained along the road to fortune. It answers all the questions on real estate operations that my friends have asked me. I believe it can answer dozens upon dozens of questions you may have yourself. And I believe it can open a door for you to undreamed-of wealth.

My Four-Point Money-Making Formula

In my book I reveal—and tell you how to use—the 4 basic principles of traveling the last remaining road to great fortune still open to the average person:

1. How to use other people's money to get rich. This may sound illegal, but it's not. It's the sure-fire money-making technique used by large investors, including banks. Yes, I know money is tight today. But I will show you how you can get lenders to put up gladly at least three dollars for every one of yours, thereby quadrupling the earning power of your capital.

2. How to choose income-producing multiple dwellings in which to invest your own (and borrowed) capital. If all you want is income-producing property, you can probably get along without my suggestions. But if you want to pyramid your capital, there is a definite set of conditions to look for. My book tells you what they are.

3. How to make your equity grow. The fair market value of an income-producing property is in ratio to its income. Therefore, if you increase the annual net by means of the steps I outline, you increase the market value of your property —thereby increasing your equity four times or more.

4. How to virtually eliminate the "tax bite" on your capital growth. I will show you how you can increase your net worth steadily without its being subject to income taxes—not even capital gains tax! J. K. Lasser's famous guide "Your Income Tax" says of this method that "the mathematics have almost unparalleled attraction."

If you have about $2,500 right now—or if you can save only $50 a month for the next four years—you can start out soundly along the road to a million dollars. To enhance your progress, you should continue saving $50 a month or $600 a year. In two more years, the total investment from your personal savings would be $3,600. But then you will start receiving income from your investment. Follow my instructions carefully; your capital can grow at the following startling rate:

In 2 years, your $3,600 grows to $5,800.
In 4 years, you have $11,575.
In 6 years, $21,681.
In 8 years, $39,363.
In 10 years, $70,548.
In 12 years, $124,884.
In 14 years, $219,972.
In 16 years, $386,376.
In 18 years, $677,583.
In 20 years, you top a million with $1,187,195.

How far you want to go up the ladder depends on how much retirement income you would like. I believe you can conservatively earn an average net return of 6% on your personal equity. So if you should be satisfied with at least $12,000 a year, you might decide to stop when your equity reaches $200,000.

This method of making money is not dependent on continued economic boom. It is benefited and underwritten by America's continuing population boom. It is comparatively recession-proof. And you are safe from the effects of inflation, because the value of your property will rise along with the general price level.

"There Must Be A Catch to It!"

Right now, it would be understandable if you were sputtering, "But—but—it's not that simple. There must be a catch to it!"

Of course, there's a catch to it. There are hundreds of pitfalls and traps for the unwary who have never traveled what I call the "realty road to riches." But I made it by learning as I went along. And you have a priceless advantage which I never had—the advantage of being able to know beforehand everything I had to learn by trial and error.

"But Isn't Money Tight?"

Yes, money is scarce today. And interest rates are high. But there are still many ways to borrow...and many places to borrow from. In Chapter 22, I give you the five guideposts for borrowing money...what to do if your own bank won't offer you a suitable loan...four sources of funds you may not have thought about before...how to end up with more cash than you need when you borrow...why it's wisest to borrow up to the very maximum you can...and much much more.

"But Can I Borrow Money When I'm Just Starting Out?"

Big investors can borrow all the money they want. The beginning investor usually considers himself lucky if he can even borrow against his savings. Does that mean the road is blocked before you begin? Not at all. There are five important things for you to know if you want to borrow heavily to finance pyramiding ownerships. You'll find them all explained in Part 8.

Joe Weider, fitness expert and trainer of champions since 1936 says:

"Give me 5 minutes twice daily for only 7 days and you'll lose up to 3 inches from your waistline, up to 6 pounds of unwanted weight, and 'shape up' — or I will return every penny."

LET'S FACE THE FACTS WHY YOU'RE OUT OF SHAPE

You eat the wrong combination of foods, you do not get enough exercise to thoroughly work your muscular, metabolic and respiratory systems daily. Because of this, fat accumulates around your waistline, heart and other body organs, slowing you down, aging your body and destroying your vitality, virility and youth. There is only one way to firm up and shape up: that is through proper exercise and proper nutrition. Effortless exercisers, reducing pills, sauna shorts, weighted belts, dangerous and painful diets and other gimmicks designed to appeal to your laziness will not work and have been exposed by the medical profession as frauds, ineffective and in some cases dangerous. They can only reduce your pocketbook.

Face up to it . . . If you want to slim down, firm and shape up, you must work off the inches, and there is no safer, faster and more enjoyable way to do it than with our patented, truly miraculous "5" Minute Body Shaper Plan.

HOW DOES THIS INGENIOUS "5" MINUTE PLAN SLIM, FIRM AND SHAPE YOU UP?

Its miraculous slimming action is based on doing one simple "5" Minute Continuous Rhythm coordinated exercise, lying on your back! That's all you do! That's all your body needs to help make up for the lack of activity it doesn't get most of the day. The action is designed to supply your waistline and hipline (where fat accumulates quickest, giving your body a flabby, weak and distorted look) with the activity it needs to slim you and keep you slim. It also burns off excess fat FAST by speeding up your metabolism and respiratory system, using up stored calories, carbohydrates and fats and releasing excess water, thereby shaping and firming up your total body!

It's safer than strenuous gym workouts, beats the time consumption and dangers of gym workouts . . . or any other vigorous sport.

The unit weighs about 16 ounces and fits any wallet-size case. You can carry it with you and use it — anytime — wherever there's floor space for your body. Even while watching television.

Is Summer Relaxation Making You Look Older?

For months you looked forward to the relaxation of summer. Swimming and picnicking with the children. Weekend trips with your husband. Lying in the sun to unwind totally, body and soul. The kind of peace and relative quiet that would help you slow down a little from life's hectic pace and enjoy yourself with your family. And of course, you hoped that summer relaxation would show itself in your appearance, making you look less harried and thus a little younger.

Instead, you find that summer is taking its toll. The sun, the wind-blown sand, the sudden changes of temperature as you go from searing sun to air-conditioned restaurants and stores, all are causing complexion dryness. The dryness, which accents lines and wrinkles, can make you look decidedly older. Just exactly the opposite result of what you hoped from summer's relaxation.

Many young-looking women in countries around the world have discovered that they cannot get through the summer beautifully without their beauty secret. This summer, share their secret, a unique beauty blend containing tropical moisturizing oils and natural moisture. This world-famous fluid is known in the United States as Oil of Olay moisturizing lotion. The remarkable blend penetrates the surface layer of the skin quickly. There it works with nature to ease away the dryness that can make you look older, and helps maintain the vital oil-moisture balance, an essential element needed for skin to look as young as possible. Oil of Olay softens and smooths summer-ravaged skin, helping to replace the natural moistness robbed by summer weather. The remarkable beauty blend sets up a protective barrier to keep nature's own moisture from being stolen by harsh summer weather.

During most of the year, a morning and night application of Oil of Olay is enough to keep your skin younger-looking. But during the summer months, you may find your skin needs more frequent pampering. Whenever your complexion feels dry or taut or slightly rough to the touch, lavish on extra Oil of Olay, no matter what the time of day or night.

Never forget to apply the unique beauty blend before you go to bed each night, to do its lovely work quietly for hours while you sleep. And again in the morning, whether or not you wear makeup. As a makeup base, Oil of Olay leaves no sticky after-feel, so your cosmetics go on smoothly, without streaking or discoloring. And even if you prefer to go barefaced in the summer, skin-loving Oil of Olay leaves your skin with a moist glow as it pampers your complexion for hours. You will find this world-renowned beauty blend at your drugstore.

Summer Beauty Hints

After sun-bathing, take a tepid tub to remove your sun-protective lotion. Then generously smooth on Oil of Olay, paying particular attention to those areas most easily dried out by the sun—the skin around your eyes and mouth.

Even if you have been an Oil of Olay® user throughout the year, remember that more of your skin is exposed to the weather during these summer months. Soothe on the beauty blend wherever low-cut dresses, shorter sleeves and sports clothes have left your delicate skin naked to the ravages of summer dryness.

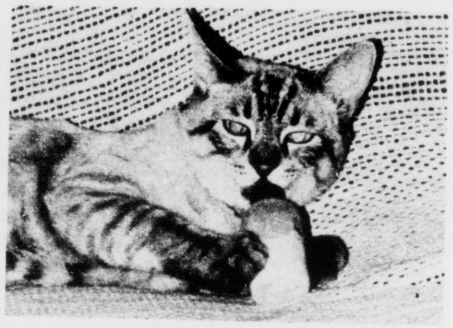
UNFINISHED MASTERPIECE
Who did it, and with what?

Is this a picture from a museum? An early sketch, perhaps, by da Vinci or Michelangelo? No, this picture was drawn on a wall of Cell 8 of the St. Louis Central District Police Station. It was done over 40 years ago by an unknown prisoner, and the police have grown so fond of it that they have had the wall removed and placed under glass at the Police Academy. Many experts have analyzed it, but so far no one has been able to determine what was used to make the almost-life-size masterpiece. Another riddle: Why was the right hand never completed? Perhaps it has a symbolic meaning. More probably, the prisoner's term was up.

ANN MILLER
What a way to meet the Queen!

Ann Miller tells of wearing diamonds, emeralds and rubies said to be from the Farouk collection, to a party in Hollywood. "I met the exiled Egyptian Queen Mother Nazerlie, who had been thrown out of Egypt by her own son, King Farouk. When we were introduced I started telling her that I had been in her country and how wonderful it was. But then I noticed she wasn't listening. She was standing there staring at my Egyptian bracelet and clips. She finally asked me where I got them, and I told her. Then she said, very softly, 'Those are mine. They once belonged to me.' . . . If I'd been a terribly wealthy woman I would have taken them off right there and given them back to her. Instead, I told her I'd treasure them forever, and I have." From "Miller's High Life," by Ann Miller with Norma Lee Browning (Doubleday, $7.95).



VIRGIL AND HIS BOTTLE
"Too much fun being people?"

Virgil, part Siamese and part tabby, was abandoned by his mother when not quite two weeks old. He was hardly more than a handful, half-dead, eyes not yet fully open. Not much hope remained, but Virgil was kept alive by the Paul A. Jerrain family in Simi Valley, Calif. They hand-fed him every two hours: first with an eyedropper, then a spoon. After three days he graduated to a two-ounce animal baby bottle. Now, at the age of nine months, Virgil still remains very much a baby. At the sight of his bottle, he will jump on the living room couch to be cuddled and fed. According to his veterinarian, "Virgil will never become a cat; he's having too much fun being a people!"

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

When we depart for, say, two days,
We risk a parting of the ways.
I say we ought to leave a light on;
My wife says no, and there's a fight on.

I say the burglars this will scare;
They'll think there's surely someone
there.
My wife insists a light's a beacon
And burglars simply see to peek in.

Besides the glare and the publicity,
She notes the cost of electricity.
I say it doesn't cost a lot
To leave on just a 40-watt.

And so it goes, pro light and con,
To leave it off or leave it on.
Who wins, however, you must miss....
A burglar may be reading this.

Warning To Auto Polluters

Team Sets Date For Crackdown

By FRED STREBEIGH

One of the most annoying sights on Marin highways — the vehicle emitting great clouds of smoke — may soon become a thing of the past.

On Sept. 15 the Bay Area Pollution Control District will send its 12 new vehicle pollution inspectors to begin cruising the highways and byways of the nine Bay Area counties to issue citations for excessive vehicle exhaust smoke.

Marin County will probably be assigned one or two regular patrolmen, according to Christine Bell of San Francisco, a trainee receiving instruction in how to stop offenders' vehicles this week — from the California Highway Patrol in Corte Madera.

The training is something much different from what the 26-year-old Mrs. Bell, a former secretary for the air pollution district, is used to.

It includes hand-to-hand defense tactics taught by the San Francisco police and defensive driving training on the Highway Patrol obstacle course at its academy in Sacramento.

Mrs. Bell welcomes the change in assignment, saying it will give her a chance to confront pollution problems directly and "get out from behind a desk."

SMOKERS BEWARE — Officer Timothy A. Miller of the California Highway Patrol explains techniques for stopping vehicles to Christine Bell, one of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District's new air pollution inspectors. Mrs. Bell and 11 others will cruise local highways looking for vehicles emitting too much smoke.

She said that inspectors will have "limited peace officer powers." They will give tickets but not carry arms. The two women in the program are the only ones without law enforcement experience.

However, she said the inspector's job is not to get tangled in general law enforcement problems; it is to identify the "smoker" and get him off the road.

To be able to get the goods on the illegal smoker, the inspectors went to a pollution control district school to learn to "read smoke." At smoke school the trainees learned to tell how badly a vehicle is smoking on the Ringelman scale of zero to five, with zero being clear and five, complete opacity — "a car smoking so badly you can't even see the back of the car."

Learning to read smoke is important so the inspectors can defend their citations against challenges in court. The age of a car determines how much it is permitted to smoke, she said. For example, under the code, 1971 and newer vehicles cannot exceed a reading of one on the scale, while older cars will not be cited unless they exceed two on the scale.

She said that in training with the highway patrol last week her car stopped a van "throwing out so much oil and smoke that even the patrol car's windshield was covered from pulling him over."

Mrs. Bell observed that automobile polluters are much like cigarette smokers: "There are very few borderline smokers — either they don't at all or they really do."

Mrs. Bell said that the inspectors will start on the major highways and begin working smaller roads as soon as they get to know their areas and have a chance to "make contact with local police."

She said enforcement on smaller roads is important because a lot of cars that smoke — are never driven on larger highways.

Until word gets around, the pollution inspectors' cars, painted bright orange, with a row of flashers on top, may be a surprise to both motorists and police.

She said the air pollution district is trying to spread the word to other law enforcement agencies "so a police officer driving down the street won't run off the road when he sees us."

Since inspectors are unarmed and only interested in pollution violations, she said publicity was doubly important. "I hope drivers know they're only being stopped for an infraction," Mrs. Bell said.

Some highway patrol officers had been apprehensive for inspectors' safety. Officer Myron R. MacNeil at the Corte Madera office was surprised to learn that they will not have even a club or mace for protection.

"If anyone gets belligerent, "she's going to be in a heap of trouble," he said.

Mrs. Bell isn't worried.

"You're taking a chance (on stopping someone) who's just robbed a bank or something, a guy can get out of the car and shoot you, but that kind of thing can happen coming out your front door."

Officer Timothy A. Miller who taught Mrs. Bell freeway tactics said that the highway patrol puts a high priority on stopping smokers.

He said that the new inspectors will help keep the pressure on excessive smokers. And that is important, Miller believes, "especially when you look around this beautiful county and see it's smoggy as hell."

Arab Guerrillas Exit Jet Before Israeli 'Capture'

'We Fooled Them' Says Leader Plane Intercepted For Check Out

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Four Arab guerrilla leaders avoided capture by Israel because they smelled "something fishy" and decided not to board a Baghdad-bound plane intercepted by fighters over Lebanon and forced to land at an Israeli airbase, a guerrilla spokesman said today.

"We fooled them this time," a representative of the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) said.

The guerrillas who reportedly changed their plans at the last moment included Dr. George Habash, leader of the PFLP, and his third in command, Salah Salah.

A United Nations Security Council meeting on the incident was scheduled for Monday at the request of Lebanon as threats and expressions of outrage poured in from Arab lands.

Two Israeli jets intercepted a Middle East Airlines (MEA) Caravelle jet with 81 persons aboard Friday night moments after it took off from Beirut International airport and forced it to land at an airbase in Israel.

The Lebanese defense ministry said anti-aircraft fire was directed at the Israeli planes and that fighters scrambled but were unable to catch the Israeli craft and their captive airliner.

The passengers' identities were checked at the air base before the plane, which had been en route to Baghdad on charter to the Iraqi national airline, was allowed to return to Beirut with no one aboard detained.

An Iraqi Airways plane on which the guerrilla leaders reportedly were scheduled to travel to Baghdad was delayed nearly four hours in Vienna. To accommodate the passengers waiting at Beirut to board the plane, Iraqi Airways chartered the Caravelle.

But Habash and the three other guerrillas decided not to take the charter flight because "the delay made them smell something fishy," a PFLP spokesman said.

The Lebanese pilot of the Caravelle later told officials he obeyed the fighters' instructions "because I did not want a repeat of the Libyan airline disaster." This was a reference to the shooting down on Feb. 21 by Israel of a Libyan airliner over the Sinai desert, resulting in the deaths of 108 of the 113 persons aboard.

Upon their return to Lebanon, the passengers said about 40 Israeli soldiers armed with automatic weapons had boarded the plane.

One passenger, Mahmoud Jawad Al-Shakerji, said, "A number of women collapsed and wept. So did some children. It was all very frightening."

Among the passengers was Irqai Minister of Planning Dr. Jawad Hashem.

Israel has admitted forcing the plane to land at its air base but has been silent about the motive.

Mahmoud Riad, secretary general of the Arab League, sent protest cables to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO).

In London, a spokesman for the British Air Line Pilots Association said, "We deplore this aerial piracy which is completely at variance with the pledges Israel has made internationally through the pilot group to prevent all infringements of air space and other acts of piracy."

Lebanese Premier Takieddin Solh described the Israeli action as "aggression in the full sense of the word, which is the nature of Israel's existence, and an act of piracy."

Iraq said it "reserves all rights to take deterrent measures to prevent the recurrence of such aggression and acts of piracy."

In Cairo, an Egyptian military spokesman said, "This is a criminal action in violation of international law and custom. All the other countries in the Middle East are capable of using the same method against civil Israeli airliners."

BEDAYAN TRIAL

Issue Of Sanity Still Key Item

By BILL ROBERTS

Attorneys for Brent William Bedayan attempted Friday to refute a prosecution claim that the Mill Valley man tailored his answers to psychological test questions to prove he was mentally unbalanced when he shot and killed three persons.

Dr. Alla Soufi, a clinical psychologist from San Francisco, said nothing in the background of an undergraduate college student like Bedayan would give him the ability to manipulate test results.

Bedayan is charged with the triple murder of Melvin and Ruth Schallock and their 19-year-old son Daniel in March outside their Mill Valley home.

Earlier in the 12th day of the trial before Judge Henry J. Broderick, Dr. Soufi had testified that it would be possible for an individual with Bedayan's educational background to give answers to fit the insanity defense.

But under redirect examination by public defender Frank J. Cox the psychologist reversed his position.

The prosecution's contention is based on the fact that Bedayan enrolled in several psychology classes at the College of Marin, worked at the state hospital in Napa and reportedly purchased several additional psychology books.

In response to Cox's questions Dr. Soufi admitted that introductory survey courses in psychology offered at most colleges do not provide the necessary information for altering psychological tests.

The psychologist said he did not think Bedayan was faking

Agnew's Financial Files Are Subpoenaed

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI) — Federal prosecutors, investigating alleged kickbacks, have subpoenaed Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's campaign finance records from archives of the State of Maryland.

The records sought include those of Agnew's successful race for governor in 1966 and his two campaigns for vice president.

U.S. Attorney for Maryland George Beall obtained the subpoenas Friday against the Maryland Archives, the Hall of Records and the state Board of Elections, all in Annapolis.

Beall, who is conducting a federal grand jury investigation in Baltimore into alleged kickbacks paid to government officials by building contractors, architects and engineers, formally notified Agnew Aug. 1 that he was under investigation concerning possible acts of conspiracy, extortion and bribery.

Beall asked the vice president to voluntarily turn over his personal bank and income tax records by Aug. 9.

Agnew held a news conference Aug. 8 to declare his innocence. He has been granted an extension of time for the voluntary turnover of his personal records, while his lawyers study the constitutional issue of whether this would violate separation of powers.

Beall appeared to be acting on the assumption that his subpoena of records from the State of Maryland rather than from an incumbent vice president does not raise that constitutional issue.

The federal prosecutors specifically sought any records involving dealings between Agnew and Jerome B. Wolff, former Roads Commission chairman; Lester Matz, partner in the consulting engineering firm of Matz, Childs and Associates; John C. Childs of the same firm; I. H. "Bud" Hammerman II, a mortgage banker and real estate developer, and J. Walter Jones, who has raised funds for Agnew.

The Baltimore Sun reported today that prosecutors have obtained another subpoena for records of Maryland projects from 1967 through 1972 held by the Federal Highway Administration. It would be the first such requisition to a federal agency in the investigation.

A $1,000 Reward For Ranger Clues

Publisher Wishard A. Brown of the Independent-Journal today offered a $1,000 "Secret Witness" reward for information leading to apprehension and conviction of the killer of Kenneth C. Patrick, Point Reyes Nat. Seashore ranger.

The ranger, shot to death near the Mount Vision Overlook Road last Sunday morning, was the first National Park Service ranger slain in line of duty since 1916.

The Marin County Sheriff's Department and Federal Bureau of Investigation have proceeded on the theory that Patrick had been shot by a poacher whom he surprised in the foggy early morning. To date, the case is unsolved.

Anyone with information that may lead to the killer may supply it anonymously by writing to Secret Witness, P.O. Box 330, San Rafael. The writer should place a five-digit number in bottom left and right corners of the letter, then tear off one corner and keep it. If the information leads to an arrest and conviction, he may claim the reward by presenting the torn-off number. Arrangements for collecting the reward may be made by telephone, and the "Secret Witness's" identity need not be known.

Information contained in the letter, but not the number or any identifying material, will be turned over to the FBI, which has assumed jurisdiction because the slaying occurred on federal property.

Panel Absolves Hub Police In Drug Raid

By REBECCA LARSEN

A San Anselmo city council committee has concluded that the city's police department "conducted itself properly and with due regard for the law" in a controversial drug arrest June 22.

Mayor Lewis W. Stewart issued the statement absolving the police of wrongdoing following a closed meeting Friday with Councilman Martin G. Blinder, Police Chief Raymond Buchignani, City Atty. Hadden W. Roth, City Administrator Alfred C. Kaeppel and two officers involved in the arrest, Capt. G. Albert Howenstein and Inspector Bernard L. Del Santo.

(An Independent-Journal reporter was barred from attending the meeting after Roth ordered it closed because "the rights of officers are involved."

On Roth's advice, Mayor Stewart retracted an invitation issued to the reporter earlier in the day.

Conflict over the arrest arose after a Marin judge on July 16 ruled invalid the search warrant which led to the arrest of two San Anselmo men and the seizure of about 12,000 LSD tablets.

The case began when San Jose police arranged to buy LSD from two San Jose men, then arrested them at a San Anselmo restaurant after a sample of the drug was handed over.

One of the arrested men then led San Jose and San Anselmo officers to a home at 176 Oak Springs Drive. Officers waited in the house for four hours before they were able to obtain a search warrant, then seized the LSD and arrested Harry Francis Fergerstrom Jr., 24, and Dennis Valentino, 27.

Municipal Court Judge David R. Baty subsequently freed the men and ruled there was "no

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Freed On Bail

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four of six young American women held for the past eight months in a Turkish jail on drug smuggling charges have been granted release on bail, the State Department reports.

The department said Friday that bail of about $3,500 each was granted for Maria Therese Crocki, 25, and Penelope Czarnecki, 23, both of San Francisco, Paula Gibson, 23, of Fairfax, Va., and Margaret Engle, 20, of Falls Church, Va.

Final Search

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Volunteers in New Mexico and Arizona launched a final search today for a small boy who has been frantically crying for help over radio bands the last four days.

Search coordinators, conceding the case may be a "well planned hoax," said the search for the mystery boy will end Sunday — "win, lose or draw."

The boy, identified only by a first name of Larry, began transmitting his distress calls late Tuesday.

More Arrests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ninety-four persons have been arrested since July 6 for kneeling in prayer at the White House to protest the bombing of Cambodia. The group sponsoring them plans a mass vigil at the White House on the scheduled final day of that bombing Tuesday.

The 93rd and 94th demonstrators in the series were arrested by the Secret Service Friday Like others they stepped out of the White House tour line, knelt in prayer and were charged with illegal entry.

Off To China

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and his wife Cathy have left for China where the jurist plans to investigate conservation practices and the country's judicial system.

China has long been an interest of Douglas, who was strongly rebuked by President Truman when he suggested that the United States should perhaps recognize the Communist government following the 1948 revolution.

Support Rights

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — The governors of Kentucky, Ohio and Oklahoma endorsed the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution Friday at the Young Democrats' National Convention here.

Kentucky Gov. Wendell Ford was the only one of the three governors whose state has ratified the amendment. Kentucky ratification, with the support of Ford, came last summer in a special session of the legislature.

The other chief executives on the panel were Govs. John J. Gilligan of Ohio and David Hall of Oklahoma.

A New Home

PARIS (UPI) — Soviet author Andrei Sinyavsky, a man branded a "renegade" and a "werewolf" by the Soviet Communist party newspaper Isvestia, today transplanted his life to the West.

Two years after his release from a Soviet labor camp east of Moscow, Sinyavsky arrived from his homeland Friday at Paris' Gare du Nord North Railroad Station with his wife and 7-year-old son, ready to take up his new post as professor of literature at the Sorbonne University.

Bomb Deaths

BELFAST (UPI) — A bomb that apparently exploded prematurely today killed two men, one of them a member of the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA), as they drove in an automobile near a border crossing point southwest of Londonderry.

Sources Of Nixon Funds Due Airing

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — President Nixon's reelection organization has agreed to furnish California officials with secret details of campaign funds raised before a new federal disclosure law took effect April 7, 1972.

"All financial activities of the Nixon campaign will now be brought into the open and the public will finally receive a full accounting of how money was raised and spent," California Secretary of State Edmund G Brown Jr said Friday.

Brown announced that detailed reports covering contributions and expenditures between Jan. 1, 1971, and April 6, 1972—both inside and outside California—will be filed with his office by Sept 28 Funds raised and spent after April 6, 1972, already have been reported.

"I am informed that the new reports will cover millions of dollars in contributions," said Brown, a Democrat.

"Testimony before the Senate Watergate Committee has revealed that Nixon fundraisers made a special effort to obtain contributions prior to April 7 under the mistaken belief that money raised during that period need not be made public," he said.

"Although federal law may not require disclosure, California law clearly does require full disclosure of campaign donations—no matter when they were received."

Brown said the Nixon campaign organization also has agreed to help "reconstruct" records covering more than a million dollars raised prior to 1971. Additional details of pre1971 campaign financing are expected to be submitted after Sept. 28, an aide said.

If not next month, at least afterward, the aide continued, the secretary of state's office should obtain details on several hundred thousand dollars which Nixon's personal attorney, Herbert Kalmbach, kept in two Newport Beach checking accounts and a Los Angeles safety deposit box.

Some of the money paid out by Kalmbach was believed to have been funneled into a campaign to defeat Alabama Gov. George Wallace in his winning 1970 gubernatorial bid.

Brown, a contender for the 1974 Democratic gubernatorial nomination, said: "Funds raised in California were sometimes spent outside the state. And funds raised elsewhere were sometimes used to pay California campaign expenses.

"It is therefore impossible to isolate 'California' money and the Nixon committees have agreed to file reports covering the entire national campaign."

A Brown aide said the secretary of state negotiated primarily with attorney Nicholas McConnell, whose Washington law firm represents the Finance Committee to Re-Elect the President. This committee, headed by former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans, was the chief money handler for the Nixon campaign organization.

Brown said this and five smaller committees also will file similar, but less detailed, reports in Washington Sept. 28 with Common Cause, which had sued to obtain pre-April 7 records.

The secretary of state last September asked California Attorney General Evelle J Younger, a Republican, for an opinion clarifying the state's campaign reporting law Younger agreed with Brown July 3 that the Nixon organization must disclose its pre-April 7 financing.

Brown interpreted California law as requiring presidential campaign committees acting within the state to report all contributions and expenditures. A violation is a misdemeanor.

Under the new 1972 federal law, expenditures and contributions exceeding $100 must be reported.

Uncle Sam Sues Top Tire Firms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The country's two top tire companies have been charged with monopoly practices by the Justice Department. One of them, Goodyear Tire Rubber Co., said the complaint is "without any merit whatsoever."

In civil suits filed in Cleveland Thursday against Goodyear and the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., the government asked a U.S. District Court to force the firms to give up the smaller companies they acquired in the past decade and to stop further restraint of trade in the sale of tires bought by consumers to replace worn factory issues.

The complaint charged the companies with violating the Sherman and Clayton antitrust acts by substantially cutting prices between 1959 and 1966 in order to force smaller companies out of business, and then buying them out to cut down competition.

Able To Eat

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Stevie Wonder, the singer, was able to eat normally Thursday for the first time since suffering a brain contusion in an auto crash Monday.

$1.40 TAB FOR A DOZEN EGGS SEEN

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — The president of the Texas Egg Council says eggs will cost between $1.30 and $1.40 a dozen by the end of the year. He blamed the price increases on grain exports.

K.E. Jacob said Friday the price of eggs will probably reach $1 a dozen for all grades within the next couple of weeks and from that time the cost for 12 eggs will probably never dip below the dollar mark.

In many places, the dozen-egg price is already above the dollar mark.

The Dollar Is Making A Comeback

LONDON (UPI) — The dollar, long-ailing in the doldrums of European money markets, scored its most spectacular improvement in several weeks Friday.

The U.S. currency ended the week worth substantially more foreign money than when the week began.

"We are surprised at the dollar's performance, especially on a Friday," said a U.S. banker in Frankfurt where the dollar for the first time since July 11 reached the 2.40 mark plateau to close at 2.4065 marks.

"We think the little boom might continue awhile because of the technical market weakness of the mark in Germany," the banker said.

"Also a major American bank has raised its prime interest rate to 9-¼ per cent, and the technical effect of that should also strengthen the dollar."

The First National City Bank of New York announced Friday it was raising its prime interest rates, the interest that major businesses pay for loans, from 9 to 9-¼ per cent. Several other banks followed. It was the 13th such hike this year and brought the prime rate to a record.

Elsewhere in Europe the dollar showed signs of rejuvenation. It substantially increased in Zurich to close at 2.950 Swiss francs and moved up in Vienna to 17.60 schillings.

On the Paris two-tiered market the dollar was up, closing at 4.26 francs for the floating dollar used by tourists —a rise of six centimes during the day—and up on the official commercial dollar to close at 4.2175.

Nixon Signs Farm Bill, Hails Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon signed a new farm bill Friday and hailed it as a weapon against inflation. But Nixon said the compromise "falls short" of his larger goal to get the government out of the agriculture business.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz called the bill "an historic turning point," saying that for the first time in 40 years the government is encouraging farmers to expand production rather than restrict crop output.

The four-year farm program, taking effect next year, is the result of what Nixon called "a realistic compromise" with Congress after months of wrangling.

It provides government-supported "target prices" below current record levels, but above supports of past years.

The bill replaces an expiring law, which provided fixed minimum support payments to farmers no matter how high the market prices went.

Nixon said, "It means that our farmers can expand production during the current period of worldwide food and fiber shortages without fear of a serious drop in farm income.

"Indeed, this law should help in our battle against inflation by encouraging farmers to produce at full capacity."

Nixon, who objected to some parts of the bill, said he signed it although "it falls short of the high standard I have set for reforming farm legislation and eventually moving the government out of agriculture."

The law creates target price levels in 1974 and 1975 for wheat at $2.05 a bushel, corn at $1.30 a bushel and cotton at 38 cents a pound. It also reduces from $55,000 to $20,000 the maximum that any farmer can receive in grain-cotton subsidies.

Other provisions increase minimum dairy supports to 80 per cent of "fair price" parity, liberalize food stamp benefits for needy families, ban food for peace aid to North Vietnam, and repeal a 75-cent-a-bushel "bread tax" for flour millers.

Deposed Ruler To Visit Shah, Wife

ROME (UPI) — Constantine, the deposed king of Greece, and his wife, Queen Anne Marie, will leave today on a visit to Iran, a royal spokesman said.

The exiled monarch will spend "10 days to two weeks" as the private guest of the Shah and Empress of Iran, the spokesman said Friday.

Phnom Penh Defense Perimeter Expanded

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodian troops backed by American warplanes today cleared rebel forces from all roads and highways outside Phnom Penh and expanded their defense perimeter all around the capital by several miles.

Correspondents traveled down the various roads and highways that fan out on all sides of Phnom Penh like spokes in a wheel, and government forces were in control in some areas such as Highway 1 to the southeast as far as 32 miles from the capital.

On Highway 2, where insurgents have pulled back several miles from the capital, all that remained were smashed houses, destroyed bridges and the rubble of war.

Trenches dug by the rebels were surrounded by fragments of bombs dropped by American planes.

On Highway 1, now open all the way to the Mekong river port city of Neak Luong, correspondents found the road pockmarked with bomb craters and 80 per cent of the homes destroyed. Cambodian officers on Highway 1 said to the best of their knowledge all of the homes were already evacuated when they were bombed.

In addition to clearing Highways 1 and 2, government forces also swept Highway 3 and Route 38 which links Highways 2 and 3.

The government clearing operations were assisted by continued intense American bombing to the south, west and north of the capital. American B52s, F4 Phantoms and and F111s flew air strikes on suspected rebel positions, but they were some miles further from the capital than in recent weeks when rebels pushed to within three miles of the city limits.

American warplanes also provided blanket coverage for a convoy of supply ships that was sailing up the Mekong river from South Vietnam to Phnom Penh. American pilots reported fire on the convoy, but there were no immediate reports of damage.

To the north of Phnom Penh, rebel troops shot down a government military plane and all five crewmen aboard were killed.

Military sources said the single-engine light aircraft, carrying a captain, two lieutenants, a gunner and an amament specialist, was shot down as it tried to fly into encircled Prey Kry, about 39 miles north of Phnom Penh. Sources said there were no survivors.

Prey Kry has been surrounded by insurgent troops for months and the sources described the military situation there as critical. They said the plane was apparently being flown into Prey Kry to assist the encircled troops there.

Elsewhere in Cambodia, little ground fighting was reported.

Death Plan Vote Urged In Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The author of death penalty legislation Friday urged Assembly Criminal Justice Committee members to "save the lives of innocent private citizens" and send the measure to the full Assembly for a vote.

The committee, scheduled to vote on the measure Aug. 14, is considered the key to whether a capital punishment bill will emerge from the legislature this session.

Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, told the seven committee members in a letter, "I hope you will vote to save the lives of innocent private citizens and peace officers by sending SB450 to the Assembly floor, with or without a recommendation."

The measure has passed the Senate and is given a good chance on the Assembly floor if it clears the committee.

In his letter, Deukmejian also remarked on the sentencing of convicted murderer Carl A. Eckstrom in July in Santa Ana.

Eckstrom was found guilty of killing two Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies, who had gone to his home to arrest him for two other slayings.

In sentencing Eckstrom to two life terms, Judge William C. Speirs was quoted as saying the suspect "knew there was no death penalty. Had the death penalty been in effect, they (the victims) might well be alive today."

Deukmejian also said in the letter, "In view of the overwhelming vote in favor of the Initiative, Prop. 17 reinstating capital punishment, the people of this state are entitled to have the entire legislature decide the outcome of the death penalty issue."

The bill would require death for hired assassins, torture killers, mass murders, two-time murderers, police killers, and persons who kill witnesses to a crime.

Hearing Set In Hash Case

Preliminary hearing for a Petaluma man who allegedly tried to hide a chunk of hashish in a police car will be Thursday in Marin Municipal Court.

Ronald Gregory Andrews, 19, of 1294 Ramona Lane pleaded innocent to a felony charge of possessing marijuana.

The Marin district attorney's office said Andrews was arrested June 12 in Novato when officers stopped him for a traffic violation and found he had an outstanding traffic warrant from Nevada County.

After police drove him to Marin County Jail for booking, a package containing 20 grams of suspected hashish was found in the back seat of the patrol car, officers said.

Building Permits Decline In July

The Petaluma Building Inspection Division issued building permits for $416,717 worth of construction during July, a decrease of $410,541 from the June total and considerably less than the $885,648 in July 1972.

July permits included five new commercial buildings, four signs and 10 accessory buildings.

Diplomats Will Visit Petaluma

Eight foreign diplomats and their families will begin a 4,000 mile cross country tour of small town America Monday from Petaluma.

Diplomats from France, Ethiopia, Spain, Great Britain, Yuguslavia, and Czechoslovakia, their wives and children, will travel 4,000 miles through Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, South Dakota, Illinois and Ohio.

The 19 adults and four children will go by trailer and car, led by Claud Moyes, a former Petaluma resident who will act as guide for the caravan. The officials range from first secretaries to press secretaries assigned to embassies in Washington D.C.

Burdette A. Shannon, Petaluma Chamber of Commerce manager, said Petaluma was selected as the starting point because of its Northern California location and small town atmosphere.

The group was scheduled to arrive in Petaluma today in a bus provided by the Petaluma city council and chamber.

They will spend the weekend at the Sonoma-Marin Fairgrounds learning to drive their vehicles, then head north Monday for a first stop in Eureka.

Representatives of the Airstream Corp., the tour's sponsor will accompany the diplomats.

BY U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Saturday, August 11, the 223rd day of 1973, with 142 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

American lawyer, orator and uthor Robert Ingersoll was born August 11, 1833.

Also on this day in history:

In 1909, the first radio SOS was received when the liner "Arapahoe" messaged for help off Cape Hatteras, N.C.

In 1954, a formal peace announcement ended the seven-year Indo-China War between France and victorious forces of the Communist Viet Minh.

In 1965, blacks began rioting in the Watts section of Los Angeles. During the ensuing six days of violence, 34 persons were killed and 856 injured.

In 1971, New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay switched from the Republican to the Democratic party.

A thought for the day: French writer Victor Hugo said: "A compliment is something like a kiss through a veil."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.
Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, light pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Three-Year Term Given To Inmate

A San Quentin inmate, found guilty of possessing a billy club in the prison's lower yard March 11, was sentenced Friday to at least three years in prison.

The new sentence for Dennis Earl Hungate, 22, of Los Angeles, will run concurrently with a three-year-to-life term he is already serving, Judge Charles Read Best of Marin Superior Court decided.

Hungate began serving a term for second degree attempted burglary in August 1969 and later was convicted of assault with a deadly weapon by an inmate and possessing a weapon in prison. Both offenses carry terms ranging from three years to life.

A jury convicted Hungate of the latest charge July 19 following a day of deliberation.

Hungate was charged with having the club — an iron bar 15 inches long taken from a weight-lifting machine — after a prison guard found him with it in the exercise yard.

He also was dressed in prison "armor" — magazines strapped around his body and a book protecting his groin.

Money Willed To The Government

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — John Rosetta immigrated to the United States from Italy in 1917, served with the Army in France during World War I and was naturalized a citizen in 1920.

He worked as a waiter in San Francisco's North Beach district until his retirement. He died in 1971 at the age of 83 without ever marrying.

His will, disclosed Thursday, left an estate of nearly $75,000 in cash and U.S. Savings Bonds to the U.S. government.

"I do this in gratitude for the care and help I have received from the government," said the will, written in 1969, which specifically omitted his two brothers.

Span Jumper Is Reported

A man about 30 years old with shoulder length black hair apparently jumped to his death from the Golden Gate Bridge Friday, according to the California Highway Patrol. No body has been recovered.

A witness saw a man in a green jacket and blue pants climb over the railing about 30 yards north of the south tower and jump about 3:30 p.m.

A black leather purse and note were found nearby, the highway patrol said.

Crash Victim Has Surgery

A Rohnert Park man underwent surgery at Community Hospital in Santa Rosa today for injuries suffered in an auto accident in Petaluma this morning.

Dale Hummel, 40, of 367 Bonnie Drive, received cuts and a fractured leg in a crash on Petaluma Boulevard South at about 4 a.m.

Hummel was reported in fair condition at the hospital.

The California Highway Patrol had no details of the accident.

Extension Asked For Bicycle Path

A bicycle path which ends at Tiburon Boulevard and Cove Road in Tiburon should be extended to Beach Road, the parks and recreation commission agreed Thursday night.

The $4,400 extension is necessary to avoid hazards to cyclists at the busy intersection, said Robert L. Kleinert, assistant city manager. The city of Belvedere has agreed to share the cost of the project.

answers to a battery of tests which he administered to the defendant in April at Marin County Jail.

Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales questioned Dr. Soufi on what the prosecutor thought were inconsistencies in test answers concerning Bedayan's homosexual impulses.

Dr. Soufi said that very powerful and largely suppressed homosexual impulses may have contributed to Bedayan's emotional disturbance. But he said test answers by the youth that he is not a homosexual only indicate that he does not understand his subconscious impulses.

Judge Broderick also asked Dr. Soufi if the fact Bedayan shot and killed three people does not make Bedayan mentally ill, regardless of other factors.

The doctor said it is his belief that Bedayan didn't even know whom he was killing, but added he would not judge everyone who kills to be insane.

The defense also called Dr. Charles Fleckles, head of the crisis unit at the Marin Mental Health Center, who interviewed Bedayan in December before the man was admitted to the facility.

Dr. Fleckles said he did not take notes while interviewing Bedayan and talked with him for only one half hour before convincing him to enter the center.

But he said he formed an impression that Bedayan was an acute paranoid schizophrenic. The psychiatrist said Bedayan had the delusion that some person was going to "do him in." He said that, because the fear was not based in reality, he received only vague answers when pressing Bedayan for details about the person he viewed as a threat.

Judge Broderick adjourned the trial until Tuesday.

Petaluma Eyes Two Bond Issues

The Petaluma City Council will decide whether to put two bond issues — totaling $2.7 million — for parks and a library on the Nov. 6 ballot when it meets Monday at 7:30 p.m. in city hall.

The council will consider asking voters to approve $1.5 million for park development and $1.2 million for a new library.

Capital improvement projects for 1973-74 will also be considered.

School Sued In Stabbing Cases

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Two Lowell High School students have filed a $100,000 suit against the San aFrancisco Unified School District, charging that because of negligence they were stabbed in a school yard fight.

Philip McCollum, 18, and Mark Gamble, 17, charged in their Superior Court suit that principal Barton Knowles and other school personnel knew fights were going on between whites and Filipinoes but failed to provide adequate supervision.

McCollum was stabbed in the right arm and Gamble in the chest last Oct. 13.

BART Orders Minicomputer

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Bay Area Rapid Transit District board of directors has decided to purchase a mini-computer as a backup for part of the trains' automatic control system.

BART officials said the new device—to cost $40,000—will act as a fail-safe mechanism for existing wayside detecting devices.

The new prototype will be built by Modular Computer Systems of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

DETROIT (UPI) — The Guru Maharaj Ji, saying he needs extra rest, Friday canceled his scheduled appearance for today at Detroit's Cobo Hall.

Two Admit To Setting Grass Fires

Two San Rafael boys, 14 and 15, have admitted setting a series of grass fires in the Los Ranchitos area in June and July with delayed action incendiary devices, Marin County sheriff's deputies reported today.

The youths used a rope fuse attached to a book of matches, deputies said. They ignited the rope then left the scene, according to officers who said it would take up to an hour for the fires to start.

One boy admitted setting nine fires and the other confessed to setting five, but could not explain why they did it, deputies said. Both were cited to the probation department.

There were 17 small grass fires in the Los Ranchitos area from June 8 to July 16, according to the Marin County Fire Department.

Marinite Named To High Post

Anthony E. Desmond of Mill Valley has been named chief of the San Francisco office of the antitrust division of the U.S. Department of Justice.

Desmond, 37, succeeds Marquis L. Smith, who has retired after more than 30 years in the division. Desmond has been assistant chief for three years.

A graduate of the University of California at Berkeley, Desmond received his law degree from Hastings College of the Law in 1961. He has been with the division 11 years.

He lives at 2 Redwood Lane with his wife, Barbara, and two children.

Pittsburg School Head Is Fired

PITTSBURG (AP) — The superintendent of the Pittsburg Unified School District has been fired by the school board following an investigation that labeled him an "ineffective administrator."

The board took the action Wednesday after reviewing a California School Board Association report which revealed that 96 per cent of the persons interviewed in the Contra Costa community said John W. Hagen "lacks the ability to make a decision."

probable cause" for issuing the search warrant.

The statement issued by Mayor Stewart on behalf of the council defended San Anselmo officers on the grounds that entry into the home had been authorized by the Marin County district attorney's office. Stewart also said that entry without warrant was not illegal since the officers thought there was probable cause to believe that a felony was in progress. "It should be stressed that during the time officers were in the house, no search was made of the premises, in compliance with law, until a warrant was issued," Stewart said.

Stewart said that the court ruling that the entry was illegal was based on the judge's opinion that the informant was an unreliable witness. The "so-called" misrepresentations to gain the search warrant, were, he said technical and semantic errors "the significance of which has been and remains a matter of perennial judicial dispute."

Most participants in the meeting could not be reached for comment. Inspector Del Santo said he was pleased the committee had "understood our position and backed us 100 per cent. They concluded that there were no civil rights violated," he added.

Laird Admits To Bombing 'Report' Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird says he approved a "separate reporting system" to keep bombing raids in Cambodia secret in 1969—but denies approving any "falsification" of records.

The Pentagon, meanwhile, says the original March 18, 1969, order for 14 months of secret U. S. bombing of Cambodia may have been given orally, with no written record kept.

Laird, who is now President Nixon's domestic counselor, told a news conference in Chicago Friday that he devised a system whereby reports of the Cambodia bombing went to the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the President, while the public was told only of bombing raids in South Vietnam.

Woman Attacked At Knifepoint

An 18-year-old San Anselmo woman was raped at knifepoint in San Anselmo Thursday night, police reported Friday.

The woman told officers she was walking down Bolinas Avenue at 10:20 p.m. when a man walking parallel to her darted across the street, pushed her into a hedge, pulled a knife and raped her, police said.

She described her attacker as about 25 years old with dark, curly hair and wearing a plaid shirt and light pants, police said.

Decision On Man's Term Is Pending

A San Rafael man could receive a jail or prison sentence of up to one year for stealing a necklace and bracelet twice from a San Rafael woman.

Ronald Berg Goodrich, 23, pleaded guilty Friday to a felony charge of receiving stolen property in exchange for a promise from Judge David Menary Jr, of Marin Superior Court that he will receive no more than a year behind bars.

Goodrich has already served four months in jail for taking a pearl necklace and pearl and ruby bracelet valued at $800 from the home of Elena M. Foley on Nova Albion Way.

The jewels were recovered, but Goodrich and Carol Ruth Litteral, 20, of San Rafael, reportedly stole them again in June, along with $1,000 worth of other jewelry.

The two were arrested after they allegedly pawned the bracelet and necklace to a Corte Madera man, for $20, but charges against Miss Litteral were dismissed due to lack of evidence.

No More Than Year In Jail Will Be Given

A man, who admitted concealing stolen property taken from a Tiburon house, will receive no more than one year in county jail under a plea bargain agreed to Friday.

Howard Earl Rhodd, 23, of no known address, confessed to the charge in exchange for a pledge by Superior Court Judge David Menary Jr. that he will not be sent to state prison.

The Marin district attorney's office had recommended a prison sentence for Rhodd.

Rhodd was arrested by Tiburon police in connection with the theft of $3,000 in stereo equipment. Police said a 17-year-old Tiburon youth took the goods from the Paul E. Lyme home in Tiburon and gave them to Rhodd.

Prison Term Is Suspended

A confessed burglar has received a suspended state prison sentence and ordered to participate in a program at the Delancey Street Foundation, a San Francisco halfway house.

Dennis Leslie Yates, 31, of Novato, was also placed on probation by Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Superior Court, who sentenced the man Thursday.

Yates pleaded guilty to burglary in the second day of his jury trial July 3. The charge was filed after Yates and a companion forced their way into the apartment of a Novato woman last August, threatened her and fled with $125 in cash.

IS MIND POWER THE ANSWER?
If thought effects the way we act and what we do - then our first concern should be about what we believe.

Nixon Secluded At Retreat To Work On Watergate Speech

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — President Nixon is in seclusion with key advisers at his mountain top retreat this weekend, preparing what he apparently regards as the most crucial speech during his presidency—a half-hour television address to the nation on Watergate.

He is expected to deliver it the middle of next week.

The President also has been considering an appearance Aug. 20 before the Veterans of Foreign Wars in New Orleans to increase his public visibility while the Senate Watergate hearings are in recess.

Nixon also plans to hold press conferences again after a five-month unprecedented hiatus. But there were indications he has no intention of holding it in Washington in the near future.

Instead, tentative plans call for him to stop off in New Orleans and then fly to San Clemente, Calif., where at some point before Labor Day he would meet the press, and submit to questioning on Watergate.

Riding on his upcoming TV address was the President's ability to boost his standing in the polls and to reassert respect for the Watergate-shattered White House.

He has been working on it at least some of each day recently. Its importance to him is also indicated by the unusual number of aides on hand.

Nixon, a solitary man who prefers to work alone, had with him this weekend his chief speech writer, Ray Price, who talks a more conciliatory line and Patrick J. Buchanan, who is considered one of the hard liners in the speech writing group.

Also with Nixon were Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., his chief of staff, and Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler.

Nixon consulted Friday with J. Fred Buzhardt, his chief counsel on Watergate, who apparently advised him on legal issues he may discuss in his speech.

While his address may represent his first public defense since his 4,000-word statement on Watergate, issued last May 22, Nixon also was expected to focus attention on his past accomplishments in bringing the Vietnam War to a close and his hopes for peace in the future.

White House counselor Melvin R. Laird, speaking before the National Legislative conference in Chicago on Friday, appeared to set the tone.

He said the last weeks and months "have been difficult and trying times for all Americans" but that "only the hand wringers and wailers, the prophets of doom and gloom" would lose faith in the American way of life because of Watergate.

"I don't believe that we're going to become a nation of quitters and nay-sayers just because we happen to be living, as in the days of Tom Paine, in times that try men's souls."

He expressed confidence that when Nixon has spoken on Watergate ad "after the American people have made their independent judgment on Watergate" the nation can begin to focus on other problems.

Youth Confesses To Sex Murders

HOUSTON (UPI) — Elmer Wayne Henley, a wild-eyed chain smoking teen-ager, confessed Friday to taking part in at least 23 murders of young boys lured to their deaths at homosexual orgies.

"I feel pretty grotesque," he said. "I didn't feel like I was going to be able to hold my sanity much longer."

Henley, 17, and David Brooks, a calm, quiet 18-year-old, led police to different burial grounds in East Texas and along the Gulf Coast where the bodies of four more victims were found Friday.

That brought the death toll in the three-year spree of sex and sadism to 23, and police believe even more bodies—as many as 30—may be found unless the tide have carried them away.

"If they buried as many as they say, there will be four left on the beach," Houston police Detective W. L. Young said.

Shortly after he signed his confession, Henley called his mother and informed her he had told the police "just everything."

"Momma, be happy for me because now, at least, I can live," Henley said.

Henley was charged Friday with four counts of murder and held on $400,000 bond. Today, he was charged with two more murders—the July 27 shooting of Charles C. Cobble, 17, and the "strangulation with cord" of Marty Ray Jones, 18, on the same day.

Brooks was charged in Houston with one count of murder with malice in connection with strangulation of William Ray Lawrence on July 10. Assistant District Attorney Mike Hinton said no bond was set for Brooks, and his office is recommending bond not be set.

Guilty Plea Entered On Auto Burglary

A San Anselmo man, said to have broken into four or five cars at Point Reyes National Seashore, pleaded guilty Friday to two counts of burglary.

As a result of plea bargaining, a third burglary count against David Frederick Johnston, 18, was dismissed and Judge David Menary Jr. of Marin Superior Court promised him no more than one year in jail.

Mark Steven Botai, 21, also of San Anselmo, was arrested along with Johnston June 10 by seashore rangers who had staked out a parking lot near park headquarters.

Botai is due to enter a change of plea Monday. Both men had previously denied the burglaries.

Youth Is Fair From Accident

A Cotati youth was reported in fair condition today at Hillcrest Hospital in Petaluma with injuries suffered yesterday in a single-car accident near Petaluma.

Kenneth Wong, 13, of 1375 Rose Avenue received multiple cuts in the crash. Also treated at the hospital for cuts was Ricky Piazza, 15, of 10164 Redwood Highway, Cotati.

Both boys were passengers in a car driven by Rodney L. Browder, 17, of 10087 Redwood Highway, Cotati.

The California Highway Patrol said their car was westbound on Old Adboe Road near Petaluma when it went off the road, into a ditch and rolled over about 4:25 p.m.

Low Blood Supply Spurs Plea

A serious local blood shortage is causing the Marin Center of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank to make an special appeal for donors next week.

A spokesman said that "summer is always bad" because people go on vacations but that this year there seemed to be an even worse than usual shortage, possibly because more surgeries are being performed.

One day this week the San Francisco blood bank was down to six pints of O-positive blood and 10 pints of A-positive, the most most common types. Donors of all types were being sought, though.

The Marin center, at 506 Fourth Street, will be open from noon to 6 p.m. Monday, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Wednesday and Friday. A mobile unit will visit Marin General Hospital to collect donations there from 7 a.m. to noon Tuesday and from 12:30 to 5:30 p.m. Thursday.

Bernstein Brings Revives Old Masters For Pontiff

Pope Lauds Conductor For His Performance

By HAROLD ROGERS
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

ROME — "I wonder who'll be coming in first," Alberta said, "Bernstein or Pope Paul?" And then she quickly answered her own questions: "Bernstein, of course. The grand entrance will go to Paul VI."

We were gathered — 8,000 eager listeners — in the vast new Aula delle Udienze at the Vatican. Already on stage were the members of the Newark Boys Chorus ("They rose like a phoenix from the slums," Bernstein had told us a couple of days earlier); there was also the Harvard Glee Club and the Chorus and Orchestra of the RAI (Italian Radiotelevision). We were about to hear the annual concert presented by the RAI to the Pope.

On stage was an empty podium, in the audience a large white chair. We were already on our feet. A dignitary appeared at the left side of the stage, gave a signal, and Leonard Bernstein made his brisk way to the podium, pausing en route to shake hands with the concertmaster. When the burst of appluase subsided we turned to face the rear of the hall.

Soon Paul VI appeared, escorted by his retinue. Another burst of applause and a continuing ovation as the pontiff slowly made his way down the center aisle to his post of honor. He sat, we sat, Bernstein turned to the musicians, the television cameramen made their proper signals, and the concert — on a dynamic downbeat from Bernstein's baton — began.

As we listened to the rousing opening of Bach's Magnificat, I recalled the many times I had heard Bernstein conduct over the past 25 years — at Symphony Hall in Boston, at the Music Shed at Tanglewood, in Philharmonic Hall in New York, and now at the Vatican in Rome, the city Alberta and I call home.

In 1949 I was a journalistic observer in Bernstein's conducting class at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony's summer home, and never in all my conservatory days did I ever attend a course so stimulating, so exciting.

"It makes no difference what kind of a movement you make," he taught us. "The important thing is to make your intentions clear to the players." He delighted in the shocking statement, the vivid illustration, the theatrical stance.

In those days he was often accused by critics — even by me — of employing gestures to attract attention to his own compelling personality. He was an enfant terrible, Serge Koussevitzky's protege, a prophet without honor with members of the Boston Symphony.

But that early period of youthful self-dramatization has long since passed. Now at the Vatican we were witnessing the work of a mature master.

"It was not my intention to retire from the conductorship of the Boston Symphony," Lousevitzky told me a few months before his passing. "I had proposed to the trustees that they engage Lenushka (Mr. Bernstein) as my assistant. Then as I would gradually fade out, he would fade in. But the trustees didn't want it that way."

And when the Boston Symphony did feel he was ready for them, he was out so far ahead he couldn't turn back. In recent years, however, he accepted the post of musical director for the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

Shortly after his arrival in Rome our phone rang. "Why don't you come to a rehearsal?" he asked. "I'll be working at the Foro Italico — that old monument to Mussolini — from 3 to 8."

"We'll be there," I said; and later that afternoon, in response to a compliment paid him by Alberta, he humbly replied: "I'm just a tired old conductor."

He may have felt tired, though his vitality belied it. But he didn't look old — different, perhaps, his hair more grizzled, his face more deeply lined. I thought of the moment what I was first aware of his existence: I was looking at the cover of the album of his Jeremiah Symphony in the show window of Sherman & Clay's in San Francisco. I was impressed by his handsome profile, his early success. He was then in his middle 20s.

But as the rehearsal progressed it was plain to see that the old fire was burning, the emotional sparks flying.

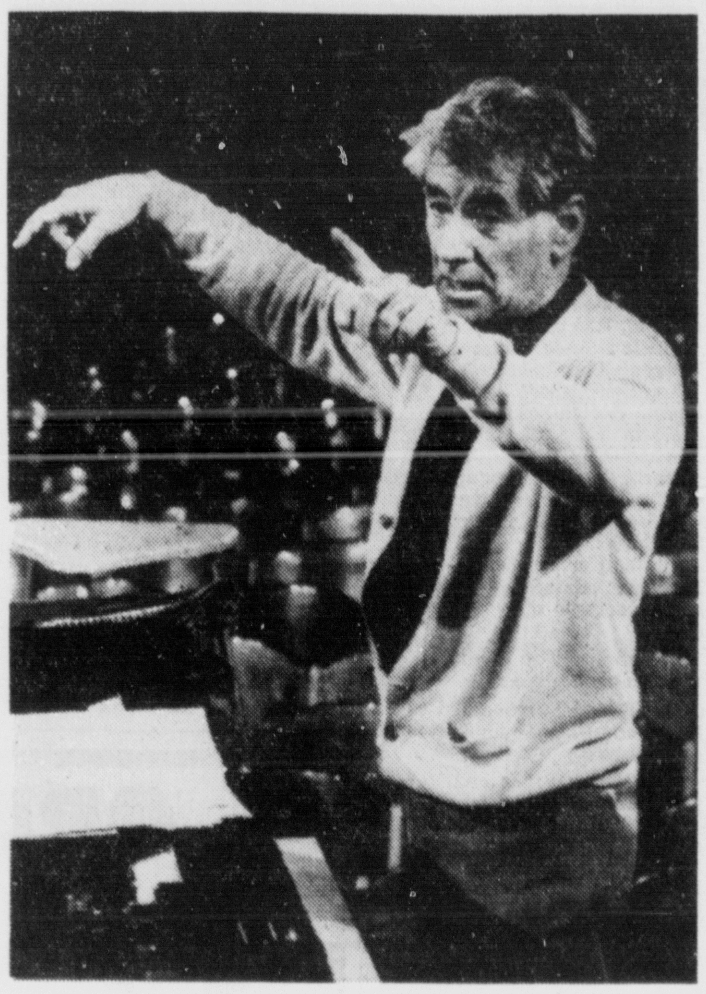
"You are not a tired old conductor," Alberta told him during a break. "You are expressing timeless being."

"I don't know why," he answered, "but a couple of years ago I suddenly felt old. I'll find it again — whatever it was I had. Of course I'll find it again."

He has a magnificent attribute he has never lost — his inexhaustible capacity for love. More than any other quality of his many-faceted genius, love is the great communicating element of his success — his love of the music, of his pupils, his musicians, his public, his friends, his family.

"Isn't Bach incredible?" Bernstein told us at the rehearsal. He went on to say that Bach turned out something like an eternal hit parade, that the great show tunes of our times fade into insignificance when confronted by Bach.

The Magnificat completed and duly applauded, the papal concert continued with the second and final selection — Bernstein's own Chichester Psalms, composed in 1965 for the annual festival held in Chichester Cathedral in Sussex, England.



LEONARD BERNSTEIN
At a rehearsal session

Here the mood changed radically, the harmonies ranging widely with American spaciousness. Bernstein's early eclecticism has settled into a style truly his own, but at no time in his career did he ever echo a mood not fully American.

He chose his texts from the Psalms in Hebrew, and the work is dramatically developed into a kind of spiritual tug-of-war between the 23rd Psalm — a prayer of peace — and the belligerent assertions of the Hebraic Second Psalm: "Why do the nations rage, and the people imagine a vain thing?" The battle continues until the staccato shouts of the Second Psalm are silenced by the serenely sustained song of the Twenty-Third.

As the final notes faded into the distance the public rose to pay its tribute — a continuin ovation as Bernstein directed attention to the orchestra, the choirs, the soloists, and — of course — the Pope.

Whereupon Pope Paul, speaking extemporaneously, thanked Bernstein and his musicians for "the delicious and magnificent concert," an hour of inspiration that gave him respite from his daily cares.

"It is most extraordinary," he said, "that you, Maestro Bernstein, as a representative of the New World, have come here to teach us old Europeans how to make music. In your program we heard the music of Bach, representing established tradition, contrasted with your own, filled with the youthful vitality that is America."

When we later saw Bernstein in his dressing room he had taken off his shirt, his tails, his white tie. He was bare-chested, with a handsome jewel hanging from his neck and a black velvet cape draped from his shoulders. In this strikingly elegant way he received his fans and his friends.

Alberta and I stayed to the last.

"And now remember what I told you," she said to him. "Your performance today proved that you are expressing timeless being. You gave me a moment of eternity."

"Thank you, my dear," he said. "All is well when the communication with God goes on. It's pure hell when it stops."

"The night of the soul," I said.

"Yes, the dark night of the soul, as St. John of the Cross put it," he said. "I went through a dreadful period a few years ago when all communication stopped. Perhaps the best thing, when that happens, is just to stand and wait."

"Or importune," I said.

"But these experiences bring us to our knees," Alberta added. "They teach us humility. And then we rise higher."

"You're so right!" he exclaimed. "We always rise higher!"

We kissed him good-bye and made our way out through the deserted auditorium. A few worken were removing the last platforms from the stage. The sun was setting as we stopped out into St. Peter's Square. The clouds behind the great dome were a radiant pink, suffusing a roseate glow over the Bernini colonnade. And the closing words of the Chichester Psalms, as we reluctantly strolled between the two great fountains, were still ringing in our ears:

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

Dredging Bill In Not A Surprise

The Bel Marin Keys Community Service District has learned that it will have to pay to dredge and additional 20,000 cubic yards of soil from Novato Creek if the stream is to remain navigable.

Board secretary Kay Dow said the report, presented to the board Thursday, by engineers who prepared the dredging plan, came as no surprise. The district has already budgeted $1,400 for the extra dredging.

She said dredging is now underway in the creek, but because of silt now settling in the channel, the operation will have to be more extensive and continue longer than expected.

The board took no action on a request by dredging contractor Dunconson-Harrelson for a 70-day extension from its December deadline for completing the work.

Bel Marin Keys Community Services District board also:

ELECTION — Noted that the seats of board members Carl Wandt and D. J. Thrall will be up for election Nov. 6.

SWIMMING POOL — Set Sept. 11 as closing day for the community pool.

PARK — Learned the Marin County park and recreation commission will soon call for bids for landscaping the districts Montego Park.

50,000 Jehovah's Witnesses In Brussels—International Meeting

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Fifty thousand Jehovah's Witnesses from 40 countries are in town for their international convention—four days of picnicking, sightseeing, baptizing and preaching.

Meeting in the cavernous auditoriums of the Palais de Centenaire near the grounds of the 1968 World's Fair, the Witnesses say they are here to show that Christianity can conquer the world without armed conflict.

The convention program says the Witnesses are being asked "to pronounce themselves openly for a divine government as the only alternative for the solution of the problems of this tormented world."

Catering to the visitors is an army of volunteer workers who have set up dormitories, bathing facilities, a hospital and cafetarias capable of serving 20,000 hot meals an hour.

Outside the meeting halls, more than 200 tour buses are available to take the Witnesses to and from their hotels and campsites and on tours of Belgium.

The theme of this year's gathering is "Divine Victory." Convention organizers say the daily program is designed to "teach people to live according to Bible principles and prepare them for the new way of living in the approaching new system of things."

The Witnesses get their instruction in groups ranging up to 18,000 at a time according to the language they speak.

The largest language grouping is Spanish, with about 16,000 Witnesses from Spain. About 8,000 persons attended each of the sessions in French, Dutch and Portuguese.

Convention officials said 21,000 American Witnesses are in Europe for various national meetings and several thousand of them are in Brussels.

Inside the meeting halls, which are not air conditioned, women in sun dresses sat in closely packed deck chairs, fanning themselves with convention programs, and rocked their sleeping babies.

Many elderly persons watched the proceedings from portable cots, cooling themselves with battery-powered fans.

Shultz: No Shortage Of Meat In U.S.

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz said Friday there is no shortage of meat in the nation except that created by people "going out and buying anything they can lay their hands on."

He warned that cattle raisers who keep their beef back from market now may find "they won't make out so well on Sept. 12 (when the beef price freeze is to be lifted) if there is a big surge in the supply.

"If people will take it easy, we can get through to Sept. 12," he said. "We have a very extravagant diet in this country."

Shultz said he expects automakers to be "first in line Monday," when business firms may begin asking for approval for price increases under the Phase 4 economic guidelines.

He said he did not know if the price hikes will be approved before the introduction of 1964 models in September.

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American Motors have all said they would seek "substantial" increases, which could reach $150.

In other developments:

Wheat futures at the Midwestern commodities exchanges reached record heights again Friday, the 10th day in a row. In Chicago, all contracts for wheat futures advanced 20 cents, the maximum increase allowed. The bid for wheat to be delivered in September was $4.54 a 60-pound bushel.

The Independent Bakers Association asked for immediate emergency export controls on wheat. A spokesman said telegrams were sent to Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz and Commerce Secretary Frederick Dent declaring the wheat scarcity has already shut down 100 large independent bakers and has the entire industry operating at a loss.

The Hershey Foods Corp. announced the price of cocoa beans has risen from 36 cents a pound last year to 80 cents, and the price of almonds has gone up 90 per cent. The firm said in its annual report that "it is apparent that prices and bar sizes also will be changed substantially," subject to government approval.

In Washington, the Agriculture Department said although beef production continued to decline this week, pork supplies increased enough to record a 2 per cent weekly rise in the amount of meat going to market. Pork is not subject to the price freeze.

The Army said its commissary at Ford Ord, Calif., will stop selling beef Monday because there isn't any. Officials said beef for the 12,000 trainees and others who use the post's mess halls will not be affected.

In Lynwood, Wash., buffalo meat has become a popular supermarket item even though it sells for about 20 cents a pound more than beef.

Youth Dances Set In Fairfax

A series of Saturday evening dances for high school and junior high school age young people has been scheduled by the Fairfax Parks and Recreation Commission.

The first dances are scheduled for Oct. 13 for the junior high school and Nov. 3 for the high school age group, according to commission chairman Leo Cronin. Dances will be in the Fairfax Pavilion.

The commission set discussion of the Fairfax Citizens' Committee Report on the General Plan for its next regular meeting August 28.

Sausalito Ferry To Celebrate Third Anniversary Next Week

A birthday party for the Bay Area's most popular 3-year-old — the Sausalito ferryboat — will be celebrated Friday by the Golden Gate Bridge District.

Some three million passengers have ridden the vessel since it revived ferry service across the Bay. It is scheduled to have a new sister by next June, a larger and faster ferry to operate from Larkspur.

The vessel will be decorated on Friday, and free coffee and doughnuts will be served on morning commute runs. A band will be aboard for the 4:10 and 5:30 p.m. runs from San Francisco's Ferry Building, and free champagne and snacks will be provided by the operator of the boat's concession.

There also will be a birthday cake in the morning and evening, according to plans announced at Friday's meeting of bridge district directors.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

BUSES — Received a staff report that 74 of 250 employees working at the toll plaza commute by bus, thus decreasing need for parking in the area.

GARDENER — Commended Hugh Wallace of San Rafael, gardener foreman, for his "outstanding efforts" in landscaping and beautifying gardens in the toll plaza area.

SPARE — Bought a spare marine diesel engine for the Sausalito ferry from the single bidder, Peterson Tractor Co. of San Leandro, for $33,346. Peterson was the sole supplier of the required type of engine, the staff reported.

SAN RAFAEL — Referred to staff seven bids ranging from $1,490,000 to $2,320,000 to build maintenance and administration buildings and landscape the bus maintenance facility in San Rafael. The lowest bidder, Christensen and Foster of Santa Rosa, withdrew its bid on the grounds it was erroneous. The next lowest bid, by F.P. Lathrop of Emeryville, was $1,740,000.

HANDICAPPED — Referred to committee a suggestion that physically handicapped persons be allowed to use the bridge toll free because of their inability to use district buses.

Building Passed By Tam Board

The Tamalpais Design Review Board Thursday night approved final plans for Raymond Hoffman to build 16 residential units at 384 Pinehill Road, according to Curry Eckelhoff, board spokesman.

Board members rejected final plans for developer Broughton-Horne to build 12 residential units on Shoreline Highway west of Pinehill Road. The plans did not comply with zoning and setback requirements and did not provide for adequate landscaping, Mrs. Eckelhoff said. The developer will present revised plans at the board's next meeting Aug. 23.

'Jane Doe' Style Is Becoming Increasingly Popular In Marin

By JOAN LISETOR

"Scratch a woman and you will find a feminist," has been said by writer Betty Friedan. Another writer, a bit more noted, William Shakespeare, asked, "What's in a name?"

Not exactly on the same literary level, the two authors have touched on a subject much on the minds of Marin County women, most of whom do not consider themselves feminist.

An increasing number of married women are asking to be referred to by their given names, rather than their husbands'. (Jane Doe instead of Mrs. John Doe.)

The women, most of whom are active in traditional women's clubs, are submitting material to the I-J in the "Jane Doe" style. A check of records for the past three months shows that 60 per cent of the married women who have been elected presidents of Marin organizations and called the I-J to make appointments to have their pictures taken have given their own names.

Elise Meyers of San Rafael, program chairman for Marin Branch, American Association of University Women, complained in a letter to the editor of the I-J after a panel of prominent Marin women presenting a program for the AAUW was each identified by her husband's name.

Mrs. Meyers believes that using one's own name is a beginning toward developing one's own personality.

"I feel strongly that I should have my own identity," she said. "It should be separate from my husband's, although we are a close family. Things have been better since I insisted on an identity of my own. I used to wait until he got home because I wanted a piece of what he was doing. It was hard on him.

"Now when he comes home I tell him what Elise Meyers has been doing."

HAVING A doctor of philosophy degree gives Libby Colman an advantage most women don't have. She can use the title "doctor." It does get confusing for the Sausalito woman when she and her husband, a psychiatrist, are introduced as Dr. and Dr. Colman.

Unlike some professional women Libby Colman likes using her husband's last name, but she said about the only time she uses Mrs. Arthur Colman is to call a plumber.

It angers her to receive mail from her alma mater, Wellesley College, addressed to Mrs. Arthur Colman, because she was known there by her maiden name. Because she was not career oriented prior to marriage she has never been tempted to use her maiden name.

"People usually giggle when they introduce Arthur and me as Dr. and Dr., but really what we prefer socially are our first names," she said.

MARJORIE PARR picked up the nickname Jorie when she began hosting a radio show for KTIM, "Jorie Talks." She now identifies with the name Jorie Parr and has changed steadfastly from being Mrs. Gordon F. Parr, she said.

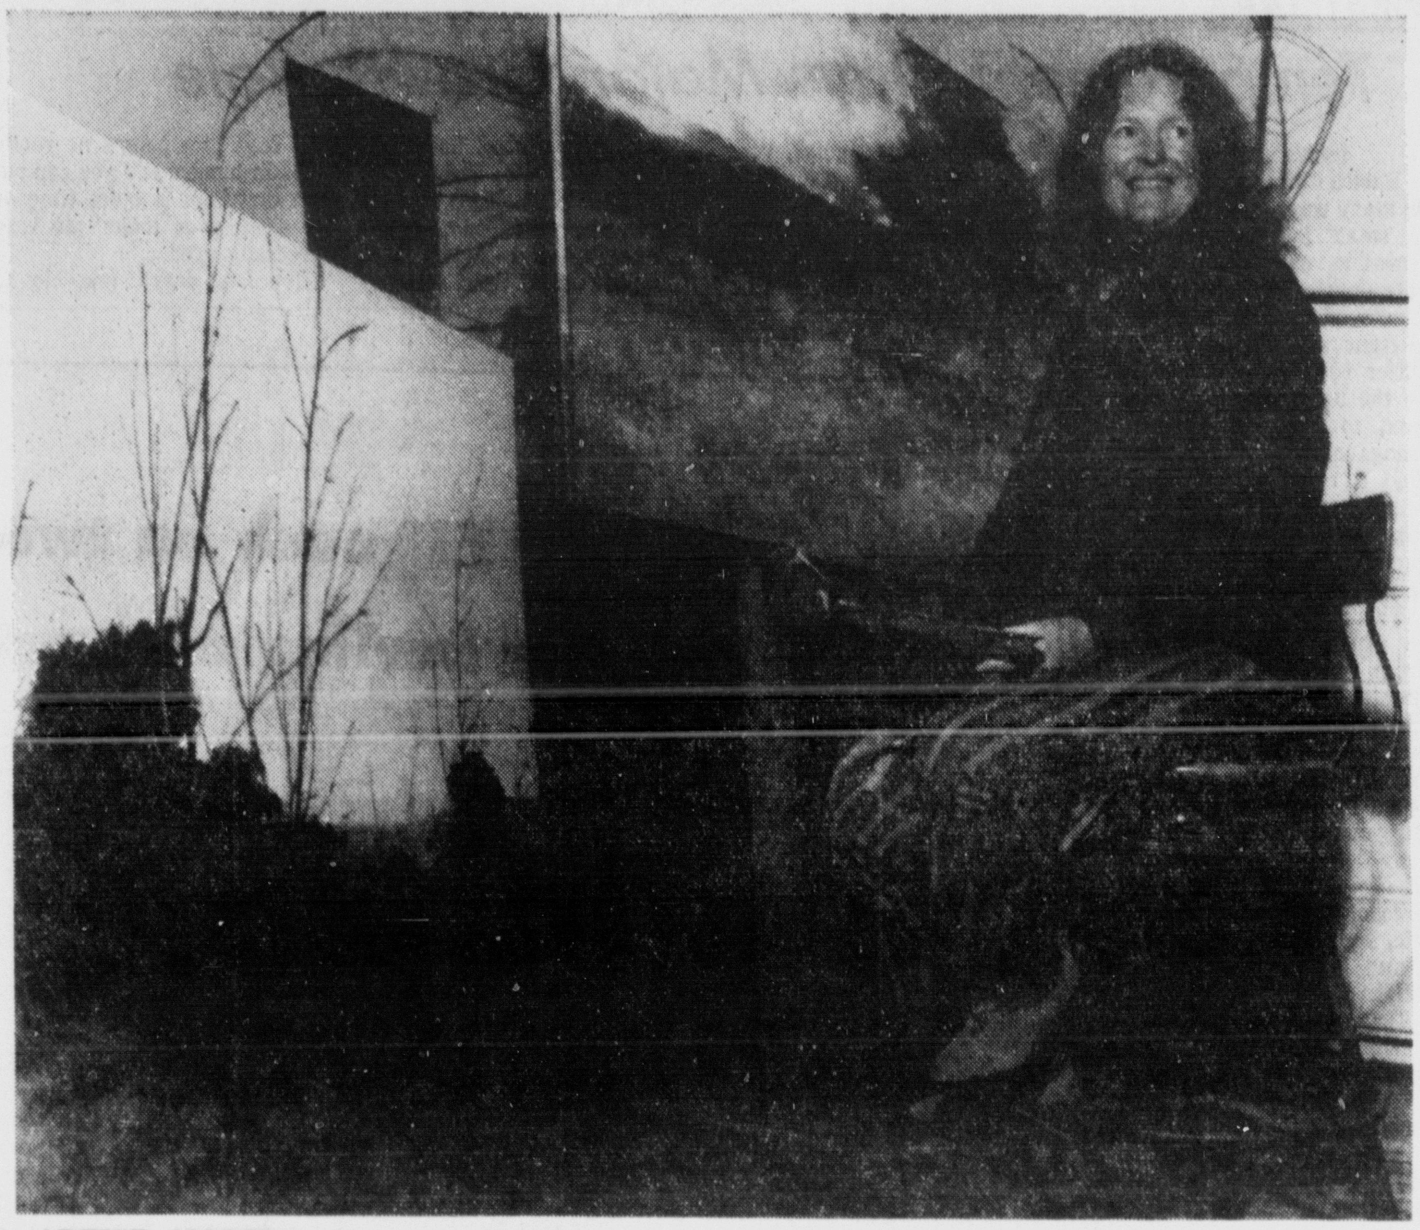
"I think it's tacky to put Mrs. in front of a woman's name, but lately I've been writing to friends and using Ms. or no title and just the woman's name," she said.

If she is calling somewhere to make a complaint she uses the Mrs. Gordon Parr, the San Rafael woman said.

"But it did give me a good feeling when my husband was on a trip recently and addressed the letter Mrs. Gordon F. Parr," she said.

Oddly, many women who prefer to be known by their own names are difficult to locate because they are not listed in the telephone book, preferring to be listed under their husband's names.

Also for identity sake an increasing number of women are retaining or reverting to their maiden names, which raises such questions as, "Is the Jane Smith, who is the wife of John Doe, the former Jane Smith, who. . .?" However, the Smith name is the woman's father's, so one wonders why it is less objectionable to be known by one's father's name than by one's husband's?



ARTIST MARTHA Borge of Point Reyes Station is seated before two of her paintings which will be on exhibit at Gump's Gallery in San Francisco in October. Her realistic paintings using acrylic paint on Masonite board are of the hills and valleys of West Marin and Sonoma County. The painting on the left is a setting near Sebastopol in shades of greens and grays and the one on the right is a scene of West Marin, painted in shades of browns and yellows with a cypress tree.

Artist Captures West Marin Hills

By DOROTHY NEWELL

Views of the hills and valleys of West Marin and Sonoma County can be seen in Gump's Gallery in San Francisco in October.

They will be displayed in the paintings of artist Martha Borge of Point Reyes Station.

"My hope is to capture the moods of strength, stability and peacefulness in the landscape," she said. She rarely works from the scene itself but carries the eessentials of her impressions, as she remembers them, she said.

HER LANDSCAPES are in natural colors showing the variations of a tree or trees, grassy land, sky and clouds. Occasionally she adds a barn or a house to the scene.

Mrs. Borge's paintings vary from large three feet by six feet to tiny one foot squares painted with acrylics on Masonite board.

The woman, who had always wanted to be an artist, said "No other area has lured me. I can't remember a time when I wasn't painting."

She said her paintings once had a soft, diffused quality, but since she had a cataract removed from her eye, she can see things more clearly, and she puts more color in her art.

She paints for about five hours a day, dividing the time between the afternoon and evening hours.

Mrs. Borge has exhibited in numerous galleries and has won a number of prizes, including a second award at the 1957 Jack London Square Festival in Oakland and first award in 1964. She received a first award in 1964 at the Northern California Annual at Crocker Gallery in Sacramento, and she also has shown at the College of Marin Fine Arts Gallery.

Her landscapes have been shown in three San Francisco annuals and Art Across America at the San Francisco Museum in 1965. One of her paintings was purchased by the San Francisco Art Commission in 1967.

SHE ALSO received two awards and a purchase prize at the National Small Painting Exhibition at the University of Omaha in 1967. She exhibited her paintings previously at Gump's in 1968 and sold all of them. She also exhibited there in 1971 and many of the works were purchased.

The artist was graduated from Berkeley High School and the California College of Arts and Crafts, where she met her husband, Ralph. He is also an artist and a teacher at the college.

The couple have three children, Michele, 15, Martin, 12, and Jason, 8 years old. The family moved to Point Reyes Station from the Berkeley hills three years ago and they live in a three-story house built in 1910.

The serenity of West Marin is conductive to painting, the artist said, and her relaxation is attending her son's Little League games.

Children See Wonders On Voyage

By MOLLY MARIN

"We saw a lot of whales, sharks, flying fish and porpoises. The porpoises became our very good friends and played around the boat," said Mrs. Bob Bernheim about a Mexican cruise.

Susan and Bob Bernheim and their children have just returned after a two and a half week cruise to Mexico aboard their Grand Banks powerboat, the Grand Slam.

Their guests were Bob Bernheim's sister Mrs. Harvey Rogers of Belvedere, her husband and children.

The families cruised among the Channel Islands near Santa Barbara where they took their smaller boat into caves to see the marine life.

Next they anchored at San Diego Yacht Club to take the six children to the San Diego Zoo.

They reached Ensenada, Mexico, where they had pleasant, breezy weather.

On the return voyage they put in at the Newport, Marina Del Rey and Ventura yacht clubs.

The families left the Grand Slam at the Santa Barbara Yacht Club last week and Bob Bernheim and a crew flew there this weekend to bring the Grand Banks to a mooring near the Hearst Castle.

Susan Bernheim and Nancy and Harvey Rogers and their children drove to San Simeon for the tour and a weekend in Carmel.

WHEN THE U. S. Navy Band from Treasure Island strikes up for a concert tonight at the Belvedere Community Park, a host of Belvedere residents will be on hand for a picnic supper.

Among those bringing their picnic dinners for the concert will be Mr. and Mrs. Willard Anderson, her mother Mrs. Frank Smith, all of Belvedere, and the Andersons' son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Anderson of San Anselmo.

It will be a special treat also for Mrs. Anderson's nieces Judy and Lisa Butler, ho are visiting with their grandmother in Belvedere. They have just arrived from Saudi Arabia, where their father has been with the Getty Oil Co. for the past five years.

Also on hand for the City of Belvedere will be Mayor and Mrs. Allen Steinau, Vice Mayor and Mrs. Thomas S. Price and City Mgr. and Mrs. William L. Cavalli. Some residents of the streets bordering the park have invited friends to share picnic dinners on their lawns while the band plays. Mrs. Ernest E. Weihe will entertain friends at her Community Road home, and her neighbor, Miss Barbara Egoan will serve a picnic at home to Mr. and Mrs. James Harmon, Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Bassett and Mmes. Lorna Bullis and Aaron Jones.

WHEN THE eight members of the Orchestra Piccola perform Sunday at Old St. Hilary's Landmark in Belvedere, Rep. and Mrs William S.Mailliard will be in the audience.

Congressman Mailliard has wanted to hear the orchestra perform since he came to its aid earlier in the summer when customs officials were refusing to let the musical instruments enter Italy.

THE ENGAGEMENT of Terence (Kayo) Hallinan and Penny DeVries was celebrated at an outdoor gathering at the home of the future bridegroom's brother, Daniel Hallinan, and his wife, Wendy.

Among the guests were the future bride and bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Hallinan, former Marin residents now living in San Francisco; and Mr. and Mrs. John M. DeVries of Carmichael.

Also at the party were Penny's grandmothers Mrs. Priscilla Holmes and Mrs. Barbara DeVries, both of Roseville; Terence's cousins, Michael Hallinan and Charles Harrod; and friends, James Herman, Michael and Tania Stepanian, Rommel and Joan Bondoc, Eddie and Phyllis Pay and Philip LaRocca.

Terence is a graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School, the University of California at Berkeley and Hastings College of the Law. He practices law in San Francisco. Penny attended high school in Carmichael and California State University, San Francisco. She has a daughter, Savoy.

A 50TH anniversary celebration delayed three years will begin Sept. 2 when Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Pantaleoni of Fairfax are leaving for Europe.

Pantaleoni was in the hospital on Jan. 31, 1970, the couple's 50th anniversary, which delayed the celebration.

The couple will visit Mrs. Pantaleoni's birthplace, near Genoa, Italy, and his native France. They plan to see Pantaleoni's sister in Lucca, Italy, for the first time in 62 years.

During the month they are gone the Pantaleonis' daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Riley Brown, will stay in the home. The Pentaleonis have lived in Fairfax since 1912.

BEFORE CORINTHIAN Yacht Club's shipwreck party tonight the costumed partygoers will have cocktails at the homes of members Capt. (ret.) and Mrs. Elmer Towle of Belvedere, and Messrs. and Mmes. Dale Pedersen of Tiburon, Brooke Halsey of Belvedere and William Patry of Tiburon.

MR. AND MRS. Philip Antrobus of Mill Valley have returned from a month-long vacation trip to Austria, Switzerland, Germany and England. Miss Rosemarie Antrobus of Worcestershire, a sister of the Mill Valley man, joined the couple on their tour of the continent. Antrobus, English by birth, visited relatives and friends in the Midlands, the South of England and London.

LIVING IN Harvard, Mass., are Mr. and Mrs. Peter Del Tredici (Susan Klaw.) The couple was married July 28 at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Klaw, in Cream Hill, Conn.

Peter's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Del Tredici of San Anselmo. He was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley and received the M.A. degree from the University of Oregon. The bridegroom manages the greenhouse at the Harvard Forest Experimental Station in Petersham, Mass.

IN MIAMI Beach for the international convention of Alpha Delta Kappa the past week, Patricia R. Hosmer of Larkspur then joined a group of 300 delegates for a cruise of the Caribbean.

Alpha Delta Kappa is an honorary association of women educators, and Mrs. Hosmer is president of Alpha Upsilon Chapter. She is a teacher at Granada School in the Reed District.

JUST BACK from two weeks in Hawaii are Mr. and Mrs. John Bluth of Mill Valley. The couple toured four of the Hawaiian Islands during their stay. The trip was an anniversary gift, honoring the Bluths 25th anniversary on July 7, and presented by their three sons, Mark Jon, 18, Brian, 16, and Gregg, 13.

VACATIONING ON the big island of Hawaii in late July, the William Quinans of Tiburon and their son, Russell, were lucky to witness a new crater filling with lava and sending up a 10-foot fountain.

The Quinans watched from a viewing platform on the rim of the active volcano, Kilauea.

MR. AND MRS. John Giromini are living in San Rafael following their marriage July 28 at Christ Presbyterian Church in San Rafael.

The bride is the former Karen Kraus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Kraus, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Giromini. All are residents of San Rafael.

Lori Archibald of San Rafael was maid of honor for the wedding, and the bridegroom's brother, Jim Giromini, also of San Rafael, served as best man. A reception at the Girominis' home followed the ceremony.

COCKTAILS WERE served at the Belvedere firehouse for the firemen and their wives or dates before the 24th annual Belvedere Firemen's Ball on Friday.

L.T. "Bunk" Mersereau, chief of the all-volunteer fire department, and assistant chiefs David Imrie and Robert Rey were hosts.

A PICNIC for families of chiropractic doctors will be held Sunday at Morton's Warm Springs near Kenwood.

Among the families planning to attend are the James Diederichs of Mill Valley. Softball games, swimming and an abalone picnic are planned.

Trim Fibers From Seam Allowances On Fake Furs

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I recently purchased some fake, red Fox fur fabric for a winter jacket. The hair on this fabric is about 2 inches long. When I purchased this material, the store manager suggested shaving the hair at the seams. Someone else suggested pulling the hair away from the seam after stitching. Which method is correct?

MRS. B.F.

DEAR MRS. B.F.,

For long-haired furs, it's best to cut the fibers away from the seam allowance to avoid a very thick seam. You must do this carefully with a sharp scissors to avoid cutting the backing. Only cut the fibers the width of the seam allowance. After the seam has been stitched, you will probably want to catch stitch it open to the inside of the garment. Any hairs that remain in the seam can be carefully pulled out with a needle from the right side. This will disguise the seam.

When working with lighter weight fake furs with a short nap, it is not necessary to remove the nap from the seam allowance. Stitch as you would any coating fabric. When the seam has been stitched and lightly pressed from the wrong side, turn to right side and pull out any hairs that have been stitched into the seam. Fake furs are easy to work with, fun to wear, so be sure to try one this fall.

DEAR EUNICE,

I find that most circular hems appear very bulky, because of the extra fabric that is involved. Have you found an answer for us that will make it easier to get a professional look to our hems?

MRS. B.K.

DEAR MRS. B.K.,

The bulk will be affected greatly by the type of fabric you have used. Usually knits will work in much better than woven fabrics. The first thing to remember is that the hem cannot be as wide as you would use for a straight skirt.

I would recommend a hem that is no more than 1½ to 2-inches deep. After you have had the skirt measured accurately on yoursel (which is very important with circular skirts because they do hang unevenly due to the bias), turn up the hem on your marks and baste in place.

Next, carefully measure the exact width of the hem, mark it with chalk and cut off the excess ¼-inch beyond your marks. Machine stitch on the hem marks with a loose zig-zag stitch, stitching over a piece of regular thread.

Carefully pull the thread that you have encased in the zigzag stitch slightly, until the hem will ease in perfectly to fit the skirt. Never pull this too tight or your hem will look gathered at the lower edge. It is important to keep the hem slightly larger than the garment so that you can ease it to the garment as you hand sew your invisible stitches.

DEAR EUNICE,

I simply can't get used to the amount of fabric I must purchase for making a pair of slacks. Formerly, one length of fabric did the trick. Today, I find I am using what I used to need for a whole dress. Why do patterns require so much fabric?

MRS. C.B.

DEAR MRS. C.B.,

I checked the patterns to see what the requirements were, and I found they varied greatly according to the width of the fabric which you probably weren't taking into consideration. Also, the style of pants has changed considerably. They aren't cut as skimpy as they were a few years ago.

The trouser look is again in for fall, as well as the cuffed look. There is also a difference in length. It seems that with the younger generation, they must be so long that the lower cuff is not only constantly dirty, but frayed as well.

Since most knits are about 60 inches wide today, and they must be cut in one direction, you will need about 1½ yards plus an extra ⅛ yard for cuffs.

If you are making the slacks from cotton, it is usually 45 inches wide and will require two lengths, depending on your height and the length you desire. This is about 2½ or 2⅝ yards. Unfortunately, as the styles change, so do the fabric requirements.

THIS IS THE season when everyone is thinking about fall bazaars for their own favorite church or charity. Please send me any new ideas for gifts that are a little unusual so that we may share them with other Sew Simple readers The gift suggestions used in this column will receive a special gift from me. Send your suggestions to Eunice Farmer, in care of the Independent-Journal.

Acrylic Yarns Make Finest Baby's Wear

Machine-washable acrylic yarns come in pastel colors that can be turned into irresistible booties, sweaters and caps for the carriage set. They are sure to please every new mother, since the yarns are as practical as they are pretty.

They are so easy to wash, and everyone knows that what goes next to baby should be kept spotlessly clean.

Permanent Press A Boon To Tables

It seems silly nowadays to buy tablecloths and napkins that are not permanent press and soil resistant. Even luxurious linens come this way. The tedious job of ironing has been eliminated; perhaps just a simple touch-up may be required after machine washing and drying.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Ex-Boyfriend Gets Caught Up In An Old Arranged Con Game

RAP:

My "fiance" (now my ex) broke a date at the last minute. I was upset because this wasn't the first time, so when his friend called and asked me to help him use two free tickets to a concert, I said "Sure," figuring a "just-friends" evening was okay.

When we came home, who should be waiting on my doorstep but my fiance, and he was furious. This made me mad too (after all, I was completely innocent) and I ended up giving back his class ring.

When I cooled down, I called him, but he wouldn't talk to me. Said I couldn't be trusted. I never saw his friend again either. It's been a month.

Today I met a girl who used to go with my ex. It came out in conversation that he broke up with her the same way, using the same friend, with the big confrontation scene when the two got home from their "date."

So I called up the friend and after a lot of evasion, he confessed that's how both of them got out of situations that might lead to marriage. He said I just "thought" I was engaged.

How's that for a couple of stinkers? — MAD BUT NOT MOURNING ANY MORE.

MAD:

They wouldn't win our rotten egg award of the year, but on a "stinker" scale of one to ten, they'd rate at least eight. — SUE

DEAR MAD:

Those two scheming meanies should be very happy together. And aren't you glad you're "not mourning any more!" — HELEN

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

Several weeks ago my best friend was killed by a drunken, adult driver. She was an only child, aged 15, and just like a sister to me.

Since then I've been asking: why do adults harp about the younger generation using drugs when so many adults kill people because they were too drunk to know what they were doing?

Alcohol kills thousands of innocent persons a year — often they're little children who don't have a chance against drunken drivers.

Maybe I don't know what I'm talking about. All I know is I lost my friend because one older man was drunk and out of his mind. I think adults should take a close look at their own drinking problems before they start blaming young people for all the world's drug troubles. After all, alcohol is also a drug.

I've never tried drugs or booze and I wish everyone was as scared of them as I am. I wish that the man who killed my friend had been scared too. — LONELY

DEAR LONELY:

Wishing won't bring back your friend, but we also wish more could be done about our No. 1 drug problem: excessive use of alcohol — by both adults and teens. Increased traffic penalties for drunk drivers might help, but mainly, since we can't enforce abstinence, we should learn moderation. Will you kids be the ones to teach us? — HELEN

PERSONAL TO "MOTHER" (who wonders why her daughter "doesn't act her age")' How old were you at age 17? — SUE

Yes, Mother, is it so hard to remember? — HELEN

Grass stains can be removed from washable fabrics by soaking in an enzyme pre-soak product prior to laundering. If the stain still remains, use a chlorine bleach if safe for the fabric and color, then launder again.

FIRST YEAR

Temperament Plays Major Growth Role

(Sixth in a series)

Babies differ from each other in many ways. They may be big or small, fast growing or slow growing, early developers or late developers, brown-eyed or blue-eyed. One of the most important ways in which babies differ is in their temperament — the usual way they react to you, to other people and to things around them. You will find it much easier to understand your baby, to take care of him, to teach him and to enjoy him if you pay attention to his temperament.

There are at least nine ways in which young babies differ from each other in "temperamental characteristics." No one knows whether these characteristics or differences are inherited, whether they are formed when the baby is growing during your pregnancy or whether they develop in the first weeks of life. In any case, they are present in the first months of life, and you will want to understand how they affect your child.

How much does your baby move around? When you put him in bed, does he wiggle all over the crib or does he stay in the same place? When you change a diaper or put on a shirt, do you have trouble because he is constantly wiggling about or does he lie quietly and let you change him?

NORMAL BABIES may be very active or very inactive. Your job in caring for a very active baby will be very different from caring for a very inactive one. If you believe that all babies should be active, you may be disappointed or frustrated by an inactive baby. If you think that all babies should stay still and lie quietly while being dressed or bathed, you may think that an active baby is bad or that he is active because you are not caring for him properly.

If your baby is super-active, you may just want to enjoy him, or you may want to behave in a more soothing and gentle way so as to encourage him to slow down a little. With a very inactive baby, you may want to take more initiative in playing with him, moving him about, and rewarding him for the activities which he does start on his own. How regular are your baby's habits? Does he always awaken at the same time, get hungry at the same time, take his nap at the same time, have his bottle at the same time? Does he vary by a small amount each day? Or is he completely unpredictable? Does he eat and drink about the same amount at his morning feeding each day?

IF HE is very regular, your job is usually quite easy. If he is very irregular, you will have to be prepared for daily changes. Or you may have to do more scheduling for him rather than sitting back and waiting for him to find a comfortable schedule of his own. Of course, you can't feed him if he isn't hungry, or make him sleep if he isn't really tired. But you can feed him before he really cries in hunger and you can put him down for a quiet time or for sleep even though he isn't especially tired.

How long does it take him to get used to new situations or to changes? When you changed from sponge bathing to a bath, did he accept it immediately, or did it take six or seven tries before he really accepted it? If you offer him a new food or toy, does he take it promptly or does it take many trials before he will really eat it or play with it? If he objects the first time you put a cap on his head, does he object every time you try it, or does he get used to it very quickly?

High or low "adaptability" is neither good nor bad. The child who resists change may take longer to teach. But, once taught, he won't change every time a slightly different situation comes along.

Games Run To Daylight

By LEW CODDINGTON

When Vince Lombardi popularized the phrase "run to daylight" back in the early 1960s, he was advising his halfbacks, but a few other people were listening to him as well — specifically, the people who run all-star football games.

The Shrine North-South game in Los Angeles, and the Ross Valley Kiwanis North-South game in Marin, both have been forced out of their traditional weekday-night pockets to weekend afternoons, though in the Kiwanians' case, it's more like a rollout play called from the bench.

In any event, after 21 years of being played on a weeknight, the Shrine game this year will be held Sunday at 3 p.m., and will include Redwood High School's Mike Connor.

The Marin North-South game, on a Friday night for seven years, will be held next Saturday at 1 p.m. at San Rafael High.

The two sponsoring groups' situations differ quite a bit, but both organizations were motivated by the same basic idea — getting more fans — under conditions which make it increasingly difficult for fans to be attracted.

"There were two reasons for the change," explained Manny Pineda, who handles public relations for the Shrine game. "One, we wanted to make the game a family affair for the Shrine people, so they could go picnic in the park beforehand, and so on.

"The other is that we had trouble with ruffians at night, throwing rocks at buses, things like that," in the area surrounding the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Pineda claims that a sharp decline in attendance at the game was "not a big factor" in the decision. From a peak of almost 86,000 in 1957, the crowds slumped to 32,000 last year, lowest since the inaugural game in 1952.

Pineda worries about "competition." and notes that it is minimized by the Sunday afternoon date. The Dodgers are playing at the same time, but against lowly Philadelphia, while the Angels are on the road and the Shriners' chief worry, the Rams, met Cleveland Friday night.

Nor do they have to worry on Saturday afternoon about concerts, movies or other such distractions. On the other hand, the temptation for potential spectators to dash off to the beach or mountains is greater.

"We're very optimistic," says Pineda, which is what he could be expected to say. "Our advance sale is better than last year, and we're hopeful of attendance between 50,000 and 60,000," a figure attained only once in the past decade.

The Marin North-South game has no problem with declining attendance, according to director Charlie Monte, but made the switch "just to try, to experiment." The game attracts between 3,000 and 4,000 annually, has never had a losing year financially, never has been marred by violence, he added.

Monte simply reasons that the change will "make it easier for parents and kids to attend." Its success, or lack thereof, will be of interest to those who advocate playing the high-school schedule in the afternoons. Athletic directors traditionally have said that night games provide greater revenue.

Even if the games succeed in providing boosts in attendance, the boost may well prove temporary. Several powerful factors well beyond the game directors' control may make it so.

One is the general economic situation. After spending 50 cents a gallon for gasoline and $1 a dozen for eggs, the average fan doesn't have a whole lot of money left over for sports events, especially if the events themselves go up in price due to increased costs.

Another factor is the influence of professionals. Why attend the Shrine game and see the Gene Washington of tomorrow when the Gene Washington of today is cavorting at Candlestick Park in full glory?

A third factor, linked to the other two, is television. The very finest players and teams are available in abundance, and for free, at the flick of a switch. The view is better, expert commentary is provided and it never rains on the spectator.

Certain diehard fans, chiefly parents, always will provide a hard core of rooters at high school games. Capturing the casual fan is the crux of the problem: if he gets the urge to see some football this weekend, and his urge can be satisfied at no cost by watching a televised doubleheader on Sunday, he may decide to turn in early Friday night and mow the lawn on Saturday.

To the people who organize all-star games, who have decided to run to daylight, let me wish good luck, because they do need it.

AGAINST JETS

Big Chance Tonight For 49er Spurrier

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Before pre-season National Football League action started, San Francisco coach Dick Nolan told quarterback Steve Spurrier he would go most of the way in the team's third exhibition game against the New York Jets.

Spurrier played briefly as Joe Reed sparkled in the 49ers first win against New England and John Brodie looked sharp in the second win over Cleveland: Spurrier played well during his few moments in those games.

But tonight the 49ers meet the Jets here and Spurrier says "this is the one I've been waiting for."

Spurrier is the guy who replaced the injured John Brodie last season and kept the 49ers on the high road to a division title. But when Brodie returned, he started again.

Spurrier, the ex-Heisman Trophy winner from Florida, wants to be number one this season and he thinks a big night tonight will help.

As for the Jets, coach Weeb Ewbank will go with Joe Namath at quarterback, but without two other key performers.

Ewbank announced Thursday that holdouts Emerson Boozer and Winston Hill had been suspended, did not accompany the team to Florida, and would not be allowed to practice with the team next week. Both players refused to perform in last week's game against Houston despite being bound by the option clause in their old agreements. The club withheld their $359.30 game checks.

They returned to practice but refused to play this week after consulting with legal counsel. The issue seems headed for the commissioner's office.

The 49ers also plan to play for the first time a key man in their 1973 plans. Wide receiver Terry Beasley, the team's top draft choice out of Auburn last year but mostly injured since then, won't start but should see some action.

Raider Coach Glad To Confront Dallas

OAKLAND (UPI) — John Madden, the Oakland Raiders' coach, is tickled to death his club will be meeting the powerful Dallas Cowboys in an exhibition game at the Coliseum tonight at 8 o'clock.

Usually, playing the Cowboys any time can be a trying proposition, but Madden doesn't feel that way about tonight's game.

"The Cowboys do so many things so well," said Madden, "that I wouldn't mind playing them every week in the preseason games. It will give our staff a chance to see what our younger players can do against what I consider one of the best teams in the NFL."

Unlike some other coaches, Madden doesn't concern him-

Billie Jean Laments: Tennis Isn't Understood

By PHIL ELDERKIN
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

"I was at a sports banquet recently with some pro football players," said tennis great Billie Jean King. "And when they started talking about some of the technical things in their game, everybody in the audience understood exactly what they meant.

"But if I tried to discuss where to return one of my opponent's shots with the score 30-40 against me, all I'd get would be blank stares," she continued. "Nobody would know what I was talking about. Even though tennis has made tremendous progress in the past few years, not enough of the public really understands the game."

The fact is until 1968, when amateurs were first allowed to compete against professionals in open tournaments, tennis had not really had an explosive growth year with the public.

"But when people began reading about the size of the prize money being offered in those open tournaments and then saw how well everybody played on TV, they couldn't believe it," Mrs. King said.

"By the end of the season all sorts of people were tapping me on the shoulder in airplanes and telling me how much they liked women's tennis. They'd say things like: 'I watched you girls on television and you're doing a terrific job' or 'I never knew anybody could make so much money playing tennis.'

"But to me, that was only part of it," she continued. "For the first time in my life people were talking about Billie Jean King as an athlete and a personality and not just a woman."

This was also the time Billie thinks that she and her friends finally broke the image that all women who play tennis well aren't feminine, aren't fashion conscious, and aren't good cooks.

"The whole thing was pretty ridiculous," Mrs. King explained. "When people talk about male athletes, they don't ask how handsome they are. They want to know things like — can he block, can he tackle, can he hit a forehand under pressure? But cuteness was always the big thing with us. Well, now people are starting to ask sensible questions about women players.

"I'm all for these new kids, like Chris Evert and Evonne Goolagong, who have come in and helped the game. I think they're great. Strong personalities are always desirable in pro sports.

"But I'm definitely in the minority with my fellow players on the subject of yelling at tennis matches. I say let the crowd roar if a good shot turns them on. After all, without paying customers you've got no pro sports.

"Yelling wouldn't bother my concentration, but some of the others think it would bother theirs. But, as I've told them, they'd adjust to it."

When did Billie Jean King feel she became the complete tennis player?

"I can't remember the year, but it was when I gained total awareness of myself and my game," she replied. "You have to understand yourself and know when to let off steam on the court and when to keep quiet.

"One of the things I had to teach myself early was to stick to basic tennis," she continued. "I've always been an experimenter. I like to try different spins and make impossible shots.

"This has always made me feel great. But it's no way to win tennis matches against someone just as experienced as you are, so I've had to discipline myself to almost always play the percentage when it's there."

What is Billie Jean's routine on the day of a match?

"Well, if I'm scheduled to play at one in the afternoon, I'm generally up by 8 a.m.," Mrs. King replied. "And getting up in the morning is no easy thing for me. I'm just one of those people who can't get started before 10.

"Then there are the routine things — shower, breakfast, etc. About two to three hours before I play, I go out on the court and hit for 45 minutes to an hour. And I mean I really work at it. After that I try to get away for an hour or so by myself either to nap, relax or read."

Mrs. King also makes it a point to never underestimate an opponent.

"As far as I'm concerned," she said, "my opponent is always the greatest athlete in the world on the day I'm playing her. I believe in psyching myself up for a match and this is the best way I've found to do it."

Nicklaus Better Prepared For PGA

Sports
Independent-Journal, 9
Saturday, August 11, 1973

By MIKE HUGHES
Executive Sports Editor

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus, getting the breaks for the first time in a major event this year, loomed as the potential winner as the wideopen Professional Golfers' Association championship entered its third round today.

Nicklaus stood poised for the kill with a 36-hole score of 140, where he was joined by Gibby Gilbert and Dan Sikes, one stroke back of longshots Mason Rudolph and Don Iverson.

Before play started Thursday over the rolling, tree-lined 6,852-yard, par 71, Canterbury Golf Club, Nicklaus said: "I feel better prepared than I was for the U.S. and British Opens." He kept his game under control Friday in shooting a three-under-par 68 which included three birdies and no bogeys.

The 33-year-old Columbus, Ohio, millionaire, who became a golfing legend early in his brilliant career, said Friday, "I could have shot a very low round. I had a lot of good opportunities to get the ball in.

"But golf is a game of patience. If you don't have patience you keep missing putts, and all of a sudden you shoot 75."

He lost his patience at the Masters and U.S. and British Opens when he came up with morale-shattering rounds of 77, 74 and 76 to drop out of contention. Yet he charged so hard in the final rounds he ended with a third and two fourth place finishes.

If Nicklaus can keep it together for another two rounds to win the title Sunday, he probably will pencil in Friday's 12th hole as the turning point.

His drive at the par-4, 372-yard hole ran through the fairway into the rough before stopping at the base of a buried tree stump. He didn't know what he was hitting when he swung, but although the ball barely flew out, it cleared a trap, rolled 30 feet and came to rest four feet from the cup for a makeable birdie. There was no way he should have had a birdie.

Should Nicklaus blow it over

AFTER TOPPING GIANTS

Met's Seaver Says: 'I've Pitched Better Games'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — It wasn't one of Tom Seaver's better games, but the way the San Francisco Giants are playing these days it was good enough.

Seaver gave up eight hits and walked two batters Friday night and his infield did its best to give the game away, but Tom got tough when he had to in pitching the New York Mets to a 7-1 victory over the bedraggled Giants.

Seaver struck out seven batters for a season total of 175 and in the process reduced his earned run average to 1.85. Both the strikeout total and the ERA are tops in the National League. Seaver's latest triumph was his 14th compared to six losses, but better still it put the Mets, still last in the NL East, only seven and one-half games out of first.

Seaver agreed it wasn't a performance with which he was thoroughly satisfied, although he did get big men out in key situations. What pleased him is that it helped the Mets shave off another game in their late drive to get out of the cellar and back into the race.

"I've pitched better games," said Seaver, "but when you get down to this part of the season all that counts is winning. In that we won I'm satisfied."

Seaver also contributed a two-run double to the 12-hit attack that saddled Juan Marichal with his eighth loss in 17 decisions. An error by Tito Fuentes on a smash to second by Rusty Staub after two outs opened the gates in the fifth for four unearned New York runs.

Marichal, obviously upset at the miscue, gave up back-to-back singles to John Milner and Cleon Jones for one run and Wayne Garrett finished things off with his eighth homer for three more.

Seaver lost his shutout in the fifth on a walk to Gary Thomasson, a single by Fuentes and a sacrifice fly by Bobby Bonds.

Yogi Berra, the Mets skipper was upset at the way his infield kicked the ball around but had nothing but admiration for Seaver for the way he extricated himself out of trouble. The Giants had men on base off Seaver in every inning, but the seventh and eighth and twice had the bases loaded but Tom worked his way free.

"That's the sign of a good pitcher," said Berra. "He got tough instead of folding."

Charlie Fox, the Giants skipper, echoed Berra.

"No question," said Fox, "he's a great pitcher. He didn't let the mistakes behind him upset him. He just leaned back and threw a little harder."

The Mets and Giants continue their series today with George Stone (7-3) pitching for New York against Tom Bradley (9-11).

See Giants' box score on inside page.

Catchers Wrecking A's Hopes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American League is blessed with many outstanding catchers these days—and they all seem to be bent on wrecking the hopes of the Oakland A's.

After Bill Freehan of Detroit all but singlehandledly beat Oakland Wednesday night, Thurmon Munson of the Yankees belted a three-run homer and a run-scoring bunt single to lead the Yanks to the hectic 10-9 win Friday night before nearly 30,000.

It was a key loss for Oakland, which fell two back of red-hot Kansas City in the American League West. Hard-throwing Vida Blue (11-7) battled control artist Mel Stottlemyre in today's Yankee Stadium confrontation and then Oakland must head for Boston Sunday where another fine receiver, Carlton Fisk, will presumably be waiting to do the A's dirt.

Although Munson's belting ul-

Volatile Reggie Leaves Red Sox

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Boston Red Sox can't seem to relegate their fighting to the ballfield.

The Red Sox, whose internal problems over the years have become legendary, have had more than their share of player personality differences this season, and now a new crisis has arisen in the presence of tempestuous Reggie Smith.

Smith, a talented but temperamental outfielder, pulled a disappearing act on the Red Sox in the second inning of a game with the California Angels Friday night after getting into a run-in with the crowd at Boston's Fenway Park.

Smith was roundly booed by the fans when he failed to run out a double play ball in the first inning and was booed again in the top of the second when a pop fly fell in front of him in centerfield for a hit.

As he returned to the dugout in the middle of the inning he doffed his cap mockingly to the fans then threw it into the dugout. He then walked straight to the clubhouse, got dressed and left the park. His walkout helped contribute to a costly 5-3 defeat, which dropped the Red Sox 2 ½ games behind first place Detroit in the American League East.

"He went home. Smith walked out with permission," said Red Sox manager Eddie Kasko. "I don't know if he said anything to anybody. He didn't say anything to me. I don't know what action we'll take. I don't know if it'll be a suspension, or what. I'll have to talk it over with (Red Sox' general manager) Dick O'Connell."

Smith, who is second on the team in batting with a .291 average, has missed about 20 games this season with various ailments and has been involved in several squabbles with teammates. He was the subject of trade talks last winter but O'Connell was unable to deal him.

His replacement in Friday night's game, Dwight Evans, came through with a solo homer but was shaken up in the sixth inning while trying to make a shoestring catch in short right. Orlando Cepeda also had a two-run homer for Boston, but Frank Robinson drove in three runs for the Angels with his 20th homer and a single.

In other AL games, New York edged Oakland 10-9, Kansas City nipped Baltimore 2-1, Detroit beat Chicago 7-3, Milwaukee downed Minnesota 5-1 and Cleveland topped Texas 8-1.

Hal McRae and Lou Piniella hit fifth inning homers to pace the Royals' to their 10th triumph in 12 games. The triumph, coupled with Oakland's loss, boosted the Royals' lead to two games in the AL West Division.

Gates Brown hit a three-run homer and Al Kaline followed with a bases empty blast in the fourth inning to power the Tigers past the White Sox. Fred Scherman allowed only four hits in 8 1-3 innings of relief for Detroit to gain his first victory of the year.

George Scott's two-run homer triggered a five-run fourth inning that enabled the Brewers to defeat the Twins. Billy Champion worked six innings of relief, allowing only four hits, to gain the victory.

Gaylord Perry tossed a six-hitter for his 12th victory in leading the Indians over the Rangers. The Indians benefitted from five errors to defeat 18- year-old David Clyde, who dropped his fourth game in seven decisions. Walt Williams homered for Cleveland while Jeff Burroughs hit his 19th homer for Texas.

Trying Times For Cardinal Manager

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

"Can't anybody here play this game?" is an old Casey Stengel line but you couldn't blame Red Schoendienst for using it one of these days.

Schoendienst, the patient Cardinal manager, is having his patience tried again.

The Cards, who lost 20 of their first 25 games this season but then played at a torrid 56-30 pace to take a five game lead in the National League's Eastern Division, now seem to be in another slump. They lost their fifth straight game Friday night by an 8-4 margin to the Cincinnati Reds.

The only consolation for the Cards is that their closest rivals—the Expos, Pirates and Cubs—keep losing and their lead is four games.

But if the Cards keep kicking the ball around the way they're doing now, they can't expect the margin to last.

They've made nine errors in the five games. They started the streak on Monday night when they lost to the Mets by a 10-3 margin while making three errors and misplaying four other playable balls into Met hits.

Against the Reds Friday night, they had a 2-0 lead for four innings before their defense fell apart again. Mike Tyson made an error and third baseman Ken Reitz failed to come up with two other balls as the Reds scored four runs in the fifth. In the eighth inning, the Reds wrapped it up with four more runs as Joe Torre and Lou Brock both made errors.

While the Cards are having problems, the Reds have won six of their last seven games to move within 2 1-2 games of Los Angeles in the Western Division.

Joe Morgan started the Reds' fifth inning rally with a single. After Dan Driessen walked, Tony Perez hit a bouncer off Reitz for a run-scoring single. Johnny Bench then hit a liner that Reitz couldn't hanle for another run-scoring hit. Bobby Tolan followed with a bouncer to Torre at first but the throw to second was dropped by Tyson. Geronimo's sacrifice fly and Darrell Chaney's single scored the final two runs.

In the eighth inning, Bench walked and advanced to second when Torre's throw on Tolan's grounder hit Bench in the back. After a sacrifice and an intentional walk, Phil Gagliano hit a two-run single and the third run scored when Brock misplayed the ball. Pete Rose then singled in the final run.

In other games, Philadelphia beat Los Angeles 5-3, Houston downed Chicago 6-4, Atlanta edged Pittsburgh 5-4, New York routed San Francisco 7-1 and San Diego beat Montreal 4-3.

Pittsburgh blew a chance to gain on St. Louis when it lost to Atlanta. Frank Tepedino and Marty Perez hit run-scoring singles in the ninth inning to boost Atlanta's lead to 5-2 and offset two Pirate runs in the last of the ninth. Phil Niekro pitched a five-hitter for the triumph.

Chicago also lost a chance to gain on St. Louis when it lost to Houston. Bob Watson and Tommy Helms each collected two hits and drove in two runs for the Astros. Rookie James Rodney Richard went 5 1-3 innings to get his fourth victory.

Ditto for Montreal. The Expos lost a chance to gain on St. Louis when they lost to San Diego. Steve Arlin and Mike Caldwell combined on a seven-hitter and Fred Kendall hit a two-run homer to lift San Diego to its victory.

GET THIS THING OFF OF ME

Bill Loercher seemingly found himself with a tennis ball balancing on his nose in the Reading and Suburban Tennis Tournament in Reading, Pa. recently, but he was merely following the old sports rule of keeping your eye (and nose) on the ball. Loercher, of Manheim, Pa., won the singles title.

Redskins' Coach Smiling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George Allen was smiling again.

His Washington Redskins "managed" a 14-10 victory over the Denver Broncos Friday night, the first pre-season victory for the 1972 National Football Conference champions.

"We managed to struggle through, but I'm happy to get that win," Allen said. "We played everybody we hoped to, and we held them to one touchdown."

If Allen was smiling, Dave Robinson, the linebacker coaxed out of retirement after being acquired from Green Bay, was "estatic."

"This team is any linebacker's dream," bubbled the 11 year veteran. "I always said that when the urge to play hit me, I'd be in there. I just like to keep hitting, that's my job."

The defense that held Denver to eight first downs, two in the second half, and 10 points, was revamped since last week's 17-14 loss to the Detroit Lions. Robinson started at left linebacker in place of Steve Kiner and Ken Houston played the whole game at safety in place of the injured Rosey Taylor.

But the Redskins spotted Denver a 10-0 second quarter lead, mostly on Charley Johnson's passing, including a 33-yard pass and run play to Joe Dawkins that set up the Broncos' only touchdown, a one-yard plunge by Floyd Little.

Jim Turner added a second quarter field goal before the Redskins, powered by a 42-yard Bill Kilmer to Frank Grant pass play, scored on a one-yard run by Duane Thomas.

Grant, a rookie starting for Roy Jefferson, who is nursing a slight muscle pull, snagged five passes for 100 yards and earned a game ball.

Thomas, making his first start as a Redskin, rushed for 60 yards in 11 carries, including a 41-yard spurt on the game's third play, and caught five passes for 45 yards.

Sonny Jurgensen started the second half, his first game action since rupturing an achilles tendon Oct. 29, 1972. After shaking off the rust of two third quarter interceptions, both by rookie Lyle Blackwood, the 39-year-old veteran engineered an 86 yard drive that culminated in Bob Brunet's three yard touchdown sprint.

The Washington-Denver game kicked off the second big weekend of National Football League pre-season activity that includes 10 games tonight and one each Sunday and Monday nights.

Tonight's action finds Dallas at Oakland, Pittsburgh at Minnesota, Philadelphia at Cincinnati, New Orleans at Miami, Chicago at Houston, Cleveland at Los Angeles, Buffalo at Green Bay, Baltimore at Atlanta, St. Louis at San Diego and San Francisco meeting the New York Jets at Tampa, Fla.

New England plays host to the New York Giants Sunday night and Detroit is at Kansas City Monday night.

timately cost the A's the verdict in Friday's affair, Oakland fought back with a pair of Reggie Jackson homers and nearly pulled the win out of the fire in a tense ninth.

With Yankee fireman Sparky Lyle trying to protect a three-run lead, the A's pushed across two runs on hits by Jackson and Deron Johnson, who wound up the evening with four rbi's apiece.

Rookie Tom Buskey came in to strikeout Gene Tenace with two batters on base to nail down the final out.

Buskey is a 26-year-old reliever just called up from Syracuse who doesn't lack for confidence.

"I thought I should have had a shot before this," he said after the game while manager Ralph Houk of the Yanks said that Syracuse manager Bobby Cox told him that Buskey "ain't scared of nothing. He won't beat himself. He showed me a lot of guts tonight."

Jackson's two homers gave him 26 for the year while Johnson hit number 15 and Campy Campaneris his third. For the Yanks, Munson had 16 and Roy White number 12 for the Yanks and Ron Blomberg his ninth.

Way Cleared For Pro Cage Merger

NEW YORK (UPI) — Earl Monroe goes one-on-one against —Julius Erving? Yes, if Bob Carlson has his way.

Commissioner Carlson of the American Basketball Association revealed Friday that the two major pro basketball leagues have been authorized by a federal court to seek a new merger agreement without Congressional approval.

Carlson said ABA attorneys obtained an order from Judge Robert L. Carter permitting "representatives of the National Basketball Association and the American Basketball Association to meet for the purpose of discussing and negotitating a merger, without Congressional approval, of the two basketball leagues or any of their member teams."

Commissioner Walter Kennedy of the NBA would not comment on the statement, although Carlson said NBA attorneys have received copies of the order.

Carlson stated that "the Federal court, which previously handed out the injunction, has modified the prior order and now says a merger agreement can be reached. As long as Congress has failed to act, and if the merger seems in the best interests of the concerned parties, it will be approved."

When a merger was first proposed by the two leagues, the NBA Players Association, using the defense that players' bargaining positions would be jeopardized, obtained an injunction preventing the union.

The NBA and ABA then tried to bypass this ploy by seeking congressional approval for a merger, but met with no response.

"It now depends upon the efforts of Players Association Attorney Larry Fleisher and the two leagues to agree upon merger terms and obtain final court approval," said Carlson.

But Peter Gruenberger, member of the counsel to the players, said no merger was conceivable unless the players' counsel of record is present at all talks affecting their rights.

"The court was cognizant of this fact and so expressed it," Gruenberger said.

Erik Gilberg scored 27 points to lead the Cardinals to a 58-56 Drake Summer League basketball victory over the Trojans Friday night at Drake High School.

self with winning games that don't count. That's not to say he and his staff won't be trying to figure a way to beat the Cowboys. More important to them, though, is to get a good look at some of the new men.

"The Cowboys use just about every formation we are likely to see this year," said Madden, "so training to play them will help us later."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry has been known to use his regulars almost all the way in exhibitions.

"I hope he (Landry) goes a long way with his regulars," said Madden. "We won't with ours. We'll get the veterans in there for some sequences but for the most part we'll go with the kids. Now is the time to find out if they can play. Before long we'll have to cut 11 more players and it would be unfair to the younger men if we cut them without getting a chance to see them in action. That's what the exhibitions are for."

Finley Remains Hospitalized

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

CHICAGO — Oakland Athletics' owner Charles O. Finley, admitted to the passavant pavilion of the Northwestern Memorial Hospital here Tuesday night after suffering "episodes of chest pains" in his Chicago office, remained hospitalized for observation today.

Finley, 55, who also owns the National Hockey League California Seals, was in good condition but was being kept in the hospital for observation, a hospital spokesman said. Friends said preliminary tests indicated a mild coronary occlusion.

Football

NEW YORK — Sid Gillman, the general manager of the Houston Oilers, has been put on "probation" by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle but the action is strictly routine unless Gillman fails to maintain the "highest standards of conduct" in the future.

Rozelle spoke with Gillman after players testified in the Houston Ridge case that Gillman had ordered them to take illegal drugs when he was a coach and general manager with the San Diego Chargers. Gillman is now the GM of the Oilers.

Ridge is a former Charger who settled out of court for more than $260,000 after he charged that improper use of drugs compounded an injury that ended his football career.

Basketball

HOUSTON — Larry Siegfried, a nine-year veteran of the National Basketball Association, Friday was named assistant coach of the Houston Rockets.

Siegfried, 34, a former Boston Celtic, played on five championship Celtic teams and spent half the 1971-72 season as a Rocket.

Golf

WADSWORTH, Ill. — Debbie Austin, never a pro winner, took a special golf lesson two weeks ago and wound up Friday with a three-under-par 70 at Midlane Country Club to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the $30,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Child and Family Services open. Trailing her with 71 was Sharon Miller, also seeking her first win.

Palacio Is 'Playing Very Well Today'

(First in a series)

Mat Palacio Jr. of Marin Country Club in Novato is "playing very well today," and that may prove to be bad news for his opponents in the Marin County Men's Tournament of Champions golf Sunday, Aug. 19 at 8 a.m. at Indian Valley Golf Club.

The two-handicapper won the only previous Champs Tourney he entered — in 1971 at Peacock Gap. The 1936 California State Amateur champion is determined to be two for two in Champs Tourney play.

However, he will receive stiff competition from five others in the seventh annual event. He faces: Jack Sterley, Peacock Gap; Al Randig, Indian Valley; Roy Hruska, San Geronimo National; Byron Eggleston, Mill Valley; and George Frazer, Meadow Club.

Palacio tabs Frazer as the logical favorite. "I've played with Frazier and I know what he can do. He plays my kind of game; he hits the ball down the middle."

Palacio believes the Indian Valley course will be a challenge. "It's a thinking man's course. There are many out of bounds places up there. There are all kinds of holes, flat holes and hilly holes. You've got to use many types of shots. And you have to make them."

The San Francisco car salesman states that his pin-point type game will be well suited for the demanding Indian Valley course.

The two-time Marin Country Club champion also dominates play at Sonoma National Golf Club where he has won the club title nine times since learning to play golf in Sonoma in 1932.

"Sam Snead says that Sonoma is one of the finest designed golf courses around. I agree. And I model myself after him. I'm a hand-swinger like him. I try to finesse shots."

And if Palacio can duplicate Snead's winning ways Aug. 19, Palacio could become the first two-time winner in the men's tournament of Champions.

8 Double Winners In Track

Eight youngsters each won two events in the San Rafael Junior Olympics Friday at San Rafael High School.

In the 6-8 year-old competition, Jana Lee of San Pedro School was the lone double winner. She won the standing broad jump (4-feet-9) and the 75-yard dash (12.5).

There were three twin victors in the 9-10 year-old class. Rosiland Bryant of Bret Harte School took the girl's softball throw (117-4) and the 50-yard dash (7.5); Cortney Helms of Albert Park School won the boys' running broad jump (11-9) and the 440-yard dash (1:17.7); and Phil Berardi of Sun Valley School won the boys' softball throw (154-8) and the 50-yard dash (7.9).

the next two rounds, then there are three other recent champions handily placed to take up the challenge, while there are altogether 12 men within three strokes of the co-leaders.

Tom Weiskopf, the hottest player on the tour currently and recent British Open winner, former U.S. and British Open titleholder Tony Jacklin, and Dave Stockton, the 1970 PGA winner, were grouped together at 141.

Stockton shot a 69 Friday while Jacklin and Weiskopf had 71s.

Weiskopf and Jacklin both had up-and-down rounds. Weiskopf said he had no luck the first two days when he found the rough seven times and blamed "poor putting" for his ills, while Jacklin failed to make makeable putts.

But Stockton played flawlessly. He had 16 pars and picked up birds at the seventh and 18th holes to hoist himself up the leader board.

Weiskopf certainly has not ruled himself out of the running.

"I have not got the pace of the greens. I either hit them too hard or too soft," he said. But when he won the British Open last month to break into the big-time ranks, he said he had no idea how to play Troon!

While Nicklaus may have had a break, Weiskopf complained that none had come his way during the first two rounds. "I missed the fairway seven times and seven times I made bogey. If I had saved par only three times, I'd be leading."

Sam Snead, still swinging sweetly at 61, and Lanny Wadkins were in a six-man group at even par 142. Snead, showing signs of tiredness, bogeyed the last two holes Friday.

Arnold Palmer was one man who failed to survive the cut for the first time in 16 attempts to win the PGA, the only major title to have eluded him. But he took his failure gallantly, blamed "ridiculous putting" for his woes, which totalled 150, and left to watch the finale on television.

The cut was made at 149 leaving 76 players to battle for the top prize of $45,000.

A gallery of 15,760 paid spectators watched play Friday on an overcast, humid day during which scores were lower than on the opening day.

LeBaron, All-Stars Beat Eagles, 17-7

CHICAGO — The Korean battlefield news occupies the front page of most American newspapers on Aug. 11, 1950.

On the sports page there are reports that Sugar Ray Robinson is asking for a shot at Jake LaMotta's middleweight boxing crown.

The National League standings show the "Whiz Kids" from Philadelphia still setting a torrid pace and leading the Boston Braves by five games.

But it's not Korea, boxing or the phenomenal Phillies that's on the minds of the 88,855 fans here tonight at Soldiers Field in Chicago.

They've come to see if the best collegiate football players from the 1949 season can figure out a way to beat the world champion Philadelphia Eagles in the 17th annual College All-Star game.

The chances of that happening aren't too good even though the collegians have a larger than usual line anchored by Minnesota's Clayton Tonnemaker and Leon Hart from Notre Dame.

In the opening minutes, Eddie LeBaron, a 5-foot-8, 165-pound quarterback from College of the Pacific, dazzles the Eagles and this huge crowd with a ball handling exhibition they will never forget.

Working like a magician, LeBaron effectively calls on the break-away ability of another unexpected starter, Charlie "Choo-Choo" Justice, and guides the All-Stars on a 54-yard drive to a quick first period touchdown.

The All-Star defense stymies the potent Philadelphia attack long enough for LeBaron to strike again in the second quarter. He hits Justice at the Eagle 35 with a perfect pass. "Choo-Choo" steams into the end zone for another score.

The Eagles finally score late in the game after some tough, hard-earned yardage by Steve Van Buren. But it's not enough. A field goal adds three more points to the All-Star's total. The final score indicates a stunning upset. The world champion Eagles have been defeated 17-7 by the All-Stars and their pint-sized, bag-of-tricks quarterback, Eddie LeBaron.

Hoffmann, 11, Bowls 592 At Country Club

Jeff Hoffmann didn't break 600, but the San Rafael bowler is smiling today.

Hoffmann bowled a 502 series last Saturday — a personal high —at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. He started off with a 189, and then followed with 163 and 150 — not too bad for a junior, especially when you consider Jeff is just 11 years old!

"I was really excited and scared," Jeff said.

Jeff, who attends Oliver Hartzell Elementary School in San Rafael, learned the game from his mother, Beatrice, six years ago. Since then, he has been bowling in the junior league every Saturday at Country Club Bowl. Bea is one of Marin's top distaff keglers.

The 4-foot-9, sixth-grader bowled a 198 when he was 10 years old for his personal high game.

ED HENRY of San Rafael is 20th in the Masters Tournament qualifying of the 28th California Men's Bowling Tournament at Holiday Bowl in Hayward. Henry has 1,219 in the tournament, which ends Aug. 26.

BETTY CALAWAY and Ken Brown of Hamilton Air Force Base are the Division B leaders at the ninth annual California Junior Bowling Association state championships at 1,380.

COOKIE BAER

Defending Champion Says Golf Tourney Win 'Lucky'

(Second in a series)

"I was just lucky last year," claims defending Marin County Women's Tournament of Champions golf queen Cookie Baer.

Mrs. Baer, a 14-handicapper, is the six-time champion of Peacock Gap and will be representing her course Friday at 9 a.m. at Marin Country Club in Novato.

Going into her fifth Champs Tourney, Mrs. Baer states that; "I don't have much of a chance, but I'll certainly be trying. I'm just hoping for the best."

Her opponents in the sixth annual, 18-hole event will be: Laura Cann, Meadow Club near Fairfax; Terry Nichols, Mill Valley Municipal; Nancy Gapinski, San Geronimo National Golf Club; Tillie Gondak, Marin Country Club; and Virginia May, Indian Valley.

In assessing her rivals' abilities, Mrs. Baer believes she will need a little luck this year, too. "You have to have a little luck in anything. I'm not likely to win it again this year. But you never know."

In preparation for her title defense, Mrs. Baer has been playing golf about two to three times a week.

"I played over my head last year, while the other ladies weren't at their best. This year, well. . ."

Mrs. Baer, whose husband Harold is a San Francisco real estate broker, has three children: Hal, 25, Carol, 23 and Janet, 21.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Soaring Interest Rates Hurt Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — Against a gloomy background of soaring interest rates stocks tumbled for the second week in a row in sluggish trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average cracked through the 900 level at week's end, closing 16.49 lower at 892.38, its lowest level in a month. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index fell 1.72 to 104.77. The NYSE index declined 0.95 to 55.84.

The list took a beating, with 1,283 declines, against 480 advances, among 1,962 issues traded.

The trading tone remained cautious, with little in the news to inspire much interest in stocks. Turnover for the week totaled 62,029,790 shares, compared with 60,265,908 a week earlier, and 75,350,142 a year earlier. Many analysts said a slowing in the action is typical for this time of year.

Wall Street appeared preoccupied with skyrocketing interest rates, as ¼-point increases in the prime lending rate have become virtually a weekly affair—with the government's blessings.

With the 9 per cent prime only seven days old, First National City Bank Friday kicked off the latest round of increases in the rate—another ¼-point to 9¼ per cent, and many of the nation's leading lending institutions quickly followed.

There was talk, too, that the Federal Reserve's 7 per cent discount rate—the interest it charges on loans to member banks—soon would shoot higher. Key members of the Nixon administration believe the economy must cool down, and one traditional means to that end is higher interest rates, starting with increases in the Fed's discount rate.

Following Friday's increase in the prime rate, Treasury Secretary George Shultz called the 9¼ per cent rate a "desirable" short-term measure in cooling the economy. With a prominent Nixon economic adviser on record applauding the new prime rate, a general increase by the nation's banks was virtually guaranteed.

Investors in stocks could only be gloomy about the higher rate, however. Many tied Friday's rise in the prime to a general climb in money rates and bond yields that now stand at historically high levels. Analysts have expressed the fear for some time that common stocks, in general, will be finding it difficult to compete with debt instruments, like commercial paper, which promise returns of more than 10 per cent, or bonds that yield 8 per cent or more.

"It's very difficult," said Ronald Cooper of W.E. Hutton, "to envision a sustained market rally with double-A bonds yielding 8.50, and short-term money rates 10 per cent or more. A lot of the money that might be finding its way into stocks is looking for other havens."

Utility issues, in particular, have felt the effects of soaring interest rates, since utility companies traditionally are among the nation's largest borrowers.

Translated into day-to-day market performance, the list suffered this week from lack of buying interest, which led to widespread declines and light volume.

Archer-Daniels-Midland, the nation's largest domestic soybean processor, rose 4⅞. Early in the week, it announced plans for a 100 per cent stock dividend.

Question Of Holy Spots In Jerusalem

By FRANCIS OFNER
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

JERUSALEM — More than a quarter of the over 300,000 inhabitants of this city hold the citizenship of an enemy state, yet move freely in both Israel and Jordan.

The Jordanian part of Jerusalem has been declared by the Knesset (Parliament) to be part of the Israeli Jerusalem; yet the area has not been formally annexed by Israel.

The most sacred site for the Jewish religion, the Temple Mount, lies in the old city of Jerusalem. Yet Israeli police arrest any Jewish worshipers there because the clergy of the nearby Muslim shrine feel offended.

These are some of the contradictions that mark daily life in a city that already is unique as the cradle of Christianity, the center of Judaism, and the third-holiest site of Islam.

It was the religious aspect, with its international political implications, that worried the Israelis most after they had taken Jerusalem in bitter fighting in 1967. A few days later, Prime Minister Levi Eshkol called the heads of all religious communities together and promised them Israel would guarantee freedom of access to the holy places.

In the same year this guarantee was given the form of a law that makes the denial of free access to a holy place a punishable offense.

Many complaints have been raised against the Israeli administration of Jerusalem, but none has concerned the holy places. If anything, they have been made more secure.

Representatives of the major non-Protestant churches have set up a coordinating committee for the holy places to adjust differences between them. The committee is recognized by the Israeli Government.

The Vatican has, it seems, shelved the idea of internationalizing Jerusalem. At the conclusion of the audience Pope Paul VI gave Prime Minister Golda Meir earlier this year, he drew her attention to the fact that he had not mentioned the word "internationalization" even once.

Most of the complaints that have been raised against the Israeli administration of united Jerusalem concern the large-scale building program undertaken on some of the hills surrounding the city.

Since 1967, construction of 25,000 housing units has been begun or completed on nine major sites.

A little less than half of these apartments are part of public housing projects for which a total of 4,000 acres had to be expropriated when the owners refused to sell. They all received financial compensation. Part of the land — 30 percent, according to official figures — was taken from Jewish owners. However, apart from the Jewish quarter of the Old City, care was taken to avoid as far as possible inhabited land, farmland, or church property.

The situation was different in the Jewish quarter of the Old City of Jerusalem, from which the Jews had been driven out by Jordanian legionnaires in the war of 1948. Under the Jordanians, Arabs were encouraged to settle in the Jewish quarter, and 4,000 did so. The Israelis regarded them as squatters and moved them out to make the reconstruction of the quarter possible. All the evacuees received alternative accommodation, however, officials here have stated.

Most of the new housing projects are being built for the city's Jewish population, which has grown from 195,000 in 1967 to 224,000 today. Israelis do not deny that they want to strengthen the Jewish character of Jerusalem — it has had a Jewish majority since the end of the previous century.

Meanwhile, the Arab population of Jerusalem, which had been decreasing under the Jordanian regime as a result of emigration, has grown from 66,000 in 1967 to 80,000.

Arab emigration from Jerusalem has practically stopped and, municipal officials believe, there is in fact some immigration as a result of a reunion-of-families plan.

A major factor in improving the atmosphere here is the mayor of this city, Teddy Kollek. The Vienna-born Israeli is a staunch believer in coexistence of Israelis and Arabs.

The administration claims a proud record: It has broadened welfare, added 20 playgrounds and five libraries, tripled the acreage of public gardens, and has built 10 sports grounds and a sports center with a football field.

Recently, the Arabs of Jerusalem have been receiving one of the more doubtful benefits of Israeli administration. They have to pay the full amount of municipal taxes.

They had been given five years of adjustment, beginning with 20 percent of regular rates and jumping by another 20 percent every year. A city spokesman said: "Where taxes are concerned, they act just like the Jews. They don't like them."

A SACRED PLACE — This ancient house of worship — the Dome of the Rock — in Jerusalem is considered one of the most holy places in the walled city. Since 1967, denial to free access to a holy place has been punishable by law, but there are still some "gray" areas.

Jesus Revolution To Be Discussed

A talk on the current Jesus Revolution in Berkeley will be held by Hubert Lindsey at the Church of the Open Door Sunday night.

Reverend Lindsey is an ordained Baptist minister who can recall leading hundreds of young drug addicts and revolutionaries into the Christian faith. He's written a book about his experiences as a campus evangelist titled, "Bless Your Dirty Heart." In his eight years in Berkeley students have affectionately dubbed him 'Holy Hubert,' he said.

The program is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the church at Scout Hall, 177 East Blithedale, Mill Valley. Reverend Lindsey will give his talk as a sermon titled "With Christ On the Campus."

Deacon Made Priest Unexpectedly At 84

BOULDER, COLO. (AP) — When Francis Wolle was made a perpetual deacon of his Episcopal church almost a decade ago, he thought his religious ministry was fulfilled. Now, at the age of 84, he has been ordained a priest.

"I'm extremely pleased and gratified and I hope I can live up to such a high calling," said Father Wolle after celebrating his first Mass.

Bishop William C. Frey, who was once a student of Wolle's at the University of Colorado, said he believes the retired English professor is the oldest man ever to be ordained.

Father Wolle is assigned as an assistant at his own parish, St. Aidan's, and will continue his work in visiting hospitals and nursing homes and making house calls, says his pastor, the Rev. A. B. Patterson.

"Father Wolle has a beautiful ministry to the people in hospitals and nursing homes which can be helped by his ability to celebrate the Eucharist and minister in a priestly fashion," said Father Patterson.

"My being able to administer Communion will make a difference to them," agreed Father Wolle, who also plans to preach one sermon or more each month in his parish.

Father Wolle said the bishop's offer of ordination came as a surprise because he is so far past the Church's retirement age.

"I was overcome with awe and joy at such an idea, which hadn't occurred to me at all. I was very stunned at first and then gradually accepted it."

The elderly priest had taken all the required canonical examinations before being made a deacon 13 years ago and done "marvelously" in them, said Father Patterson.

Father Wolle said his interest in church work really only began after he retired from the university.

Before that, "I was one of those awful people who went to church only on Christmas and Easter."

What does his wife think about him being a priest?

"She likes everything about it but the clothes," he said. "Being an artist, she likes colors and doesn't like to see me in black.

Vacation Bible School Slated

With emphasis on reaching out to Jesus, the annual vacation Bible school of the First Baptist Church of San Rafael will open Aug. 13.

The schedule will include Bible study, games, handicrafts, arts, field trips and refreshments. The classes are offered free to children, aged 3 to 15.

Sammy J. Pitts is the director and Carl Blankenship is the school grandfather. Pastor of the church is Rev. Barret M. Lampp.

Film On Russian Jewry Is Set

A San Rafael church will present a film Sunday depicting the persecution of Christians in the Soviet Union. The First Assembly of God will show a Russian propaganda film first, then a film that they say proves the Soviet film a lie.

Showing will be at 6 p.m. at the church at 1695 Grand Ave., San Rafael.

MAJOR RELIGIONS

The Descendants From The Puritans

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

Two major American denominations are—in the phrase dear to society writers' hearts—"descended from the Puritans."

They are the United Church of Christ and the Unitarian Universalist Association.

As every schoolboy had better know if he expects to pass history, the first Puritans —a separatist group known as Pilgrims—arrived in America in 1620, landing at Plymouth Rock.

They crossed the dangerous Atlantic in a frail 180-ton ship called the Mayflower because they considered the perils of the voyage—and of establishing a new colony on a strange continent—were preferable to living in England, where they were being subjected to severe religious persecution.

Their movement had originated within the Church of England in the 16th Century. They were called "Puritans" because they wanted to "purify" the established English church of "papalistic" survivals of its Roman Catholic heritage, such as kneeling at communion, using the sign of the cross, and observance of holy days. They also took a dim view of bishops.

Instead of tolerating these non-conformist views, King James I, a notoriously pigheaded man even by the standards of British royalty, launched a ruthless persecution of Puritans. Many of them fled for safety to Protestant Holland. Some after 1620 an ever increasing stream—immigrated to America.

Although they came seeking religious freedom for themselves, they were not disposed to grant it to others. They refused to allow Jews or Catholics to settle in their communities, and granted only intermittent and grudging toleration to other Protestant sects.

By the time of the American Revolution, they were not only the dominant but virtually the only religious body in New England, with the exception of Rhode Island, where Baptists under Roger Williams had established a haven of tolerance for people of all faiths.

The Puritans were stern, hardy people, full of religious zeal that not infrequently lapped over into fanatical acts such as "witch" burning. In theology, they took their cue from Geneva's dour reformer, John Calvin.

In their eagerness to purge all remnants of "papalism" from their churches, they adopted a severely simple form of worship, built around scripture readings and marathon sermons that often lasted for two hours or more. Functionaries were appointed and armed with long rods to awaken, with taps on the head, any hapless child who fell asleep during one of these long-winded orations.

Although their Calvinist asceticism demanded simplicity in church architecture, their conscience found no offense in tall steeples because, it was felt, they pointed skyward to honor God. This little quirk of attitude has been a notable blessing to America, for it yielded some of the most beautiful buildings in the land, the high-steepled colonial churches of New England villages.

Congregationalism placed its stamp on American history in many other ways. Many of the founding fathers were Congregationalists, and their insistence on democracy in political government directly reflects their tradition of church government. Congregationalists also were great founders of schools and colleges, creating among others such renowned institutions as Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Williams, Amherst, Oberlin, Smith, Mount Holyoke and Wellesley.

Still another Congregationalist contribution is America's unique national holiday, Thanksgiving, which stems from a Puritan adaptation of the Jewish harvest festival of Succoth.

Over the years, Congregational churches edged further and further away from the strict Calvinism of the original Puritans and became relatively liberal in theology.

But the liberalization was too little and too late for one faction of the Congregationalist family led by William Ellry Channing and Ralph Waldo Emerson. In 1819, they broke away to form a separate denomination. They called themselves "Unitarians" because they objected to the traditional "Trinitarian" concept of God held by most Christian groups.

The Unitarian movement flowered rapidly and within a few years, a large number of New England's leading Congregational churches had become Unitarian. Thomas Jefferson, who was strongly attracted to Unitarian beliefs, once predicted that within a generation all Americans would be Unitarians.

This forecast proved highly inaccurate. The movement peaked with a membership of about 200,000. But among its members were such notable figures of American history as John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, John Marshall, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Henry David Thoreau.

Although early Unitarians continued to speak of Jesus as "Our Savior," the denomination moved steadily away from classic Christian doctrines. By the start of this century, relatively few Unitarians attributed to Jesus any status other than that of a human teacher. Even belief in God became optional in Unitarian teaching, and many leading Unitarian ministers publicly proclaimed themselves atheists.

Both Congregationalists and Unitarians have in recent years entered into mergers. Most Congregationalist churches in the country merged in 1957 with the Evangelical and Reformed Church, a Calvinist body formed during the colonial era by German and Dutch immigrants to Pennsylvania. The new body is called the United Church of Christ, and has a membership of more than two million.

The United Church of Christ has been in the forefront of Protestant social action, particularly in such matters as seeking justice for Negroes, resisting the Vietnam war, and, currently, seeking amnesty for those who refused to serve in that war.

Some Congregationalist churches remained aloof from the merger and continue under the old name.

Unitarians merged in 1961 with the Universalists, a small denomination whose first congregation in America was founded at Gloucester, Mass., in 1779, under the leadership of Hosea Ballou. Their distinctive theological doctrine was insistence that God's mercy would never tolerate the eternal punishment of anyone in hell. Therefore salvation eventually would be "universal." Since the merger, the Unitarian Universalist Association has been officially creedless, and many of its adherents do not believe in a heaven for anyone, let alone everyone.

Bible School Dates Set

The First Baptist Church of Novato will offer a two-week vacation Bible school beginning Aug. 13. "Joy to the World" will be the theme of the school. Primary emphasis will be on Bible and mission study, but there will also be fellowship, recreation and Christian music. Field trips and special projects are planned.

The school is offered to children of ages 4 through junior high school. Classes will be held weekdays, 9 a.m. till noon. The school is free, but parents will be given an opportunity to contribute at a "free-will offering" on parents night, Aug. 23.

Rev. Sherman Moyer will serve as coprincipal with Mrs. John Nunn. The pastor says he expects the enrollment to be about 200. The church is located at the corner of South Novato Blvd. and Arthur St.

Changes In Yosemite — For The Better

YOSEMITE — If it has been a couple of years or more since you visited Yosemite Valley, you will be struck by the changes.

The miniskirted misses who seemed ill prepared for their jobs as forest rangers are not much in evidence now. The "old pro" rangers are back giving the slide talks and leading the nature walks. The average age of slide talk watchers and nature walkers is much lower than a few years back when only the elders were interested.

Youth is everywhere but they seem much less irresponsible and less inconsiderate of others than the hippie hordes of a couple of years ago.

The combination of rangers who seem more professional and youth who seem more mature in their behavior adds up to a striking improvement.

The systematic effort to discourage unnecessary use of automobiles in the valley seems to be working. The new model buses are a big improvement over their make-do predecessors. Now you can see out to enjoy the magnificent views. With more fresh air and fewer bathless hippies, the atmosphere inside the buses is much more pleasant.

IN AN AGE when the neighborhood store has been zoned out of existence, it is difficult for most of us to get out of the habit of jumping into a car for even the most trivial of errands. Yosemite has pointed the way; close nonessential roads and plow them under. Prohibit convenient parking and even near access to stores by autos. Install free shuttle buses which are comfortable and offer frequent service. Presto! One is surprised how quickly the car habit is broken. With auto traffic much reduced or eliminated, walking alongside the road becomes much more pleasant and inviting. So does bicycling.

It is not likely that the accommodations provided by Yosemite Park and Curry Co. will earn accolades. Around Yosemite Lodge, the sound of a vacuum cleaner is still too rare. Your room is not likely to be vacuumed daily. In fact, it is not likely to be vacuumed after the previous occupant leaves, before you move in.

You can deduce the nature of previous occupants from the dog paw prints on the sliding glass doors.

But the young people employed by the YP&C Co. do seem more friendly and eager to oblige. Some in the dining rooms show signs of having either training or prior experience, or both. This is an improvement over a couple of seasons ago. But waiting in line to eat at mealtime is the order of the day. A 10-minute wait for a table in a dining room scarcely half full tells you there has to be deficient management.

There seem to be more foreign visitors than ever before, especially Germans. Fortunately, most speak enough English to get by.

IN SPITE of wounded cries from super-conservationists, the valley is as magnificent as ever. Early August finds waterfalls unusually impressive for this time of year. This is due in part to the wet, cold winter which brought a heavier-than-normal snow pack on the high peaks. In recent days, continuing thundershowers have provided more water to replenish the falls.

After the rains the air is sparkling clear and all Yosemite is at its best. It is all as breathtaking as Ansel Adams' pictures.

—Jack Craemer

Two Million Starve

Every winter an average of two million deer reportedly starve to death. Most of these are in snow country, where the deer became confined to a limited area and were unable to find trees or shrubs on which to browse. By clearing the land and keeping the deer out, and then killing off the wolves, coyotes and pumas, the deer's natural enemies, we have caused the deer to suffer this most unnatural, lingering death. Yet, we have committed this crime with good intentions. Even in Marin some deer are poorly nourished because their numbers are too high for the limited browse.

National Park Service Solves Ticklish Law Enforcement Problem

(Reprinted from Sacramento Bee)

The National Park Service seems to have fashioned a workable handle to deal with the law enforcement problem in the nation's parks.

The "friendly but firm" approach has evolved since mounting crime rates and disturbances in the parks forced rangers into hardline police roles, climaxed by the July 4, 1970, Stoneman Meadow riot in Yosemite National Park.

THE PARK SERVICE drew sharp criticism for its handling of that episode. Yosemite rangers had called for assistance from surrounding law enforcement agencies to deal with a confrontation involving 500 to 700 persons.

In the aftermath a management team was moved into Yosemite to develop an approach which would preserve the friendly, helpful presence of the ranger while protecting the security, beauty and serenity of the park, which are the main attractions for most visitors.

The answer has consisted mainly in creating a police force within the ranger force and giving on-the-job training in law enforcement techniques to the 100-man ranger force.

The idea is, as it should be, to make the park enjoyable for the maximum number of people, to make all feel welcome but to tolerate no abuse and to deal firmly and quietly with it.

IN INSTITUTING this new approach at Yosemite, the Park Service transferred some personnel who had become associated with hard-line law enforcement.

These park officials were dealing with a new and increasingly troublesome situation as best they could — a situation for which the Park Service itself had provided little in the way of guidance.

And out of their experience, the heat they took and perhaps even the mistakes they may have made, has come a happier blending of the dual role of the park ranger.

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

Uganda's President Amin has decreed that a man may have as many wives at one time as he can.

That's family planning, Ugandian style.

Being surrounded by all those wives could ruin a fellow's ecology by unbalancing his environment.

The fact that a woman can't have more than one husband seems unfair and chauvinistic.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Criticism Of Hub Police Raid 'Presumptuous'

Reference is made to your "What Our Readers Say" column in the I-J of Aug. 7. You have printed two letters, one written by J. Michael Carney of Mill Valley and the other by Carol C. Ryan of San Rafael. Both writers strongly criticize the San Anselmo Police Department concerning an LSD raid occurring in San Anselmo some days ago. . .

Both Mr. Carney and Ms. Ryan do not hesitate to criticize the San Anselmo Police Department yet neither of them are residents of this community. I would not be so presumptuous as to criticize either the Mill Valley or San Rafael Police Departments unless I resided in that city and had an intimate knowledge of their municipal operations.

Intertie Proposed As Part Of New Plan

In response to your recent editorials and articles, we believe the board of the Marin Municipal Water District is being unfairly criticized. Our board has moved positively in its attempt to resolve the present water supply problem.

The unanimous thrust of our board during the past year has been to coordinate our future water supply with countywide planning. Far from being a "no growth" policy, this is a planned growth policy, if implemented by the supervisors and cities. The countywide plan would establish the parameters which would allow both water supply and sewage treatment agencies to plan projects and facilities in accordance with sound management principles. This would eliminate the moratoriums that result when these systems become overtaxed. It would assure the community that authorizing these projects and facilities would not result in undesirable and uncontrolled growth.

Our board has neither the time, nor the ability, nor the desire to be planners beyond the scope of our duties as water resource managers . . .

The North Marin Intertie, which has been the subject of much board debate the past three years, is now being engineered into the first phase of a staged, modified Sonoma-Marin aqueduct to be presented to the voters this November. Monies already approved by the voters will reduce the total cost of the project.

The intertie has not been constructed sooner, because of contractual and engineering problems, the defeat of Proposition B (a much larger Sonoma-Marin aqueduct), the concerns of some directors about management of Russian River and Eel River water resources, and the ability of the Sonoma Water Agency to deliver promised supplies. But our board is working to resolve these concerns and present a responsible water supply project to the voters.

We believe the I-J has misjudged the purposes and goals of the present water board. Attacking individual directors, encouraging contention on the intertie and moratorium, and constantly impugning the credibility of the district can only cloud the issues in the coming bond election.

Always Forecast Fair Weather; That's What The Sponsor Wants

WASHINGTON — After the Senate gets finished investigating the Watergate, I have another subject for it to delve into. And that is the weathermen on television who promise you a sunny weekend, and then it rains like hell.

Here is how this investigation would go:

SENATOR: Please state your name and profession.

HARGILL: Archie Hargill. I am the weather forecaster for television station WFOG.

SENATOR: Now on July 27, according to your own statement, you predicted that there would be clear skies, warm and sunny weather. Do you have that statement in front of you?

HARGILL: Yes sir I may have said it, but I don't recall it.

SENATOR Those remarks are in your handwriting?

HARGILL: That is correct.

SENATOR: NOW ACCORDING to witnesses, it rained on both Saturday and Sunday of the weekend. Could you, in your own words, explain why you predicted a nice week end?

HARGILL: I think we have to look at this in perspective. At that point in time, I had received information from the Weather Bureau that a cold front was moving in from Canada I assumed from this information, which I believed to be correct, that the week end would be sunny.

SENATOR: Didn't you think you owed it to your viewers to go outside and check to see if it was raining?

HARGILL: In hindsight, that is probably what I should have done. But in the period we're talking about, I accepted the Weather Bureau's assurances that this cold front would move in.

SENATOR: NOW WHEN YOU realized you had made a mistake, why didn't you go back on the air and admit you had erred? Don't you think that would have been the decent thing to do?

HARGILL: I'm not sure. It could have cost the station a sponsor.

SENATOR: Are you trying to tell me that a sponsor is more important to you than the thousands of people who were making plans to go away for the week end?

HARGILL: Senator, I believe you're putting words in my mouth.

SENATOR: Let's go back to your log for early July. You predicted, and I'm using your own words now, "great sailing weather and a blue sky from Boston to Nantucket."

HARGILL: I assume you're talking about the day there were hailstorms all across Cape Cod and a tornado on Martha's Vineyard.

SENATOR That's the day.

HARGILL: I KNOW THIS may sound strange, but I don't recall it.

SENATOR When you found out about the hailstorms and tornado, why didn't you tell the president of your station? Don't you think he should have been informed about this catastrophe?

HARGILL: He was in Key Biscayne at the time; I did tell his administrative assistant that I thought something was flukey. But until the tornado actually hit Martha's Vineyard, I had nothing more to go on than hearsay.

SENATOR So, as far as you know, the president of the station did not hear of your forecast until the houses were wiped out by the tornado.

HARGILL'S LAWYER: Mr. chairman, is this relevant to the hearings?

CHAIRMAN: In North Carolina we think it is.

SENATOR: ONE LAST question. How can we avoid bad weather reporting in the future? How can we keep young men like yourself from falling into the same trap of perjuring themselves before the television cameras every night? What I'm trying to say is, what advice would you give to other forecasters who are thinking of going into the same business?

HARGILL: I'd tell them to become disc jockeys instead.

Proliferation Of Bugging Should Get Congress' Attention

WASHINGTON — As Congress departed, intent like a flustered housewife on a long-promised vacation, so much was swept under the rug. While a beginning was made on reform of campaign spending, in other areas where recent shocks have shown urgent need for congressional action, the rule was to put it off to an indefinite future.

First and foremost is the invasion of privacy by bugging. The practice has proliferated at a fanstastic rate, not only in government at every level but with private eyes and snoopers using with impunity the latest and most-sensitive electronic devices. Capable of penetrating solid walls, they leave not a shred of privacy to unsuspecting individuals.

The revelation that President Nixon had secretly taped the conversations of every visitor to his office, from heads of state to Watergate conspirators, was a shattering example of the practice. But, quite apart from government tapes and taps, the way this insidious surveillance has spread through the channels of law enforcement is even more alarming.

IN A CASE in Federal District Court here where the government pressed a perjury-conspiracy charge with secret tapes made by an informer, Judge Gerhard A. Gesell spoke out with characteristic forthrightness. Nothing in the Constitution nor in present law prohibits this practice, Gesell noted.

"Whatever incidental good flows from this invasion of privacy is submerged by the growing appearance of police surveillance typical of totalitarian states," he wrote in denying a defense motion to suppress the tape recordings.

The informer carried on his person, unknown to the other persons in the room, a recording device. Since it would not tape a lengthy conversation, as a precaution he was also wired to a device that broadcast the entire conversation to an FBI car parked in the street. Judge Gessell had no choice but to deny the defense motion, since he had been overruled by a higher court when in a previous case he had struck down similar taped conversations.

As any experienced trial judge knows, he observed, secret taping is an increasingly common practice. Only legislation requiring a warrant in such cases can correct the growing intrusion of privacy.

SEN. GAYLORD NELSON, D-Wis., has introduced a bill which would create a bipartisan Joint Committee on Individual Rights made up of 10 senators and 10 representatives. The committee would hold regular hearings covering every agency of government that collects, stores and uses personal information about specific individuals. The CIA, the FBI and all military surveillance groups would be required to testify under oath and produce all relevant documents covering the extent of their operations.

Nelson has come up with figures showing that since court-authorized wire taps were made legal in 1968, more than 1,623,000 conversations involving 120,000 or more individuals were overheard. The Army, on a rampage of electronic snooping, put together dossiers on 100,000 citizens now stored in 300 record centers.

The proposed joint committee is a start. Out of the hearings could come a law to check the spread of the private snooper who now operates without restraint. It is a practice destructive of all trust and confidence.

WHETHER THROUGH such a joint committee or in legislation requiring a warrant for private use of electronic snooping, this should be high on the agenda when the Congress returns. So much was left undone in this first session. If in the Watergate hearings exposure is merely for the sake of exposing, then a sense of futility and resentment is bound to develop.

Congress has a long way to go to demonstrate that it is truly a coequal branch of government, to say nothing about assuming the functions of a crippled and distracted executive. Seldom in our history has government suffered such seeming paralysis of will and resolution.

Results Of Watergate Inquiry Mostly On Positive Side

A lot of gloomy things are being written these days around the theme that the Watergate affair is damaging the process of government in Washington, to the point where it threatens the foreign policies of the country and can cause chaos at home.

There is some substance in the version, but not very much, and whatever the losses from the dislocation, these are offset by substantial gains. Just to mention one gain, there has been no more handing of embassies to campaign contributors. All ambassadorial assignments since Watergate broke have been to career foreign service officers. Considering how poorly the political ambassadors have performed (one was just tossed out of Jamaica for flagrant diplomatic indiscretions), this is a very good thing.

A far more important gain is in White House-congressional relations. Congress is regaining the power to think and act for itself. Independence in the Congress was in danger of atrophying. Not very long ago serious students of government were lamenting the decline of the Congress as an independent branch of the federal government in Washington. Well, scratch that item off the list of national worries. Congress is alive and flourishing again after its long decline.

DOES THIS seriously endanger Mr. Nixon's foreign policies? I think not. The great features of the new Nixon foreign policies are acceptance of mainland China as a fact, a defensive rather than a forward American attitude in Asia, an end to the Indochina war, an end to the "cold war" and detente with Russia.

Not a single element in Mr. Nixon's foreign policies is seriusly controversial. They have become national policies supported by every major political element in the population. And all of them are so well advanced that they need routine servicing, not major new actions. Japan's prime minister did not call off his visit because Mr. Nixon is troubled by Watergate. He came regardless. The United States may be going through a crisis of leadership in Washington, but that does not threaten existing foreign policies.

The only serious foreign policy issue at the moment is over the question of American troops in Germany. Decline of the dollar has raised the cost to the American treasury. The pressure is rising to bring some of them home. Mr. Nixon is resisting. But it is the decline of the dollar, not Watergate, which is making this issue sharper. A reasonable compromise seems likely.

There is some fear that Congress will slip into a mood of dangerous economic isolationism. But this danger was apparent before Watergate and is not noticeably worse now.

GREATEST CHANGE due to Watergate has been the disposition of the Congress to speak its mind on dismantling of federal agencies and withholding of moneys appropriated by Congress. Mr. Nixon has had to give ground on several points. But is this all bad? Certainly not. Congress is a coordinate and equal branch of government. The real change is that there is more, not less, consultation between White House and Capitol Hill and this in turn has broken some of the old legislative jams.

Another important change has been pressure on the White House to do more to try to check the inflation. Considering how unsuccessful Phase 3 was, is there any reason to lament its departure? Phase 4 has yet to prove itself. But if Watergate had anything to do with abandonment of Phase 3 (a doubtful proposition) it should be thanked, not blamed.

Having a more vigorous and active Congress is no national disaster.

Nor is it bad to have a demand in and on Washington for higher ethical standards. Not in a long time have so many people in that city been so busy ferreting out improper practices and working so hard at new devices for raising the moral climate in government.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

AUG. 11, 1963

Secy. of State Dean Rusk urged the Senate to ratify the limited nuclear test ban treaty, saying it would slow the arms race.

A Marin County tax rate of $2.25 per $100 assessed valuation was forecast as county supervisors opened final hearings on a $17 million budget.

The American Federation of Labor executive council voted to recommend expulsion from the AFL of the International Longshoremen's Association, which controlled dock workers on Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

City Councilman Arthur W Smith of San Anselmo proposed that a half-mile-long public parking lot be created on the old railroad right-of-way between the Ross town line and Center Boulevard.

Truck Hijack Ring Smashed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A sophisticated gang that used radio-equipped cars to hijack at least seven trucks along Route 99 in the San Joaquin Valley the past year has been smashed, the California Highway Patrol said Friday.

Patrol Commissioner Walter Pudinski said up to a dozen gang members were being arrested with hijacking charges being filed in Kern, Tulare, Fresno and San Luis Obispo counties.

Seven trucks along with their trailers, valued at more than $2000,000 have been recovered, Pudinski said.

Five of the stolen loads consited of plywood, lumber and other building material.

Pudinski said that although sold by the thieves within hours after each hijack, about 70 per cent of the cargo, valued at an additional $100,000, has been recovered.

Patrol Inspector B. B. Smith, head of the auto theft detail, said all of the thefts were made at highway locations where truckers stopped to eat, spend the night or have minor repairs made.

He said the gang sometimes crused along Route 99 in radioequipped cars looking for likely cargoes.

Smith said when a truck was stolen, the first gang car escorted the truck down the highway while some gang members remained at the scene in the second car.

If the theft was noticed before a clean getaway could be assured, they would radio to the escort car and advise them to either abandon the truck or at least get it under cover, Smith said.

One theft was made from a truck repair station guarded by two sentry dogs. The animals were shot with darts loaded with tranquilizing drugs by gang members.

Smith also said much of the three month investigation work was done by the Kern County sheriff's office and city police in Bakersfield, Visalia, Tulare, Paso Robles, Grover City and Pismo Beach.

In an effort to thwart investigation, Smith said, the hijackers confined their sales almost exclusively to San Luis Obispo County.

Once a cargo was delivered there, the stolen truck and trailer was disposed of by parking it at a Route 101 truck stop or similar San Luis Obispo County location where it would not arouse immediate interest, Smith said.

The patrol investigation also turned up information involving some gang members, described as "local talent," in a series of armed robberies and burglaries, Smith said.

Prisoner Freed With Pension

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Ramon Munizaga spent 34 years in jail for murder, theft and assault.

Then the 64-year-old convict "retired" Thursday and left his cell to collect a pension.

Munizaga was sentenced to life imprisonment in the city of San Juan in 1939, but an amnesty law earlier this year allowed him to go free. At the same time, the prison awarded him a pension because while behind bars, he gained the rank of sergeant in the prison guards.

Living Costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average cost-of-living for a retired couple increased from 3 to 4 per cent in the lower and intermediate levels in 1972, the Department of Labor reported Friday.

John E. Bryan — The Man With A 70-Acre Garden

By DON KEOWN

To John E. Bryan belongs the title of premiere gardener among residents of gardening-minded Marin County.

As director of Strybing Arboretum in San Francisco's Golden Gate Park, Bryan is in charge of 70 acres upon which are grown well over 5,000 different species of plants, ranging from the most familiar California natives to exotics imported from faraway lands, and from tiny dwarfs to towering trees.

Bryan also has an impressive background of horticultural training in his native Great Britain and on the continent, and of experience with both public and private plantsmen, landscapers, nurseries and parks departments.

BORN IN Plymouth, Devon, England, in 1931, Bryan was educated in the English public (the equivalent of American private) schools.

As a 16-year-old he became an apprentice in horticulture, putting in a 48-hour work week in greenhouses and market gardens for the not-so-princely remuneration of $1.25 a week —plus invaluable experience.

Then, in 1949, he enrolled at Somerset Agricultural College where he graduated with a first class certificate in horticulture.

FROM THE college he joined the parks department of the City of Bournemouth, "one of the best in Britain," for two more years of student work. In 1952 he became a student horticulturist at the Royal Botanical Gardens in Edinburgh, Scotland, receiving his diploma there in 1955.

The Worshipful Company of Gardeners, a horticultural guild, awarded him a three-year scholarship to continue his studies. It was an award made only once every three years.

"My main interest at the time was the propagation of plants, and the use of trees and shrubs in landscape architecture, with particular reference to cities and freeways," he recalls.

YOUNG BRYAN spent his first scholarship year at the Royal Horticultural Society's gardens at Wisley near London.

"There," he says, "I was fortunate enough to meet some of Britain's leading horticulturists — plant-hunters of the stature of King Don Ward, Lord Abercrombie and Lord Digby."

For his second scholarship year he studied with the city parks department at The Hague in Holland, acquiring a fascination for bulb flowers that continues to this day, and traveled extensively on the Continent, including a six weeks stay in Northern Italy and Switzerland, visiting gardens and other points of horticulture interest.

THE FINAL year of his scholarship found him working as a landscape architect for the French government in what translates roughly to the Special Department for Freeways. Much of that work was devoted to the landscaping of the roads from Orly Airport into Paris. And there was a wellremembered and pleasant stay on the Riviera at the French government's expense while he conducted a study on one of that beautiful region's autouroutes.

Next Bryan joined the French nursery firm Vilmorin and became manager of its herbaceous plant department with a staff of 25 men "so that I had to learn French in a hurry."

HE REMAINED with Vilmorin until 1961 "when realizing that there would be no more promotions for an Englishman with this French firm," he began casting about for another job.

The offer of a position came in from the famed Jan de Graaff Lily Farms, also known as the Oregon Bulb Farms. Bryan accepted, came to America, and became the Jan de Graaff sales manager and vice president.

It was shortly after his arrival in the United States that Bryan first visited Golden Gate Park and its Strybing Aboretum.

"EVERYWHERE I went, I always made it a point to visit the botanical gardens," he notes. So in passing through San Francisco, it was natural that he should gravitate to Strybing.

"They were just completing the first phases of a redevelopment program as planned by Robert Tetlow, professor of landscape architecture at the University of California, Berkeley," Bryan recalls. "I admired the wide range of plants that could be grown in San Francisco. And I fell in love with the grace and charm of the city and the area."

He made the acquaintance, too, of Jock Brydon, the Scotsman who was the arboretum's director.

STRYBING Arboretum, Bryan explains, had its beginnings in 1937 when Helene Strybing, a public-spirited San Francisco woman, left the city and county of San Francisco a bequest to be used for an arboretum in Golden Gate Park.

The legendary John McLaren —"also a graduate of the Royal Botanical Gardens at Edinburgh," Bryan says proudly — chose Eric Walther as the arboretum's first director. He retired in the late 1950s, and after a brief lapse Brydon was named his successor.

Brydon retired in 1969, and Roy Hudson, an assistant superintendent of parks, took over the responsibilities temporarily.

MEANWHILE, Bryan left John de Graaff to become briefly a partner with

HIS JOB AS DIRECTOR of the world famous Strybing Arboretum in San Francisc's Golden Gate Park enables John E. Bryan to work in what is literally a paradise of flowers and foliage for the professional horticulturist. Marin resident Bryan, English-born and trained in Britain and Europe, has been in charge of the 70 acres with more than 5,000 different species of plants since 1970.

Dan Caldwell Is Teacher And Thespian

AS EDMUND, the illegimate son, in the Marin Shakespeare Festival's current production of "King Lear," Marin actor Dan Caldwell has been compared to the late Errol Flynn by a San Francisco drama critic. Caldwell is also directing the festival's production of "As You Like It" running in repertory with "King Lear," "Country Wife" and "Alice in Wunderland."

By JOAN LISETOR

More than once Dan Caldwell has left Marin County to pursue a career in the theater. But he always returns.

"Mostly it's the people, the countryside, the climate, the cultural activities and the quiet," said the Marin native, who still lives in San Anselmo, the town in which he grew up.

Currently Caldwell is directing the Marin Shakespeare Festival's production of "As You Like It" and playing the role of Edmund, the bastard son, in the festival's production of "King Lear" at San Francisco's Palace of Fine Arts.

Drama also reaches into the academic world for teacher-thespian Caldwell. He heads the drama department at Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley, where he has taught since 1962.

"THERE IS NO opportunity to do what I want professionally here," Caldwell said, "but I love teaching, particularly at the high school level, where there is nothing to undo.

"I find teaching in high school more exciting than in college because high school students are in the process of discovering who they are — and isn't that the first thing one has to learn to become an actor?"

His desire to act goes as far back as he can remember, Caldwell said.

He first acted as a high school student, both at Tamalpais and Sir Francis Drake high schools. He majored in drama at San Francisco State College, where he also studied for a master's degree, and he has completed all requirements but the thesis toward a doctorate degree in film and television production at the University of California at Los Angeles.

TEACHING WAS an accident, he said, when he discovered he had met all the requirements except one course in education.

"I heard about an opening in the drama department at Tam, and I was attracted because it sounded like fun," he said.

To pursue theatrical opportunities Caldwell has taken leaves of absence from teaching.

He believes: "A teacher should not stay at teaching too long a time without interruption because he becomes stagnant without exercising his own creativity. Every teacher should take some time off and get away from the ivory tower, out into the real world."

"A teacher should not stay at teaching too long a time without interruption," believes Dan Caldwell, "because he becomes stagnant without exercising his own creativity. Every teacher should take time off and get away from the ivory tower . . ."

Of his three worlds — acting, directing and teaching — acting is the most frustrating, Caldwell said.

"IN ACTING YOU can't be objective, whereas you can in teaching and directing. It is more painful because you put yourself on the line. But greater moments are possible, and there can be sheer joy when the moments are right," Caldwell said.

"The minute the frustration becomes greater than the rewards, I'm through."

The Marin Shakespeare Festival's repertory company offers Caldwell an opportunity to direct and act in the same company. And that situation, he said, has not created problems in his relationships with the other actors.

"If you can give direction you can also take direction," he said. "And working with such a fine director as Douglas Seale (director of 'King Lear') there is no question who is the director. It is a very together company.

"THE ACTOR GETS caught up in his acting and must agree with the director's point-of-view. There can be chaos when an actor tries to direct."

An actor must be subjective toward the character he is portraying, according to Caldwell, who plays the villain in "King Lear."

His portrayal of Edmund has been compared to that of the late Errol Flynn by the San Francisco Examiner's drama critic Stanley Eichelbaum. The San Francisco Chronicle drama critic Paine Knickerbocker called him "a fascinating villain."

"Edmund is evil, but to play the role well I must have sympathy with the villain," Caldwell commented. "As an actor I am not aware of how well or how

EVELYN PORTER developed an interest in natural foods as a child in a Mormon family in Salt Lake City, and years later it blossomed into a prospering business. She began with a health food store in Novato, and has since added stores in San Anselmo and San Rafael. Here she serves a customer at her San Rafael shop in the Montecito Shopping Center (Independent-Journal photo)

PROFILE OF A MARINITE

From Mormon Background And The Depression Years, Evelyn Porter Developed Firm Belief In Natural Foods

By FRED STREBEIGH

"Our bodies are Tabernacles of the Soul, and we should keep them pure," says Evelyn Porter.

She is the founder of the Evelyn Porter Nutrition Shops with three stores in Novato, San Anselmo and San Rafael.

She traces her early interest in health food to her youth in a Mormon family in Salt Lake City and the nutrition problem of feeding a family with "six athletically-inclined brothers" and two sisters in the years leading up to and during the Depression.

SPEAKING OF her Mormon heritage, she said "Being that I'm from this background, the natural things were more prevalent. We made our own organic bread and grew our own organic vegetables."

"Our people believe in moderation in all things — and certainly we feel that we should take care of the land. Taking care of our bodies is another vital part of ecology," she added.

The poverty her family suffered during the Depression ended both her education at the University of Utah and her aspirations to a career in ballet, an art for which she began her training at age 8.

Today her slim, trim body still retains the physical agility, grace and strength of a dancer.

THE NEED TO keep her body strong first led her to the study of nutrition and to the conviction that food grown organically — without artificial additives or pesticides — is vital to good health.

"The main thing that has attracted people to natural foods is that they've found their bodies weren't getting the strength and energy they need from the food they had been eating, she said. "People are tired of being half-sick all the time."

She said that her husband, a former Standard Oil of California tax analyst who now manages the business side of the stores, learned the meaning of "health food" through hard experience.

BEFORE A HEART attack, which he suffered in 1958, he hadn't believed that her organic and health foods worked any real good for the body's health. "I had to sneak it into the house," she said.

The heart attack, she said, coming at the age of 43, completely cut him off temporarily from all the physical activity to which he had been accustomed.

Four years of treatment, she said, did not restore the physical freedom which he needed. Finally she convinced him to go on a diet of the foods she had been advocating for years.

SHE SAID THAT they combined a diet of fertile eggs, whole grains, organic vegetables and other "good foods" with dosages of fat emulsifiers and vitamins."

His cholesterol level and blood pressure dropped dramatically, she said, and Porter "decided maybe this wasn't as crazy as it sounded."

It was about the same time, in 1962, that Mrs. Porter opened her first store in their home town of Novato, as her project to occupy her time and interest "since the children had left home."

"The main thing that has attracted people to natural foods is that they've found their bodies weren't getting the strength and energy they need from the food they had been eating," Evelyn Porter believes. "People are tired of being half-sick all the time."

Their daughter, Erline Burgi, now lives with her husband and five children on a 100 acre farm in Sonoma, and their son, Ronald Porter, is a construction worker with four children in Ohio.

SHE HAS SEEN her project increase its sales volume ten-fold in the 10 years during which she also has added stores in San Anselmo and San Rafael.

She has seen, too, a big change in her customers, and especially the young ones who she says have been leading the health food movement.

"I have seen it change from the flower children to more stable young persons responsive to the very fiber of our existence as a nation," she said.

Young people have turned away from "the total freedom that they once demanded with its moral degeneration," she said, "because they could see what was coming from this laxity — this permissiveness — was total destruction."

SHE SAID THAT this change might be linked to a spiritual revival among the young. "These young people are groping, she said. They're searching for a better, more noble way of living.

"You have to feed the mind with good things, with something morally good, as well as feed the body with good nutrition.

"For a while they could see only the necessity for good nutrition. Now they have progressed to the point where they can see also that they need a higher moral standard as well as better nutritional standard."

Over the years, she said, the health food business has grown tremendously and thrown off the stigma of eccentricity that it had suffered in its early years.

"IT'S NO LONGER the little old lady in tennis shoes" who manages and frequents such stores, she said.

She said that the growing size of the industry is also subjecting it to closer scrutiny and putting greater demands on the store owner.

She has taken adult education courses in nutrition at the University of California at Berkeley, and has attended seminars with nutritionists including Adelle Davis and Carlton Fredericks, sponsored by the Northern California Retailers Assn.

She says that the news, close scrutiny is good, "because it will come to the point where we are tested, licensed and qulified right down the line from growers and distributors to retailers."

"WE'VE WANTED to be licensed for years, so we could prove ourselves," she said.

While Mrs. Porter sees that health food is becoming big business, she says that her stores will always stay small — "a personal business with a personal touch."

The faith in organic food which she acquired from her Mormon background remains unshaken, she said. "Anytime they tamper with the natural product, it becomes less nutritious. Why change Mother Nature?"

SHE AND HER husband have lived in the close confines of a mobile home park since 1970, and before that on a quarter acre plot, in Novato since 1948.

When they retire, she says, they will get back to the land.

They plan to move to their daughter's Sonoma farm to where even now, Mrs. Porter says, "We get up and put our hands to the plow as much as possible."

When the day finally comes, she says, "we will retire to the north 40 and have our own little plot — raise Cornish hens and have organic-fed sheep."

MARIN POET'S CORNER

THE WORLD IS HOLLOW

When I reached out to touch your hand
I found that it was gone
But I will not cry
For the world is hollow and I have touched the sky.

Darling, I don't need your hand anymore.
For the black velvet heaven is my love.
To you I'll say goodbye
For the world is hollow and I have touched the sky.

If I should reach out again and find your hand waiting
I will probably begin to cry
For the world is hollow and I have touched the sky;
The stars are the sparkle in my eye.

The sapphire blue sky at dawn is my friend—
Sometimes I wish the day would never end
But, of course, it must
Just as the stars sometime turn to dust . . .

Every night I wake up to the moon,
Wish on the loneliest star in the sky,
And for the empty world I cry,
And then I think of you.

So please don't ask me to choose between you both,
For the world is hollow and I have touched the sky
And the sky has loved me
And the moon has explained my destiny.

When I reached out to touch your hand
I found that it was gone
But I will not cry
For the world is hollow and I have touched the sky.

I will not cry
For the world is hollow and I have touched the sky.

POEM TO A FRIEND

To a friend who gave me the scheme
To snare a golden dream,
Gather a glittering star,
Letting all the golden words fall.

I threw out my net
On a stormy sea
To see what I could catch,
Drew in a silvery shimmering web
of memory.

Once begun there was no stopping,
From my pen the golden words
came tumbling,
The small fire kindled ever burning.

So a million happy thanks to you
I'm sending
For this lovely magical world of words—
So elusive and alluring,
Like some sweet siren singing.

Dan Caldwell Strives To Give Theater Back To Audience

badly a show has gone. Actors only see their own performances, and again, it is difficult for an actor to know what is a good or a bad performance because he is creating an illusion for the audience by using a technique.

"IT IS LIKE A show I did that had a year's run — 'Once Over Nightly.' You knew it was technically right. That show was a comedy, so I enjoyed the long run, because with a comedy you get response from the audience."

He prefers working in repertory "because with a different play every night you are fresher," he said.

Last season Caldwell appeared in two episodes of the television series, "Streets of San Francisco," and has had to turn down two being filmed currently for next season because he is too busy with the Shakespeare Festival.

He is sorry to lose the $600 income, he said. But he is more concerned that his career has not yet reached the point where directors will wait for him when he is busy elsewhere.

THE SHAKESPEARE festival's season ends Sept. 10, just eight days before Caldwell is scheduled to begin filming a movie, "Nightmare In Blood." He plays the hero but not the lead, since the lead is a vampire.

The film is being shot on location in San Francisco and will have a contemporary setting.

Other things are coming up, Caldwell said, but he doesn't like to talk about them until they are definite. He acknowledges that he is turning down acting jobs, since he is being offered more than he could possibly take. It is a pleasant and not ordinary situation for an actor.

In fact after seven years as director of Plays for Living, Caldwell has resigned because he does not have enough time for those duties.

Plays for Living is a repertory company sponsored by the Family Service Agency, and performs plays that have social issues as a theme. San Rafael actor-director John Brebner has replaced Caldwell as artistic director.

CALDWELL ESTIMATES he has appeared in as many as 100 plays and 20 films. His latest film appearance was the "Laughing Policeman," not yet released. He had a two-week contract, which meant for most of the two weeks he sat around waiting for a call for the one scene in which he appeared.

Other movies in which he has appeared include "Bullitt," "Skidoo," "Petulia," "The Organizer," "ThX 1138" and "Take the Money and Run."

"The exciting thing about theater is that it is happening now," says Dan Caldwell. "The audience is only there once, and they are sharing what is happening with you. Each performance is a one-time thing."

The stage role Caldwell has enjoyed most was that of Jacques in a Marin Shakespeare Festival production of "As You Like It," directed by one of the festival's founders, Anne Brebner.

The role of Edmund in "King Lear" is enjoyable, he said, as is all live theater.

"The exciting thing about theater is that it is happening now. The audience is only there once, and they are sharing what is happening with you. Each performance is a one-time thing.

"AS A DIRECTOR my philosophy is to try to give the audience back its place in the theater. That place was taken away early in the 20th Century, and audiences had to look through a non-existent wall. Performers were not aware the audience was there because directors ignored them.

"How often does an actor turn to the audience and say something?

"The message I want to relate to the audience as a director is, 'We can't do the show without you. You have a place, maybe even a role.' I like flexible theater. The flexibility doesn't even have to be physical. It can be an attitude."

Caldwell said that as a director putting a show together he enjoys every moment.

"DIRECTING 'As You Like It,' I have told the cast it should be, indeed, as you like it. I am doing it in the late Victorian era because the lines are clean and simple," he said.

To critics who object to Shakespeare played in a non-Elizabethan era Caldwell answers that Shakespeare himself did plays in what was modern dress for his day, regardless of the period in which the work was set.

" 'Julius Caesar' was set in ancient Rome, but he did it in the dress of his (Shakespeare's) day," the director said.

Caldwell also teaches private classes in San Francisco to aspiring film actors and actresses. To them he imparts this advice drawn from his experience, "A good actor is one who relaxes enough to let the spontaneity show through."

"The message I want to relate to the audience as a director is, 'We can't do the show without you. You have a place, maybe even a role.' I like flexible theater. But the flexibility doesn't even have to be physical. It can be an attitude."

Visual beauty is also important, he said.

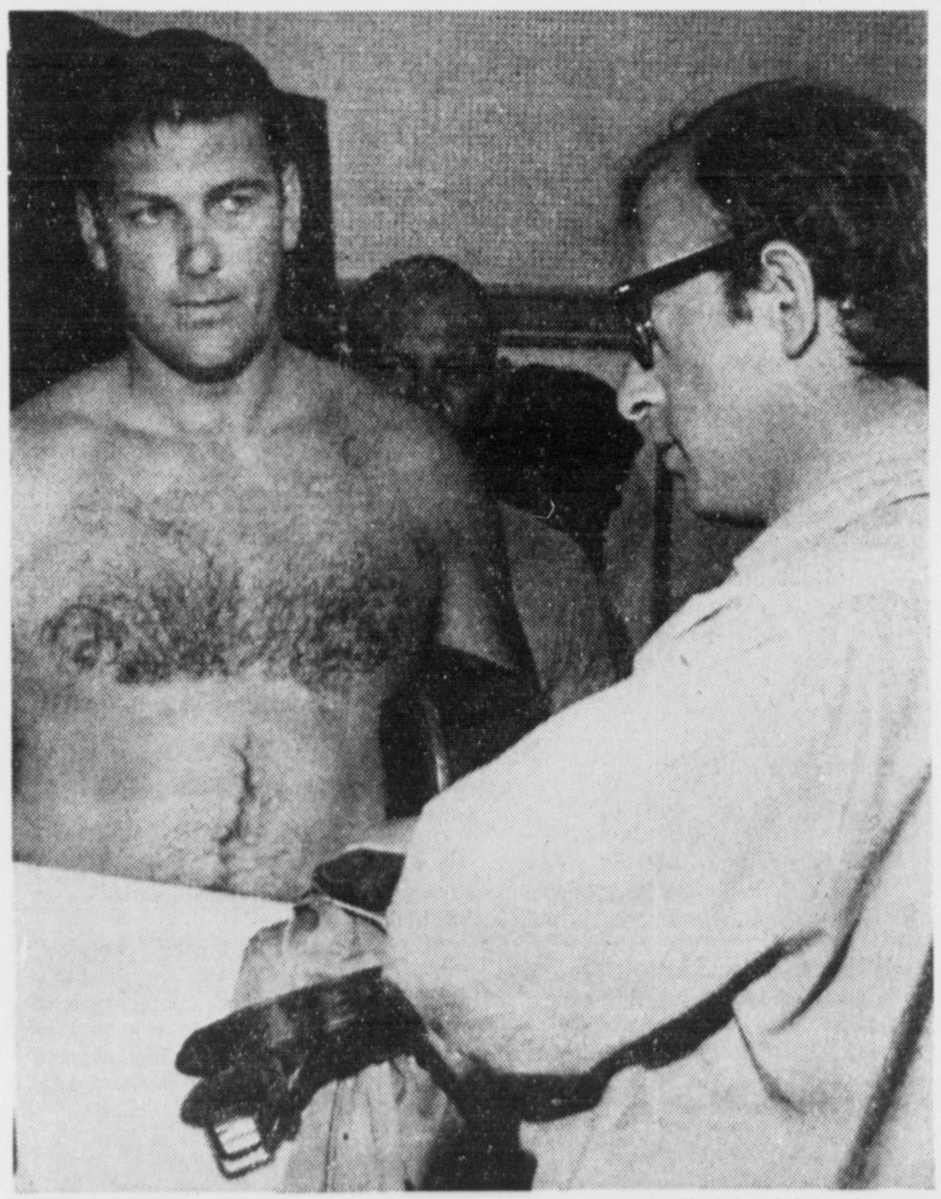
CALDWELL'S GOAL is to establish himself nationally as an actor-director.

Expense i the only thing keeping him from doing his own films, he said. To reach the goal he will have to take leaves from his teaching, because "all the action is in Los Angeles."

The move some day is inevitable, he said, because, as he tells his students, "You have to be there to get the jobs.

"I have an agent in Los Angeles, but he doesn't call me unless I am there. Still, I will always come back to Marin."

ACTOR-DIRECTOR-TEACHER Dan Caldwell goes over scripts and stage plan drawings in the garden of his San Anselmo home. Caldwell is head of the drama department at Tamalpais High School. He is also a professional actor and director who has had to leave Marin County several times to advance his career, since theater opportunities are scarce in the Bay Area. Right now, however, he is busily involved in the Marin Shakespeare Festival.



ONE OF THE RARE occasions when Marin actor Dan Caldwell, left, did not have to leave Marin County to act was during the filming of "Take the Money and Run," made here in 1968 by actor-director Woody Allen, right. Caldwell also has had roles in a number of other major motion pictures.

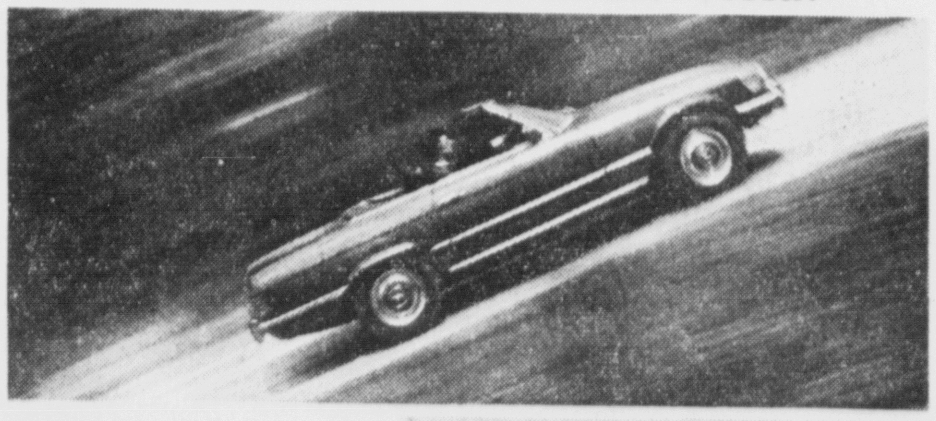
Road & Track called the 450SL "one of the ten best cars in the world."



Phil Hill called it "the best sports car."
Mercedes-Benz agrees.

Now from the engineers of Mercedes-Benz comes a brilliant advance. A car which, in an incredibly short time, has earned the almost extravagant praise of the men who know, drive and live sports cars. Men like Phil Hill, the only American ever to win the World Championship of Driving.

The 450SL is powered by a fuel-injected, overhead-cam V-8 engine. All four wheels are independently suspended. All four wheels have fade-resistant disc brakes. All features you'd expect in a high-performance sporting machine. But consider the following: In the 450SL, air conditioning, power-assisted steering and 3-speed automatic transmission are standard. Hardly the usual features you're given in a sports car.

The 450SL is the product of truly enlightened engineering. Mercedes-Benz engineering. Test drive it and you'll experience — maybe for the first time in your life — what a sports machine should be. Call us. It's surprisingly easy to arrange.

MARIN LIVING

For The Professional Horticulturist, Bay Area Is A Virtual Paradise

another Oregon bulb-growing firm. He resigned that position in 1970 to accept the directorship of Strybing Arboretum.

For the appointment Bryan had the strong support of the much respected Jock Brydon. He had the recommendation as well of Joseph Caberley, a San Rafael resident and general manager of the San Francisco Recreation and Parks Department, under which the arboretum operates.

The influential and very active Strybing Arboretum Society also gave him its backing.

UPON REPORTING for his new job, Bryan found as his biggest challenge "the realization of the objectives of the arboretum within the means of a very limited budget."

Those objectives he describes as "making the arboretum a place where even those with only a peripheral interest in horticulture could be stimulated into a greater interest in plants and encouraged to grow a wider range of species in their own gardens; to make of the arboretum a tremendous educational resource for our children; and to increase in people of all ages their appreciation and enjoyment of plants and gardens.

"In gardening," asserts Bryan, "that word —enjoyment — is a very important key word."

THE ARBORETUM extends in Golden Gate Park from Ninth Avenue and Lincoln Way westward to approximately 16th Avenue, and is bounded on the north by South Drive.

Of its 70 acres, Bryan estimates that approximately five acres are given over to native plants, the remaining 65 acres to imported species, "although it is difficult to make a separation because some species, such as the native Monterey Pines, are scattered throughout the arboretum."

"We have the world's finest collection of magnolias," Bryan says proudly. "We have an outstanding collection of Malaysian rhododendrons, good collections of Berberis and Vibernums, and a wonderful collection of dwarf conifers.

"WE HAVE A complete collection of cedars. Just recently we opened the John Muir Nature Trail which will house 13 different plant communities to be seen as they would be found in the wild, growing as natives of California."

Bryan notes that the arboretum has introduced a number of plants to North America. "We have them from everywhere — from China, from Africa, from Australia, you name it and we have it."

A point of special pride with Bryan is the Sunset Demonstration Garden, a joint project of the Lane Publishing Co. (Sunset Magazine and books) and the Strybing Arboretum Society.

THERE SMALL areas are developed as garden settings to give the public ideas as to what they can do in their own backyards.

Bryan is strong in his praise of the Strybing Arboretum Society, "a very active and dedicated body of men and women." Most recently the society presented to San Francisco the Helen Crocker Russell Library of Horticulture. It employs a full-time librarian and a full-time director of education, and functions out of the Hall of Flowers where Bryan's office is located.

An annual plant sale in the spring is a major fundraising event on the part of the society.

GENERAL MANAGER Joseph Caberley's San Francisco Recreation and Parks Department, under whose aegis the arboretum operates, has joined with the Strybing Society in sponsoring horticultural classes.

"The Hall of Flowers and the Sunset Demonstration Gardens are officially the county fairgrounds of San Francisco, and thus share in pari-mutuel racing funds," Bryan explains.

He continues: "What we have is a meeting place where everyone interested in horticulture can indulge their own special gardening interests — and at the same time witness and appreciate the efforts and interests of others."

HE EXPLAINS: "When you go to visit the rhododendrons, you also pass the fuchsias. If you visit the California Association of Nurserymen exhibit, your walk takes you past the ikebana garden. At the time you see the gazebo designed by the famous Thomas Church, you also see the San Francisco Garden Club setting laid out by a state college student.

"In the arboretum we have a meeting of the city and the county, the state, the schools, the private organizations, of business, of the flower and other civic clubs, of individuals. It is a place operated for the benefit of all, and with the help and participation of the widest possible spectrum."

The arboretum has a staff of 10 gardeners, and Bryan says: "I don't know how they get all the work one."

THE SECRET, he suspects, is in the interest these men feel for their work.

Bryan is strong in his praise, too, for the arboretum's volunteer docents who conduct school groups on tours by appointment. "They are very keen," he says, "extremely well informed."

The arboretum also sponsors field trips, such as one this spring to the Bakersfield area to admire and study the wildflower fields.

Although tied to his desk more than he would like, John Bryan, ever the gardener, makes it a point to get out into the arboretum from time to time, "especially when I feel a bit frustrated," and even to do a bit of digging.

"I TRY TO visit some part of the arboretum evry day," he says. And there, and along the way, he talks to the men at their work.

"I like to get them involved," he says. "I want them to know that their ideas are considered when plans for the arboretum's future are made. Man is no good unless he is interested in his work."

Even when pressed, Bryan refuses to pick one section of the arboretum or one species of its thousands of plants as his personal favorite, although he confesses a continuing special interest in bulb flowers and tells with enthusiasm of his arrangement with the Netherlands Flower Bulb Institute last fall to plant more than 30,000 bulbs in the arboretum as a continuing trial for their evaluation.

"THUS WE enjoy these wonderful flowers without any cost."

Bryan's moments of frustration and restlessness at his desk are infrequent "because I know that the paper work is very much tied in with gardening. It all helps the cause, and I feel that I am a part of something that is very important to man's future well-being."

Of ruddy complexion, with reddish tinged hair and mustache and slightly stoutish, Bryan looks the typical Englishman. But he feels today very much the American.

HE HAS returned to Britain and to Europe a number of times for visits. "Man always has ties to his native land." But says he has no regrets over his decision to immigrate.

"I'm happy here," he says. "We have a fantastic climate in the San Francisco area. We can grow stuff from both the north and the south. It is cold enough to grow Far Northern specimens, yet warm enough for semi-tropical plants."

What more could a horticulturist ask for?

Well, perhaps a better growing soil.

"OUR SOIL is not very good," he admits, but astens to add: "But one can very easily change that, and build a good soil. After all, Golden Gate Park, including the arboretum, was once all sand dunes."

Bryan has two children, living with their mother, who appropriately enough bear flower names —Daphne and Jasmine, ages 13 and 9. And both, he adds, love to garden.

Bryan appears frequently on Bay Area television on such programs as Helen Bentley's Channel 5 show. He was a regular on Oregon television. And his slightly clipped voice is heard doing one-minute promotional spots for the arboretum on KNBR and KCBS radio — "I've reached the point where in America I have a slight English accent, and in England I have a slight American accent," he smiles. "Of course, I can still do the English accent pretty well when I try."

HE HAS written frequently on horticultural subjects, and has a book scheduled for January publication by 101 Productions which he co-authored with Coralie Castle of San Rafael.

For his articles, he takes his own illustrative photographs.

He lectures to various garden and service clubs, is a Rotarian, and belongs to a number of professional organizations.

"I'm a strong supporter of Marin Heritage," he says. "I think it is our special duty these days to preserve gardens and plants of merit. We can build buildings. But we can't build trees. Only time will replace a lost tree."

HIS HOBBIES include tennis, cricket, golf and cross country skiing. His tastes in food reflect his stay on the Continent — "I love French cooking" — rather than his British background, "although I dote on English beer."

But John Bryan, the man with the 70-acre garden, remains for all his other interests, first and foremost the horticulturist.

Like he said, "No man is any good unless he is interested in his work." Bryan is interested, very interested, in Strybing Arboretum.

"It is extremely satisfying," he says, "to be able to contribute to so many people's enjoyment and appreciation of plants and gardens —to be able to pass along one's expertise to a wide range of the public, without being concerned with making dollar sales."

JOHN E. BRYAN

AT HIS DESK in the Hall of Flowers in Golden Gate Park, Strybing Arboretum Director John E. Bryan confers with secretary Emily Warner concerning some aspect of his job of administering one of the world's largest botanical gardens. The horticulturist admits he sometimes chaffs at the desk work. But when the "itch" arises, he has only to leave the office to inspect one of the many growing areas in the arboretum.

A PROJECT OF the very active Strybing Arboretum Society is the Helen Crocker Russell Library of Horticulture. John Bryan studies one of the hundreds of horticultural volumes stocked in the library for which the society employs a full-time librarian. The library is open to the public.

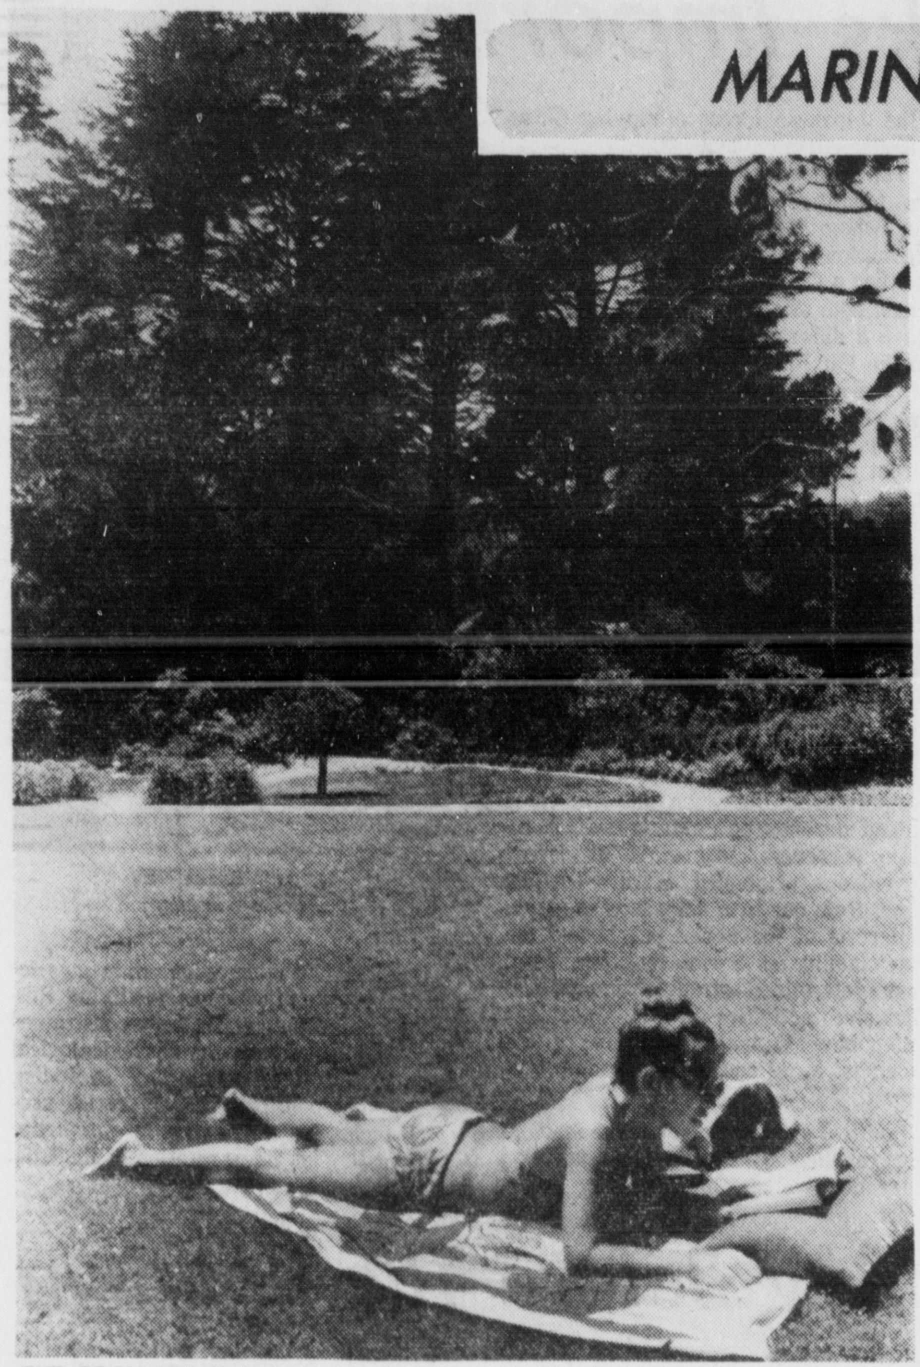
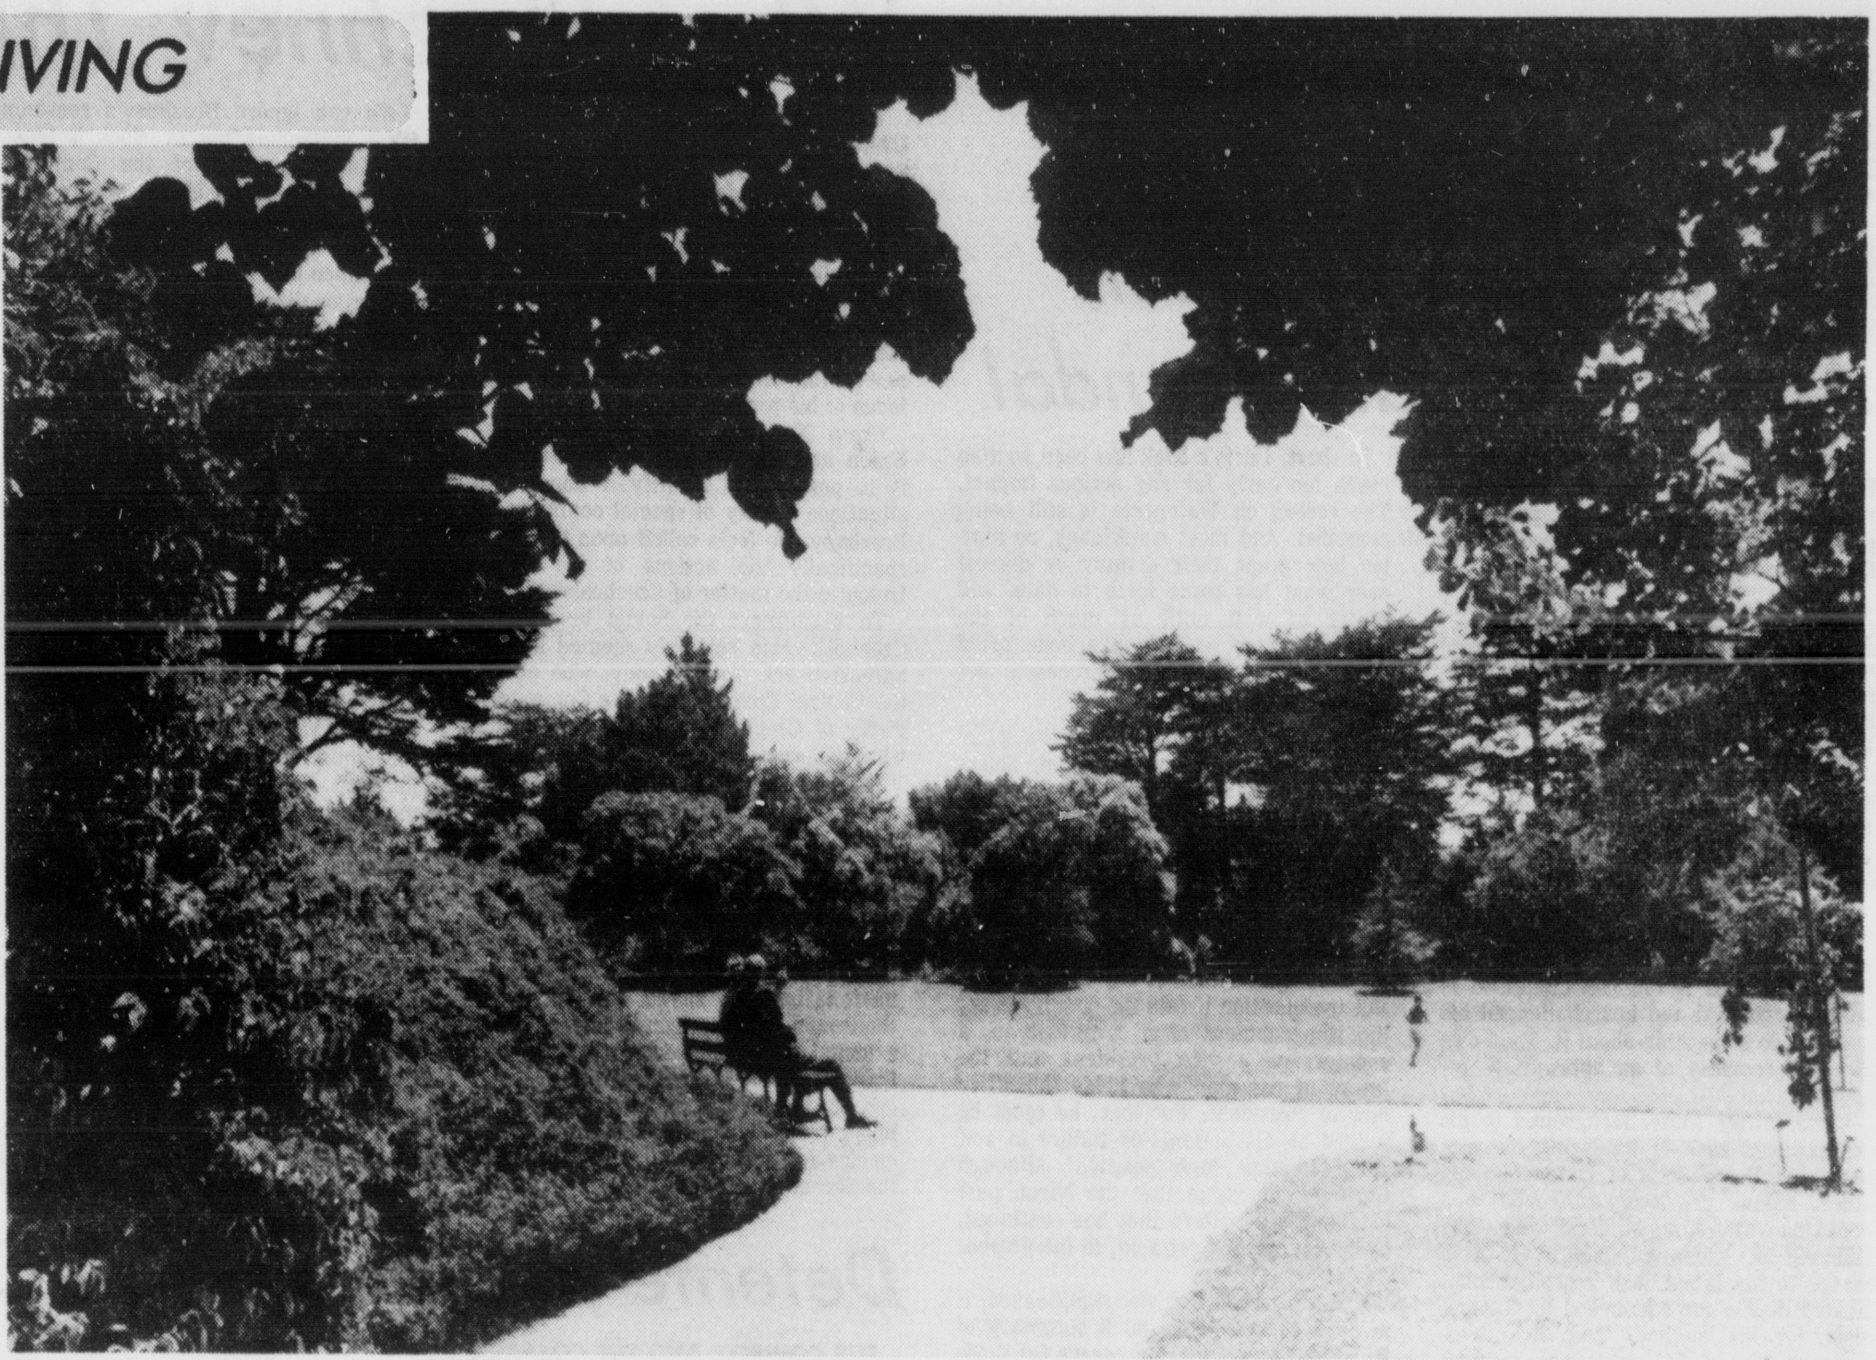
MARIN LIVING

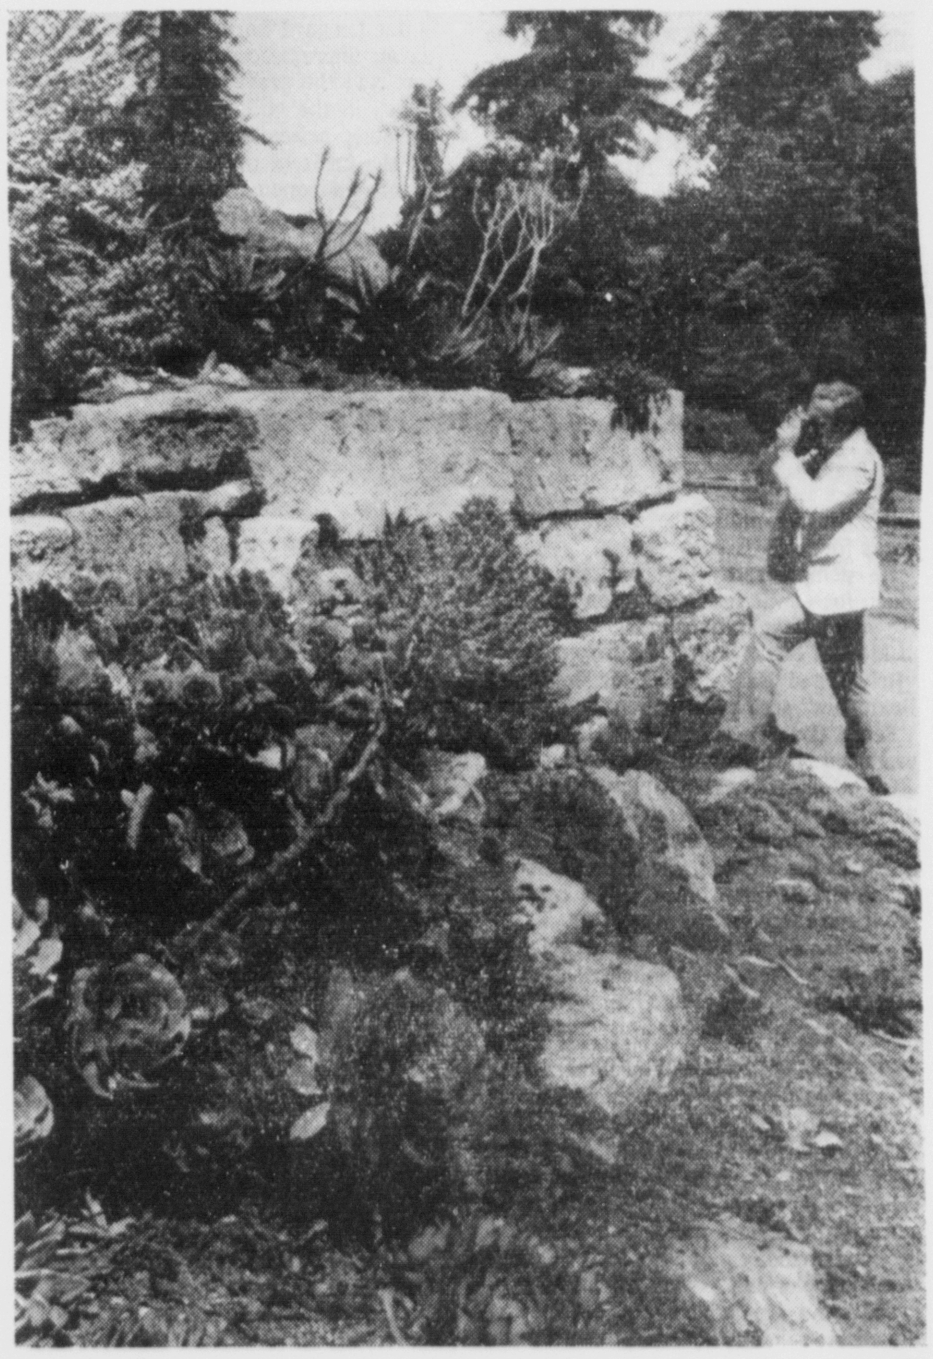


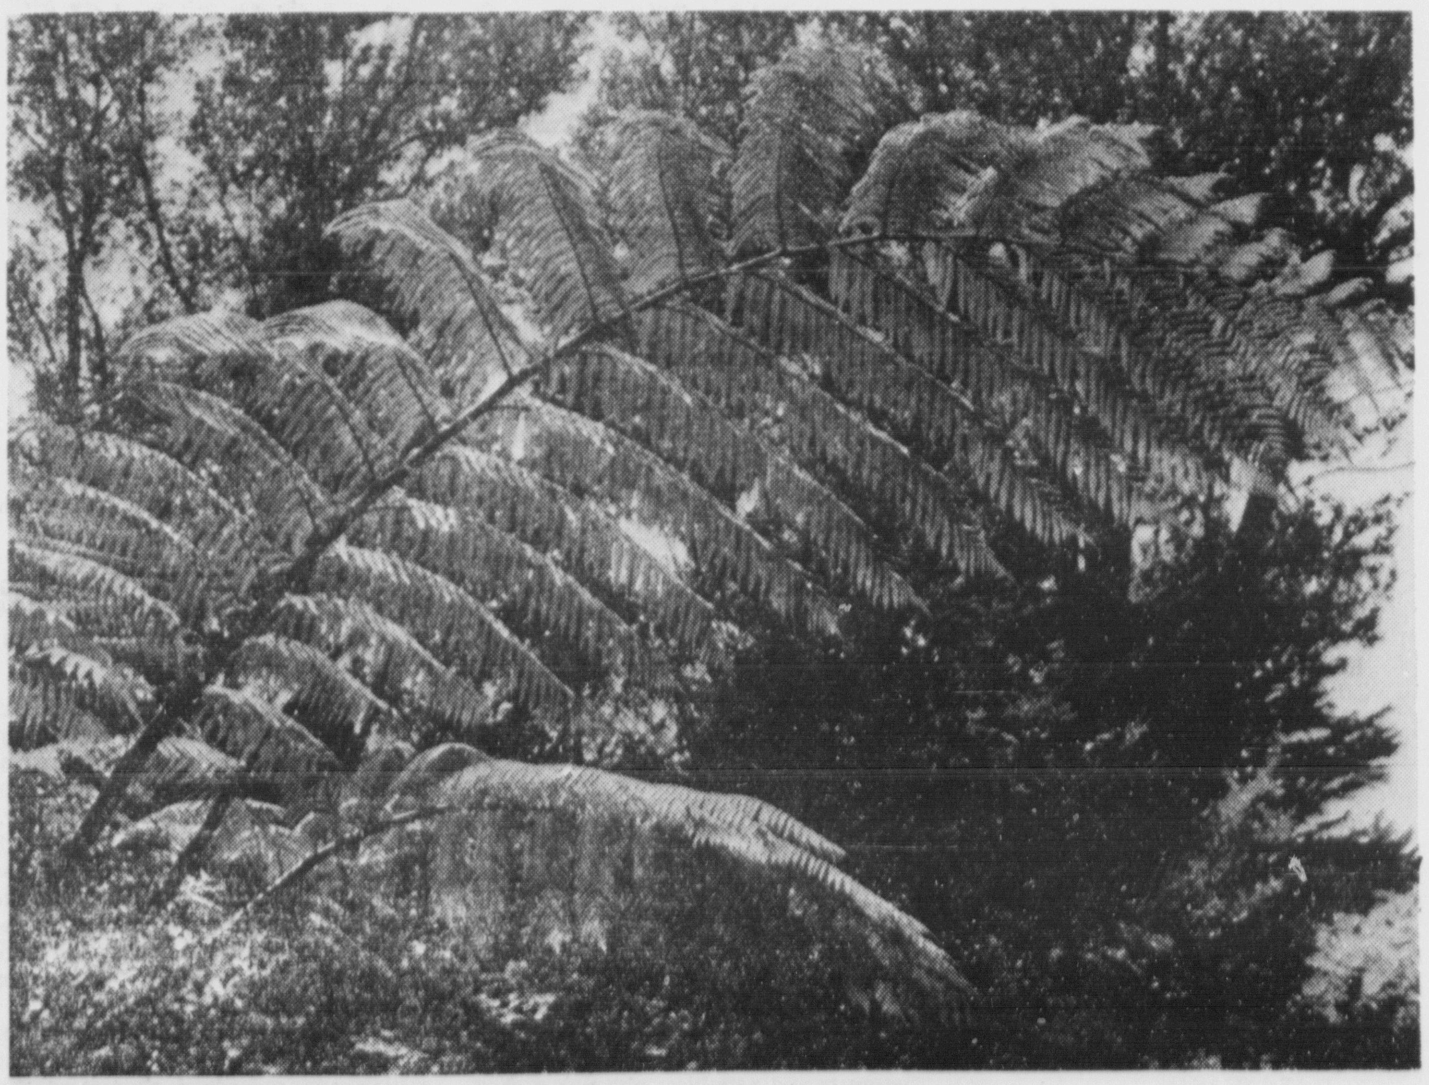
THE GROUNDS OF the Strybing Arboretum, totalling 70 acres, make up one of the most beautiful and most relaxing areas in San Francisco's famed Golden Gate Park. Here Alice Yavorsky takes advantage of those pleasant surroundings to read while she suns on the green of one of the arboretum lawns.



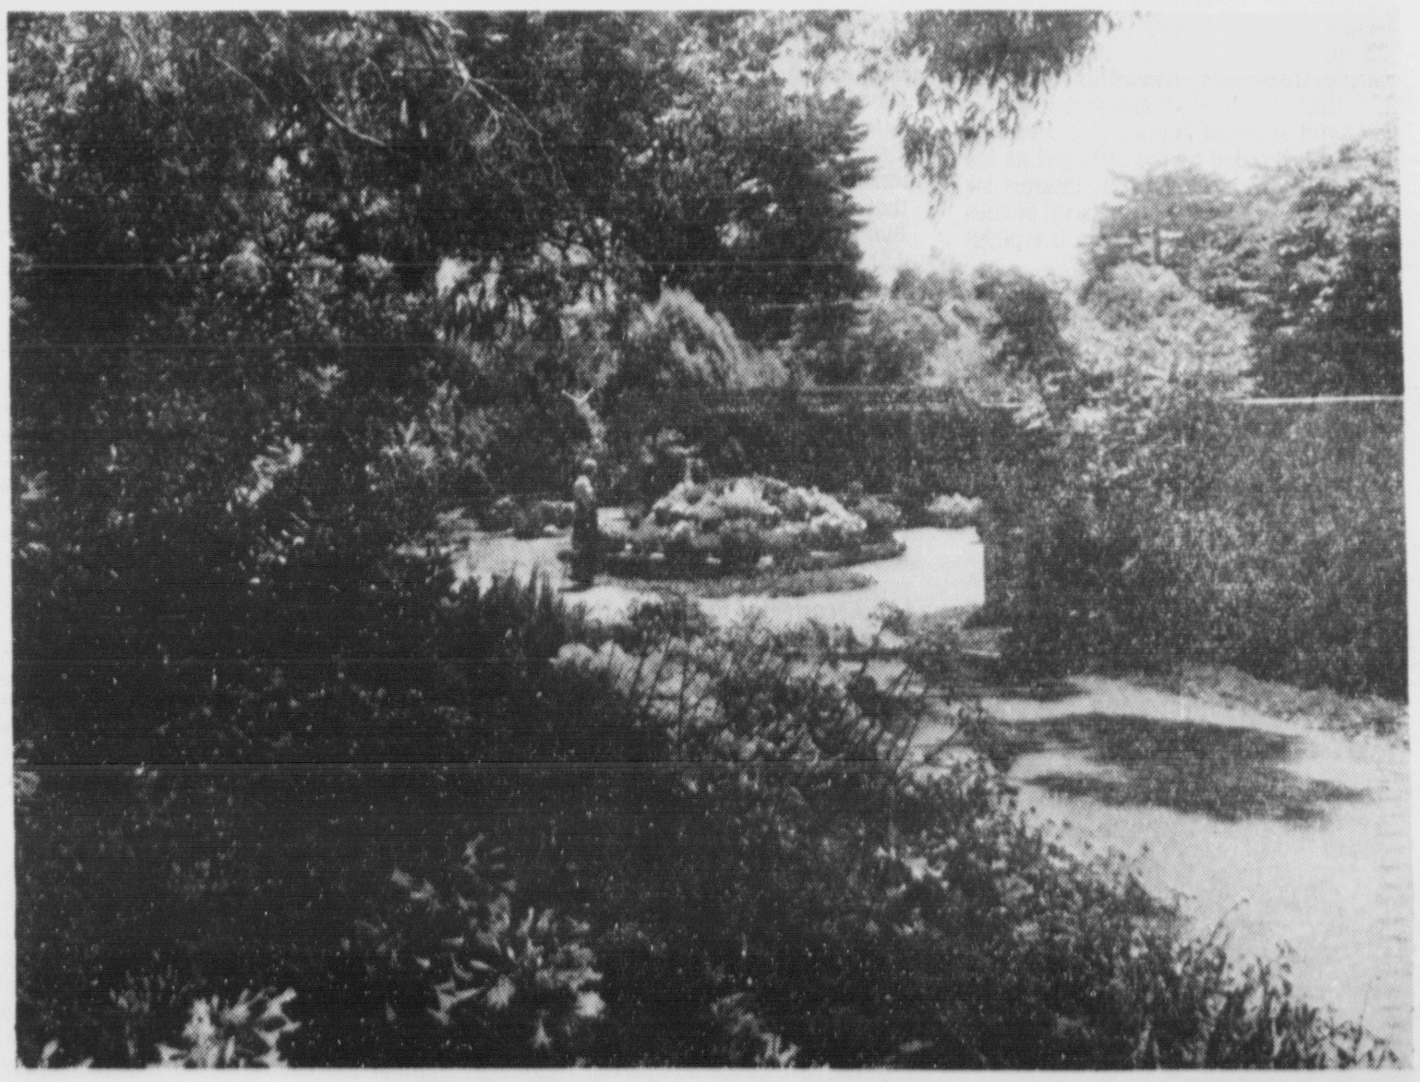
THERE IS ROOM to run and to play, and also places to sit, chat and relax in Strybing Arboretum. And everywhere one finds oneself surrounded by specimen plants and trees, some native to California, many from the far corners of the earth. Strybing Arboretum was begun in 1937 with a bequest left the city by the late Helen Strybing. Legendary John McLaren was driving force in its beginnings.

JOHN E. BRYAN, Strybing Arboretum director and Marin resident, always enjoys an opportunity to get out onto the grounds and to see for himself what is going on. At left, he discusses a terracing idea with visitors Harold and Patricia House of San Francisco. Above, in the greenhouse, he confers with arboretum employee Tom Bass of Mill Valley. And at right he snaps a photograph of the succulent garden section that he will use for arboretum publicity purposes.





THE FRONDS OF A New Zealand tree fern make a lacily delicate and cooling pattern on a summer day. Most of the species of plants growing in Strybing Arboretum are "imports" from foreign climes. This is possible, Director John Bryan notes, because San Francisco's own moderate climate is such that plants ranging from the Far North to the semi-tropical can be grown here. And for the professional horticulturist, that makes the Bay Area the perfect place in which to live and work.



GARDEN DEMONSTRATION areas are one of the prime attractions of Strybing Arboretum. Visitors come there to pick up ideas that they can implement in their own yards. Director John Bryan is especially proud of the Sunset Demonstration Garden, a joint project of the Lane Publishing Co. (Sunset Magazine and books) and the Stryblin Arboretum Society. Together with the Hall of Flowers building, the demonstration gardens constitute the official country fairgrounds for San Francisco.

An Unfriendly Survey Of The Nixon Career And Watergate Scandal

THE IMPEACHMENT OF RICHARD NIXON by Leonard Lurie; Berkeley Medallion Books, 208 pages, paperback, 95 cents. Reviewed by Don Keown.

A contest to get the first "Quickie" book relating to the Watergate scandals upon the market was inevitable. This obviously hurried paperback makes Leonard Lurie, if not the winner, at least one of the winners of that race.

Lurie goes a great deal further than a simple review of the Watergate disgrace, and presents instead a bill of indictment — "a call to action, now!" he labels it — for the impeachment of the President.

He even specifies the transgressions which he claims makes Richard Nixon subject to impeachment, and closes his book: "Richard Nixon has confessed to being a criminal and has challenged his peers to do something about it. They owe him the courtesy of an appropriate response."

Lurie brings some background to his self-assigned task of analyzing the motives and the actions of Nixon and his aides, having previously authored such books as "The King Makers" and "The Running of Richard Nixon." He also brings to his latest task a well demonstrated dislike for Nixon and an antagonism for his methods and objectives. Leonard Lurie is no unbiased, objective analyst of the Nixon record.

What Lurie has done is to merge the material he accumulated in his earlier writing upon the Nixon career with the day-to-day revelations that have been made public by the media as the Watergate shenanigans are exposed, thread by thread. Lurie has nothing new to offer upon either the pre-Watergate or the post-Watergate Nixon. The damaging information he relates upon the earlier Nixon has appeared before in his books and in the books of others. The record of Watergate and related matters can be witnessed by the readers, as well as Lurie, on television, and reviewed in the newspapers.

In short, Lurie's book has been written much too early for any serious impact. The record on Watergate is still being compiled. And most Americans, no matter how great their dismay or disgust over what has come forth to date, will prefer to wait until as much of the information as possible has been pried from Executive department recesses and exposed to public light.

The fact that Lurie's paperback includes testimony before the Senate Select Committee headed by Sen. Sam Ervin by a number of its witnesses is revealing of the hurry-up approach taken by the author and publisher. It hardly speaks for cool, considered analysis.

Lurie would probably answer that Nixon's earlier conduct would have sufficed for the impeachment of any civil servant. But the question before the country is not the impeachment of a congressman, a senator, or a vice president, but the future of the man who holds the office now of President. For that, he must be judged on his actions, or failure to act, while in that high position. Although Lurie might argue that the Nixon past establishes a pattern that has continued, to the country's detriment, to the present day.

If Lurie's book has any significance, it is as a source for a quick summary of Richard Nixon's erratic career for those who might not want to devote the necessary time for a fuller, more detailed review available in earlier books; and perhaps for an overall picture of the events of Watergate, etc., that are sometimes confusing and contradictory as they emerge in testimony and in press reports.

But Leonard Lurie cannot be regarded as an unprejudiced observer or evaluator. And the grave question of impeachment, in the still unlikely event that it seriously arises, will have to be decided on the basis of much less hurried judgments and upon a much fuller exploration of the evidence than has been possible for Leonard Lurie.

SOME NEW BOOKS FOR JUNIOR READERS

Dr. Seuss remains the magic name in books for the wee ones.

He demonstrates that he retains his touch for gentle humor and for stimulating young imaginations in his "The Shape of Me and Other Stuff," a Random House "Bright and Early Books for Beginning Beginners" series newcomer.

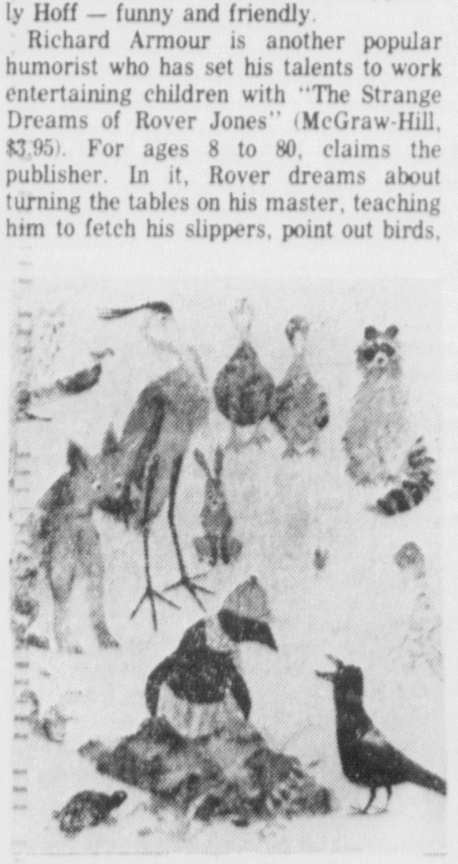
Seuss (Dr. Theodor Seuss Geisel) has produced a variety of shapes in silhouettes as one youngster explores the fascinating world of form to a delightfully poetic accompaniment. Its aim is to instill in the child a new appreciation of shape and its importance. But it is also a great fun romp for the youngster.

For all its simplicity, its a splendid little book. And the publisher is to be commended for keeping the price at a modest $2.50.

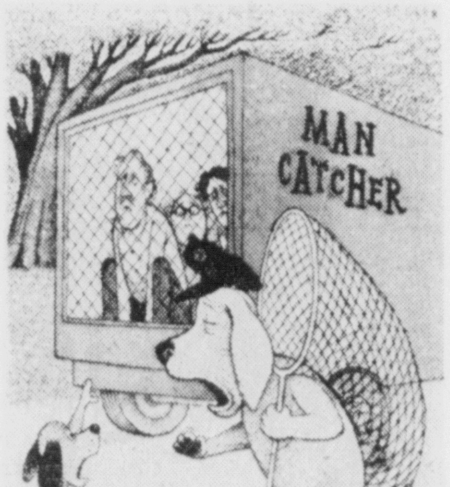
FOR SHEER BEAUTY of illustrations, the watercolors of Symeon Shimin in "The Paint-Box Sea" (McGraw-Hill, $4.95) would be difficult to beat. The talented artist provides some glorious colors to accompany Doris Herold Lund's story of how Jane and her brother use her new birthday paints to depict the sea in all its glorious — and oftchanging — hues. Again, it is a book designed to start the creative juices to flowing and to hone the senses of youngsters. But the Shimin paintings are almost overpowering in their beauty, and may overshadow Mrs. Lund's worthwhile story idea.

A droll little tale is "A Walk Past Ellen's House" (McGraw-Hill, $4.50) by Syd Hoff, syndicated cartoonist with a delightful sense of humor. It is all about one lad bedazzled by the little girl on the block, but afraid to show his interest for fear of teasing by the other boys. Shades of Charlie Brown! The artwork is typically Hoff — funny and friendly.

Richard Armour is another popular humorist who has set his talents to work entertaining children with "The Strange Dreams of Rover Jones" (McGraw-Hill, $3.95). For ages 8 to 80, claims the publisher. In it, Rover dreams about turning the tables on his master, teaching him to fetch his slippers, point out birds, eat on the floor and all the other indignities inflicted upon canines. Tykes will likely howl with laughter. And dad and mom will chuckle, too. The lively drawings are the work of Eric Gurney and fit the tone of the story perfectly.



A PENGUIN lost in the forest furnishes the excitement in "Hector Penguin" by Louise Fatio and Roger Duvoisin.



THE CANINES turn the tables on their masters in humorist Richard Armour's "The Strange Dreams of Rover Jones."

"MORE ABOUT Waggy" (McGraw-Hill, $4.95) returns the appealing woolen dog and his friends dwelling in Little David's room, created by Patricia M. Scarry, for yet more adventures. And again talented Cyndy Szekeres has teamed with Mrs. Scarry to do pictures that should enchant the tots. Timid Lion, Bun-Bun the motherly rabbit, Lumpy the doll and all the others are back for more fun and mischief. It is the kind of cast that endears itself to small ones and never wears out its welcome. There is, for instance, the excitement of the runaway wagon. Or the adventure in the boat. And much, much more.

The title character in "Hector Penguin" (McGraw-Hill, $4.95) is the product of the fertile minds of writer Louise Fatio and Roger Duvoisin, who have scored well with children with their Happy Lion series. Hector should win a lot of friends, too. Accustomed to the zoo, Hector is lost in the forest, where the creatures in the woods, unaccustomed to his like, wonder just what he might be. Hector wonders, too. How he establishes his penguin identity makes an entertaining little tale.

Paddington Bear is another of those children's book characters who won himself a large and loyal following. The Michael Bond creation captivated the tykes with his humorous mishaps and escapades. Now Random House is engaged in bringing him back in repeats of the earlier books, but revised to appeal to younger, just-beginning-to-read boys and girls. The first of the original books, entitled simply "Paddington Bear," is also the first in the new series. There are big, full color pictures on every page by Fred Banbery, and Paddington never looked better. And the price is a bargain, $1.95.

What Brezhnev Thinks Important

ON THE POLICY OF THE SOVIET UNION AND THE INTERNATIONAL SITUATION by Leonid Brezhnev; Doubleday, 261 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

Fortunately, it is not necessary to believe politicians when they write or speak. What we are able to pick up from these political speeches of Leonid Brezhnev is what Brezhnev thinks demands the focus of his propaganda efforts.

From 'On The Policy of The Soviet Union and The International Situation," it is possible to identify a number of situations worthy of special comment by Brezhnev. He feels called upon to defend specifically the actions of the Soviet Union in the matter of Czechoslovakia.

To Westerners the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia certainly seemed like an agressive act. To Brezhnev, who quotes the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Czechoslovakia, it looks somewhat different;

'. . . the entry of the allied troops of the five socialist countries into Czechoslovakia was an act of international solidarity, meeting both the common interests of the Czechoslovakian working people and the interests of the international working class, the socialist community and the movement. This internationalist act saved the lives of thousands of men, insured internal and external conditions for peaceful and tranquil labor, strengthened the Western borders of the socialist camp, and blasted the hopes of the imperialist circles for a revision of the results of the Second World War."

We can ignore Brezhnev's reasoning. What we should not overlook is that at the 24th Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, several years after the fact, Brezhnev felt that he had to bring up the question of Czechoslovakia, which leads one to believe that all of the rationalizations have not quieted all of the internal criticism.

The second fascinating topic Brezhnev touches on is the relationship between the Soviet Union and the Peoples' Republic of China.

In regard to China, Brezhnev's domestic political instincts are better than his historical perspective. At a time when the failure of Russian agriculture requires the importation of American wheat, it is good to have an alternative demon against whom domestic frustrations can be released. Ignoring the fact that China and The Soviet Union have had border difficulties for several hundred years, Brezhnev points out, to the amusement of many of us who have followed Sino-Soviet relationships from the Comintern to the present day,

". . . it is common knowledge that our country rendered the Chinese Communists substantial aid in their struggle against the Japanese aggressors and the Chinese bourgeois."

Mao Tse-Tung would never agree. The Soviet trained leaders were constantly in opposition to him as they tried to apply urban Marxist solutions to agrarian Chinese problems.

Brezhnev goes on to say,

". . . the part played in the history of the Peoples' democratic revolution in China by the Soviet armies defeating the Japanese forces occupying China, is also common knowledge."

The target audience for this speech is not identified so we do not learn exactly for whom this historical fabrication is "common knowledge." It is obviously neither a Chinese nor an American audience, both of whom may be presumed to have a different picture of Russia's role in the Far Eastern aspects of World War II. It does raise interesting questions as to what Russians and other Eastern Europeans are being taught about The Great Patriotic War, as the Russians call it.

After describing the honeymoon period in Sino-Soviet relations when the USSR assisted the Chinese in their industrial development, Brezhnev comes to the present deterioration of the relationship, states the Russian position and places the blame:

. . . we want to see China a flourishing socialist power, and to work shoulder to shoulder with her for peace, against imperialism. But when this will come about depends on China herself. Nothing, of course, will make us depart from our principled Marxist-Leninist line, from our firm defense of the state interests of the Soviet people and the inviolability of Soviet territory, from our determined struggle against the devisive activities of the P(eoples') R(epublic) C(hina) leadership in the socialist world and the liberation movement."

Political speeches don't make fascinating reading. These are no exception. They do give us an opportunity to see what Russia's number one man says for home consumption when justifying Russian foreign policy. He isn't constrained by Marxist, internationalist ideological purity. He does what any capitalist, nationalist politician would do. He uses any technique necessary to rationalize and justify his interpretation of the Russian national interest.

Detente In Siberia — A Century Before The Bearhug

THE COWBOY AND THE COSSACK by Clair Huffaker; Trident Press, 352 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by John D. Yates.

Leonid I. Brezhnev had not been in Washington an hour before he had held Nixon's hand, grasped the 150-pound President in a bear-like hug, clutched the already cringing Chief Executive by the elbow a couple of times, and then whispered something intimate in Richard's ear — and all before the TV cameras.

Brezhnev was probably sober at that time of the morning, and it is altogether probable that Nixon had not taken a nip either, so it was conceivable that a few palms began to sweat in the office of the Chief of Protocol upon viewing this display of Russian affection (or possibly affectation). What might happen at the end of the formal visit? After toasts in vodka, California champagne, White House Bourbon and Scotch, the emotional farewells could really get out of hand. Would the Russian leader do a very Russian thing and kiss Richard Nixon on the lips?

It was possible, and a back-up plan must have been devised in that eventuality: Should Nixon respond with enthusiasm and treat the viewing world to a tableau of the leaders of the two most powerful countries in the world locked in an emotional embrace, or should Nixon do a Puritan pull-back and risk a sort of violent rejection? What really happened was that restraint won out, and we were not treated to an emotional Russian farewell.

CLAIR HUFFAKER

But the very existence of a U.S.-Soviet detente (and the emergence of a latter-day Entente Cordiale) is a flip-flop of extraordinary proportions. A few years ago Richard Nixon was being very rude to Russians, and bragging with the minimum of taste about the superiority of American kitchens over Russian kitchens. The fellow who had the misfortune to have to listen to all that puerile nonsense responded that he would like to "bury" the United States. So the hate period produced an arms race that may be impossible to turn off completely, even in these more enlightened days. And that arms race mortally wounded both the super powers from an economic standpoint. Because it is a matter of survival they have made up —at least temporarily. Thus Brezhnev's tremendous show of affection for Nixon.

In this era of Detente, Clair Huffaker's book about cowboys and Cossacks will probably be a favorite on both sides of the now porous Iron Curtain. A Russian translation of the book has already been completed, and publication in the Soviet Union will follow shortly. The story is about two of the world's toughest breed of men, alike in so many ways including their ability to survive the cruelest climates; significant differences were divergent tongues and weapons — for one the six-shooter, for the other a saber.

Illustrated with line drawings by Brad Holland, the story begins simply enough on a cold spring day in 1880, when 15 American cowboys sail into Vladivostock with a herd of 500 cattle for delivery to a famine-stricken town deep in Siberia. Assigned to work with them is a band of Cossacks.

From the first day, distrust and rivalry between Americans and Russians disrupt the cattle drive. Only the inspired leadership of Shad and Rostove — cowboy foreman and Cossack captain — plus the rich vein of humor native to both sides, prevent nationalism and personal pride from tearing the group apart. Hardships along the trail — flash floods, attacks by wolves and tigers, outbreaks of civil war and a climactic battle with a Tartar army — bring the two groups of men together in trust and mutual respect that knows no national or racial barriers.

It is all offered as further proof that it is only politicians who wreck our international relationships, and if it was left to men of common interests and motivations there would be no suspicions or contrived barriers.

Clair Huffaker is the author of 10 Western novels, and 200 short stories. After travels across the length and breadth of Russia via the Trans-Siberian Railroad, he produced this superb story in its unique setting. The author hopes it "will be a kind of emotional and spiritual bridge between the Russian and American peoples. . ."

BROWSING BOOKMAN

What is almost a foreign language in itself has developed around the new computer technology.

To help you through the maze, Norman and Eileen Sondak have compiled "The Layman's Dictionary of Computer Terminology," published by Hawthorn at $10.95.

If you have encountered and been baffled by such wordage as "delimiter," "integer programming," "truncation error" and "entropy," the Sondaks (he is the head of the Computer Science Department at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Worcester, Mass., and she shares his work) will clear up your questions.

The book, however, seems somewhat overpriced, even in these inflationary days, for a relatively thin reference work.

THERE WAS a time when comedian Dick Gregory weighed a flabby 280 pounds. Today, he's lean as any athlete. And he gives the credit to his fruitarian diet.

He discusses that diet in his "Dick Gregory's Natural Diet for Folks Who Eat: Cookin' with Mother Nature" (Harper & Row, $6.95). With help from his teacher Dr. Alvenia Fulton, Gregory extolls the virtues of apples, pears, peaches, plums, oranges and all the other good things grown on trees. He discusses, too, his propensity for and experiences at fasting. And he puts the blast on the Soul Food traditionally favored by his race. "I personally would say that the quickest way to wipe out a group of people is to put them on a soul food diet." he declares.

Gregory is witty, as one would expect, and quite evidently sincere in his dietary beliefs. But it goes without saying that not everyone is prepared to foreswear the eating not only of meats, but of many other foods as well. The Gregory willpower should impress you, even if his logic does not.

CATS ARE unquestionably among the most photogenic of God's creatures, and thus the 160 color photos by Creszentia Anna Allen of felines of all kinds, ages and sizes steal the show in "Cats 'n Kittens," published by Arco at $5.95 hardboard, $7.95 library edition. But Ted Allen has contributed a text that covers the history of the cats, advice on choosing and caring for a cat, and the special characteristics of the various breeds. A delight for the cat enthusiast.

The Non-Answer To Crime Problem

THE NEW RED BARN: A Critical Look at the Modern American Prison, by William G. Nagel; Walker, 284 pages, $12.50 clothbound, $5.95 paperback. Reviewed by Albert F. Nussbaum.

Prison is a place where you write a letter once in a while; receive a letter once in a while, if you are lucky; and the years pass. Your wife remarries, your parents die, and your kids grow up calling someone else Dad. Friends and relatives "forget" to send you their new addresses when they move, and you get the feeling the bars were installed to shut people out as much as to keep you in.

So you lose yourself in work and books and hobbies; but there are times when you sit in the crowded messhall, or stand in the center of the exercise yard with hundreds of men around you, and you are so overcome with loneliness and frustration that you want to scream.

The four most often stated reasons for the existence of prisons are: (1) to rehabilitate convicted persons; (2) to punish offenders; (3) to provide a place for preventive detention; and (4) to deter people from committing crimes. Just how well prisons perform some of these functions, and how miserably they fail at others, is the subject of "The New Red Barn."

William Nagel visited over 100 of America's "correctional" institutions in 26 states, gathering the material for this well-written and perceptive view of prison. It is probably as honest and accurate an evaluation as any that has been written; and he carries it the next logical step — he suggests changes and improvements and alternatives.

The reader learns that no one — neither prisoners, nor guards, nor society — is made better by prisons. Prisons are lawless places where all that is most valuable to a man — love, loyalty, manly pride — waste away. Like an oil painting or a poem, a prison cell is shaped as much by what is left out as by what it contains. Reform isn't only big projects like prison hospitals and educational centers.

At its most basic, reform is recognizing the fact that prisoners are human and have human needs.

THE REVIEWER: WHO HE IS

Albert Nussbaum, the reviewer of this and other books for the Independent-Journal Marin Living, is a free-lance writer serving a 40-year sentence at the U.S. Penitentiary in Marion, Ill., for multiple bank robberies. His articles and short stories have appeared in a wide range of periodicals, from The American Scholar to Alfred Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine.

Whatever question crime may pose, "The New Red Barn" does a fine job of proving that prison isn't the answer.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

CRIME BY CHANCE by Elizabeth Linington; Lippincott, 273 pages, $5.95.

DON'T WEAR YOUR WEDDING RING by Lillian O'Donnell; Putnam, 222 pages, $4.95.

It was a mistake for this fan of Elizabeth Linington's police procedural novels to follow her latest Ivor Maddox yarn with a reading of Lillian O'Donnell's "Don't Wear Your Wedding Ring." However reluctantly, we must admit that Mrs. O'Donnell outpoints the more experienced Miss Linington rather decisively.

"Don't Wear Your Wedding Ring" has been written loosely around a newsbreak of some time back when police cracked a prostitution ring in which bored young upper middleclass housewives were selling their bodies. The scene is New York City, and Detective Norah Mulcahaney is the central figure among the team of investigators, facing all the special problems of a woman working in a man's field, along with the normal difficulties of the big city police officer. Mrs. O'Donnell makes Detective Mulcahaney and her colleagues interesting and believable, and only at the very end does her well blueprinted plot become a mite frayed.

In "Crime By Chance," on the other hand, Maddox, his police woman wife Sue and the other personnel at Wilcox Street Police Station are more diffused in their interests and activities, although a chief concern is the location of a young mother who has vanished with her baby. It seems to us that Maddox et al are a bit below par in this one, but then, again, that might be the result of the comparison with Mrs. O'Donnell's excellent book.

Anyway, both novels are well worth your reading time.

THE CASTLE OF THE DEMON by Patrick Ruell; Hawthorn, 184 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The contemporary Gothic novel is generally the work of a woman author, but here Patrick Ruell, born and reared at the Scottish border, proves a male can handle the genre better than adequately.

The scene is the Scottish coast to which Emily Salter has come, fleeing her wealthy but unfeeling husband. There she finds both danger and romance, in the best tradition of Gothic fiction. And there she faces a final deadly confrontation with her terrorizers.

One of the better characters in the novel is a dog. But it is the Scottish setting and secondary characters that will please the reader most. It's a pleasant little chiller that gets just a bit farfetched in its conclusion.

MUCH OF THE enjoyment of touring rural England comes in the opportunities it affords the American to meet and get to know the English people —such as this fresh-faced, bright-eyed young Briton with a bouquet of flowers picked for "mom" in hand.

English Countryside Still A Bargain

By GEORGE BARKER

It is still possible to spend three weeks in Europe and not be reduced to begging on your return to Marin.

We drove a little, red Hillman Estate about the English countryside, stayed at country hotels and ate very well at prices which compare favorably with those in the U.S. — even with the twice devalued dollar.

We took Pan American's non-stop flight from San Francisco to London, which is very reasonable (about $400 round trip) and takes about 12 hours.

We received our first lesson in money in the jet age as soon as we cleared customs in London. Although we had had extensive correspondence with Avis about the car and had arranged for it to be ready for us at Heathrow Airport, we hadn't reckoned on paying almost $500 deposit. Avis assumed we'd carry at least one credit card. All we had was our Chevron card, and that wouldn't do. We paid.

Next time, we take a bank credit card.

AFTER GETTING lost somewhere around the town of Leatherhead and wandering about for an hour or so, receiving conflicting directions from an assortment of village idiots, we finally hit the road to Tonbridge Wells where we had reservations at the Spa Hotel.

English country hotels have a distinctive Victorian flavor. Most are old and many are simply old homes remodeled.

For example, in Lyme Regis in Dorsetshire, the High Cliff Hotel was once the home of Dr. Joseph Lister, the father of antiseptic surgery. While in adjacent Uplyme the Devon Hotel had been a monastery. The Spa was obviously built as a hotel in England's greater days — thick stone walls like a fortress and a park with huge trees and gardens in back.

ALL THE HOTELS we saw were clean and comfortable. The best were managed by a family, where all the members pitched in to help make the guests feel comfortable.

We stayed at two motels — a relatively new phenomena in England. They were as up-to-date as any anywhere, but they were still distinctly English. One of them, the Mendip Motel outside Frome in Somerset, has a lovely setting amid large trees full of singing birds and with a view across the green pastures and gently rolling hills.

The meals at the country hotels were surprisingly good and very reasonable, with dinners averaging about $3 each. I say "surprisingly good" because the English are not noted for being great chefs. However, this trip we had only one bad eal and that was where the kitchen staff was absent, leaving the manager to struggle with the cooking.

WE HAD MUCH good meat, a variety of vegetables and a choice of good desserts, ranging from rich, mouth-watering cakes to fresh strawberries with thick country cream. The rough, garlicky Dorset pate was delicious and the Devon and Cornish clotted cream teas with strawberry jam and scones were beyond belief.

These are good places to forget the cholesterol and diet of home.

A room with twin beds and bath cost us on average about $25 for the two of us, including value added tax, service charge and huge, many-coursed breakfasts which offered everything from fruit juices, prunes, cereals, toast and marmalade to smoked haddock, sausage, ham, bacon and any style eggs.

ALL THE COUNTRY hotel rooms were cavernous. They contained beds with soft, down-filled mattresses over which were layers of good quality sheets, thick blankets topped by a two inch thick down comforter. The English don't go to bed — they return to the womb.

With all this bedding, it's impossible not to be warm. Sometimes they augment this with a hot water bottle. Too hot for my taste. I put aside the down comfort.

Most country hotels have only a few rooms with private baths. However, this May we only had to share the communal bathroom once and it was clean and no ordeal.

May and September are the best months to visit England, in my opinion. The weather is usually not too bad, the flowers are pretty and abundant, and one avoids the droves of English "trippers" who hit the road on Bank Holiday weekends.

WE SPENT MOST of our three weeks in various little coastal villages in Dorset, Devon and Cornwall — Lyme Regis, West Looe, Mousehold and St. Ives. Then we took a motorway to north of Birmingham to Stoke-on-Trent, where we visited Wedgewood, Royal Doulton, Spode and some of the other china potteries. We returned to Kent through the Cotswold country and turned the car into Avis at Canterbury.

We returned to London by train and took a taxi from Victoria Station to the Pan Am depot nearby, and back to Heathrow Airport.

It was not a trip for nightclubbers or culture-vultures. If big cities are your passion, this may bore you.

But for those interested in flowers and hedgerows, birdsong, and the sight of cattle and sheep grazing peacefully, quaint villages and narrow roads, fresh air and a chance to become acquainted with some rural English and their way of life, this trip is hard to beat. And it's economical.

For The Balinese, Cremation Is A Happy Occasion

By MURRAY J. BROWN

DENPASAR, Bali (UPI) — "If you are lucky you may also observe a cremation . . ."

That's what it said on page 212 of my guidebook on Bali.

I shuddered — I had seen the pictures of public cremations in other Asian countries and that kind of luck I didn't want.

But when I quoted the guidebook to our Balinese guide, he smiled and said, "yes, perhaps we will be lucky — it is a very joyous ceremony."

I DIDN'T GET to see a cremation ceremony during our four-day visit to this fabled island in Indonesia.

But the Balinese, who practice a unique religion called Bali-Hindu based on Hinduism, Buddhism and island worship, have no fear of death, I was told. They believe in reincarnation and regard death as passing from this life to a far better one.

It is a most joyous time, colorful . . . with the body covered by a large paper, a beautifully decorated horse, cow or fish," an islander said. "Then they are consumed by flames and taken in ashes in a long procession to the sea, to be scattered on the waters."

USUALLY, THE funeral procession is led by a gamelan orchestra which includes flutes, bamboo instruments, cymbals and urn-shaped gongs struck with small hammers. Women, dressed in their best finery, bear baskets and trays of offerings for the gods while the men carrying the body shout and zig-zag sharply to confound the evil spirits.

Incidentially, our guide recalled his grandfather as saying Balinese families should have five children. "Four to carry the body and the fifth to carry the shade umbrella."

Deeply religious, the Balinese believe in good and evil spirits. Every family has its own temple where offerings of rice and flowers are made to the gods every day. In addition, each village has a large temple and shrines stand in the fields and along the roads. All in all, we were told, there are about 20,000 temples and shrines on Bali.

TO KEEP OUT evil spirits, a wall is erected a few feet inside the main entrance to a family compound or home. Persons entering must make sharp left or right turns. According to the Balinese belief, evil spirits cannot enter because they move only in a straight path.

Many Balinese outside the major cities still live in family compounds, usually consisting of a number of buildings and an open space or garden, enclosed by a high thick wall. Each building serves a different purpose — for instance, one may be the kitchen, another the sleeping quarters and still another the workshop.

Bali has many attractions, even for the experienced traveler.

THERE ARE numerous interesting villages only a short distance from this capital city and the Bali beach hotels — Mas, which is noted for its wood carvings, and Ubud, a center of Balinese painting, with a large colony of artists, among others.

Just driving through the lush countryside pays extra dividends: doll-like children perched on the rumps of plodding oxen, graceful women in colorful sarongs balancing burdens on their heads or hips, and peasants in shorts and cone-shaped hats stooping in the flooded rice fields or working the terraced farmlands rising like steps carved out of hillsides by giants.

Then there are the golden sand beaches, fringed with palm trees — like something out of Gauguin — where only the gentle swish of the sea breaks the early morning and late evening silence. And there are the jungles made noisy by the chatter of monkeys and the cries of strange exotic birds, and the breathtaking scenic beauty of mirror-like lakes and thickly forested montains.

STRIKING — TO this visitor at least — was the happiness of the young and old and their friendliness toward the stranger. "Selamat Datang" (welcome) was the first word I heard when I boarded a Garuda Indonesian airliner in Singapore for the flight here.

And the smile on the face of the very attractive stewardess made me feel she meant it. The feeling was reinforced by other Indonesians I came in contact with during my stay.

I visited Bali with a group of 15 U.S. travel writers as guests of the Indonesian Tourists Promotion Board, Garuda, Pan American World Airways and American Express. It was the last stop on a 15-day, three-nation tour in the Far East.

The international airport outside Denpasar is serviced by a number of international airlines in addition to Garuda. Pan Am has a direct flight from Hong Kong, for instance, which continues on to Sydney. Passengers departing on international flights pay a 600 rupiahs (about $1.75) departure tax.

There are shops in the modern terminal for any last-minute purchases.

While In South America Try To Think Small

By CECILIA BROWN

"But aren't you afraid?"

This is the question I always get when I own up to a penchant for the small places in South America.

Not that the capitals and cities of industry aren't grand, glorious and impressive — for they are. But like many city folks, I enjoy getting removed from the bustle — which is easy to do in South America, for much of that vast continent is rural.

"Don't you find those little places terribly primitive?" is the other question.

Well, I find them naive, maybe — in that computerized sophistication has not yet replaced the genuinely outgoing friendliness of the country family.

MY FIRST experience with out-of-the-way places occured in Colombia, when I went to watch a local folk festival in the hope of getting the feel of some part of the country outside of Bogota. It was in Ibaque, a pretty valley town, and because it was relatively small I supposed I might be the only tourist. Which is to say, I did not take the precaution of assuring myself of a place to sleep.

And of course I was wrong; seemingly hundreds of Colombians had come from other communities to watch the dancing and the musical competitions.

But something happened that I've since found is rather typical. The lone hotelier, of whom I'd inquired for rooms, mentioned my plight to one or two of the townspeople . . . and as a result I was, before the evening's end, entertained by a group for cocktails; gathered into er group for a stand-up picnic of the many festival foods; invited to a beautiful party in an elegant mansion given for the festival's dignitaries; and — unbelievably — given a bedroom in a luxurious apartment belonging to the local furniture merchant.

AN ISOLATED instance, you say?

Only a few months later, in a village deep in the Macarena jungles of Colombia where I had been photographing, the plane that was supposed to pick me up was delayed a day. And unhesitatingly the family in the house nearest the airstrip made me welcome — in the place of honor, a sleeping hammock in the living room.

In Brazil, Rio is stupendously impressive — but the little mountain town of Petropolis captured my heart. Not only for the scenery, although that in itself is delightful, as the place is nestled into green hills and bisected by a little river that runs along the main street, but because one wanders through quiet lanes and inevitably somebody stops to chat.

Two days in Petropolis, and you know all the people.

LANGUAGE barrier! Not really; some 500 words of Spanish and a dictionary of the Portuguese they use in Brazil, covered the situation very nicely.

I've always loved all of Ecuador, but the northern town of Otavalo became an instant favorite. The Indians for which the town is named, who are as clean as a deodorant ad, are picturesque in their white jump suits with blue ponchos — but they are also pleasurable to get acquainted with.

The Otavalans are inordinately proud of the tapestries they weave, and nearly go into ecstasies when a visitor wants to learn the technique; and the small colony of Ecuadorians and the sprinkling of Americans (mostly missionaries) make an interesting and open-hearted population mixture.

MOST ALL the cities in Uruguay are small, as befits this tiny country, but the community of Maldonado — east of Montevideo, on the way to Punta del Este — is a pleasant village with an overlay of Spanish Colonial ruins. Punta del Este itself is no bigger than a suburb — a place that seems all beach.

(And what beaches! Broad, lined with excellent restaurants — that's where I discovered pickled pigeon — and full of beaming families who come laden with umbrellas, chairs and hampers of pungent goodies.)

No, the little towns don't all fade into just one long South American glow; a close acquaintance shows each one to be different.

THE JUNGLE wonders of Belem and Manaus, in Brazil are soul-seizing — and upriver, there's Peru's port on the Upper Amazon, Iquitos. The communities in Paraguay's Gran Chaco (a sort of Great Swamp) are peopled with hunters and craftsmen, who have an unbridled curiosity about the visitor — enough so as to overcome their natural shyness.

In Argentina's Patagonia area, the lake towns of Chile, the lofty mountain villages of Bolivia, the seaside villages in Venezuela, Surinam and Panama — the story is the same. Intimate surroundings, friendly people, and a special sort of appreciation for the quality of rural life — its butterflies, wild orchids, brilliant lupin, fields of wildflowers, scattered lakes, stern Andean mountains and varied seashore.

Seeing France By Slow Boat

Cheval-Voyage, the French men who launches horse-drawn wagons to explore secluded by-ways in Quercy and Brittany at four miles per hour, thought perhaps travelers might like the same pace on France's little-known canals and waterways.

New Nautic-Voyage (located at 8, Rue de Milan, Paris 9) has cabin-cruisers and houseboats for individual rental to launch vacations afloat.

Cabin-cruisers accommodating four to six people leave the Camargue's Port Cassafiere with its access to two different Midi canals. One cruise route threads Aquitaine, the Pyrenees and Cevennes while the alternate plies the wilder Camargue. Handling the helm is easy, no license is necessary, and a quick repair service is always on call. Cabin-cruisers for four range from $120-$300 per week depending upon the season.

For those who prefer the canals of Burgundy, houseboats comfortably sleeping four start from the picturesque town of Verdun-sur-le-Doubs for a weeks' cruise, beginning any Saturday or Sunday. Reservations for both must be made 30 days in advance.

To Recharge Those Batteries, Hike

There are few leisure time activities more personally rewarding than a good hike through the wilderness. And it doesn't matter whether that "wilderness" is a bonafide stretch of wild country or a nearby forest patch.

One can hike by himself or with others.

ONE OF THE BASICS of the sport of hiking is the well-equipped knapsack, carrying such essentials as extra socks, a first aid kit and soap. For the outdoorsman who properly plans his stroll through the wilderness, the pleasures that reward him can be found in few other leisure-time pursuits.

He can move at his own pace, and range wherever he likes, usually limited only by his desire and stamina. And in today's pressure cooker world, a leisurely hike among the glories of nature can do much to "recharge one's batteries."

There are certain routine rules of the hike that the hiker should observe if he wants to get the most out of his efforts. They're simple, but they deserve mention because they often go unheeded.

1. An absolute must: Always wear footwear designed for outdoor use. Particularly good for this purpose are boots which give ankles that much needed support.

2. On longer hikes, carry along an extra pair of socks. Any former G.I. can tell you about the lift a cool, clean pair of socks will give tired feet on a long trek.

3. Know in advance the area you will be tramping through and dress accordingly. If your hike takes you through rugged underbrush, for example, it's only prudent to make sure your skin is protected by enough clothing. If in doubt about the terrain, it's always easier to overdress and strip down as needed, than to be dressed inadequately and pay the uncomfortable price of scratches and abrasions.

4. Make sure you're in good physical shape before trying the season's first extended hike. Never push yourself beyond your limits. Fatigue breeds carelessness. An accident at the worst, or sore muscles at best, are often the results.

5. Short trip or long, never venture out without a fully equipped first aid kit. Any first aid manual will provide a checklist. Add a bar of antibacterial soap.

Mother Nature will provide many hours of pleasure and fulfillment for the well-prepared hiker. But she will play havoc with those who fail to show a healthy respect for her world.

As Summer Fades, There Are Must Jobs In Garden

By MILLICENT TAYLOR
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

This is do-it-yourself time of year in the garden — a time of upkeep while enjoying it.

If the days are warm, do a little each day, in early morning or in the cool of the evening.

For example, give the lawn a real lift by inviting it to partake of a breakfast or supper. It will perk right up with that late summer feeding. This, along with deep watering, should help it to cope with any long hot spells without getting brown.

HAVE YOU A vigorous crop of weeds — especially plantain and crabgrass? If so, you can give your grasses a better chance if you spread a turf food that contains a weed killer.

And be sure to water the lawn thoroughly after applying the plant food. This will remove it from the leaves and send it down into the soil where it can go to work.

Since you have been watering heavily nutrients may have leached out of the soil in both lawn and garden. In any case, fairly frequent feedings will be welcomed by the flower border. You can scatter and work in lightly an all-purpose fertilizer, watering it in; or you can do leaf feeding with a water-soluble plant food.

Some gardeners do this every two weeks.

LEAFY VEGETABLES such as tomatoes, squash, and cucumbers respond well to foliar feeding, too. But others such as corn should receive their plant food in the soil. Along your rows of beans you can work in plant food as you cultivate.

Give each rose bush a couple of spoonfuls of rose food about every two weeks well into fall to keep them happy and strong.

As you walk about enjoying the garden, take along a basket and shears or clippers and snip off all spent blooms of annuals and perennials, including roses. This will prevent seed formation and encourage more bloom. It is especially important with hardy phlox, which seeds readily.

The volunteer seedlings that soon come up will fill next season's borders with magenta blooms instead of the color you planted.

HAVE YOUR pansies grown sprawly? Resolutely cut them back and give them plenty of organic plant food (they like dry manure). This will so cheer them they will start blooming again later on and be gay way into autumn.

Trimming the edges of flower beds and walks is a highly rewarding chore. A few minutes at a time can do wonders to improve the looks of the whole place. Hand shears can be used. There are also trimmers run by batteries and others that can be charged through the house electric outlets.

On the market is a spray can filled with a product that, if sprayed along the edge, kills growth. There are also rolls of metal guard to press down along the edge of the border to keep the grass roots from invading the flowerbeds, and there are long-handled tools for cutting the turf along walks.

SPRING-FLOWERING shrubs should have been trimmed back as soon after blooming as possible. Summer-flowering shrubs are trimmed in the fall.

It is important to remove every one of the spent trusses of rhododendron as soon as the flowers have faded; but be sure to do this without damaging the circle of buds just starting into growth at the base of the flower stem. This is the time to give rhodos and azaleas their first feeding too, of special azalea-rhodo-camellia acid plant food.

Privet and other hedges, if kept to a formal shape, should be trimmed a little each year. Leave them wider at the base to keep them from growing leggy.

Forsythia should not be grown as a formal hedge, as you sometimes see it. It may need trimming of non-blooming suckers and weak or dead wood underneath. Its natural shape is graceful and spready. It should be grown where it has room for its beautiful fountain shape.

OTHER SHRUBS attractive as informal mass plantings should also have weak or rampant growth removed. They bloom on new growth.

Fine-needled conifers like yews can be pruned any time, but the best is just after they have put out their new light-green growth. Trim off some of this if you need to shape them.

Long-needled conifers like pines, cedars, and spruces, can be restrained by trimming back the new center shoots.

Most vines need very little pruning. If, however, you have a wisteria, pruning each year is important. It can become rampant. Also, pruning will encourage more bloom.

IN SOUTHERN California, the practice is to prune most heavily at the end of the spring blooming season. But in many regions summer tipping of new growth will encourage flowering. In the fall, all new growth if cut back to spurs of two buds each will help the vine produce more flowers the following spring.

Honeysuckle, after blooming, should be headed back and thinned severely or it may get out of hand. Suckers that reach the ground are likely to root. Keep it pruned to shape and it will bloom better and be neat and bushy.

All the general-purpose garden books give extensive advice on feeding, watering, trimming, and pruning, and most also present a few pruning illustrations.

There are also special books on pruning — a subject most of us know less about. So if you feel the need of more pruning information and diagrams you might borrow or buy one.

A USEFUL volume that recently came my way is "The Pruning Handbook" by Roy L. Hudson. It is a sturdily bound magazine-size paperback, from Prentice-Hall, Englewood Cliffs, N.J., at $2.95.

Hudson is a past president of the California Horticultural Society and a retired director of Strybing Arboretum, Recreation and Park Department, San Francisco. The book is lavishly illustrated with diagrams, and deals extensively with pruning trees, shrubs, and vines, including handling each named variety separately.

It is as complete a treatment of the subject in compact form as I have seen, and should give any do-it-yourselfer quite a bit of know-how.

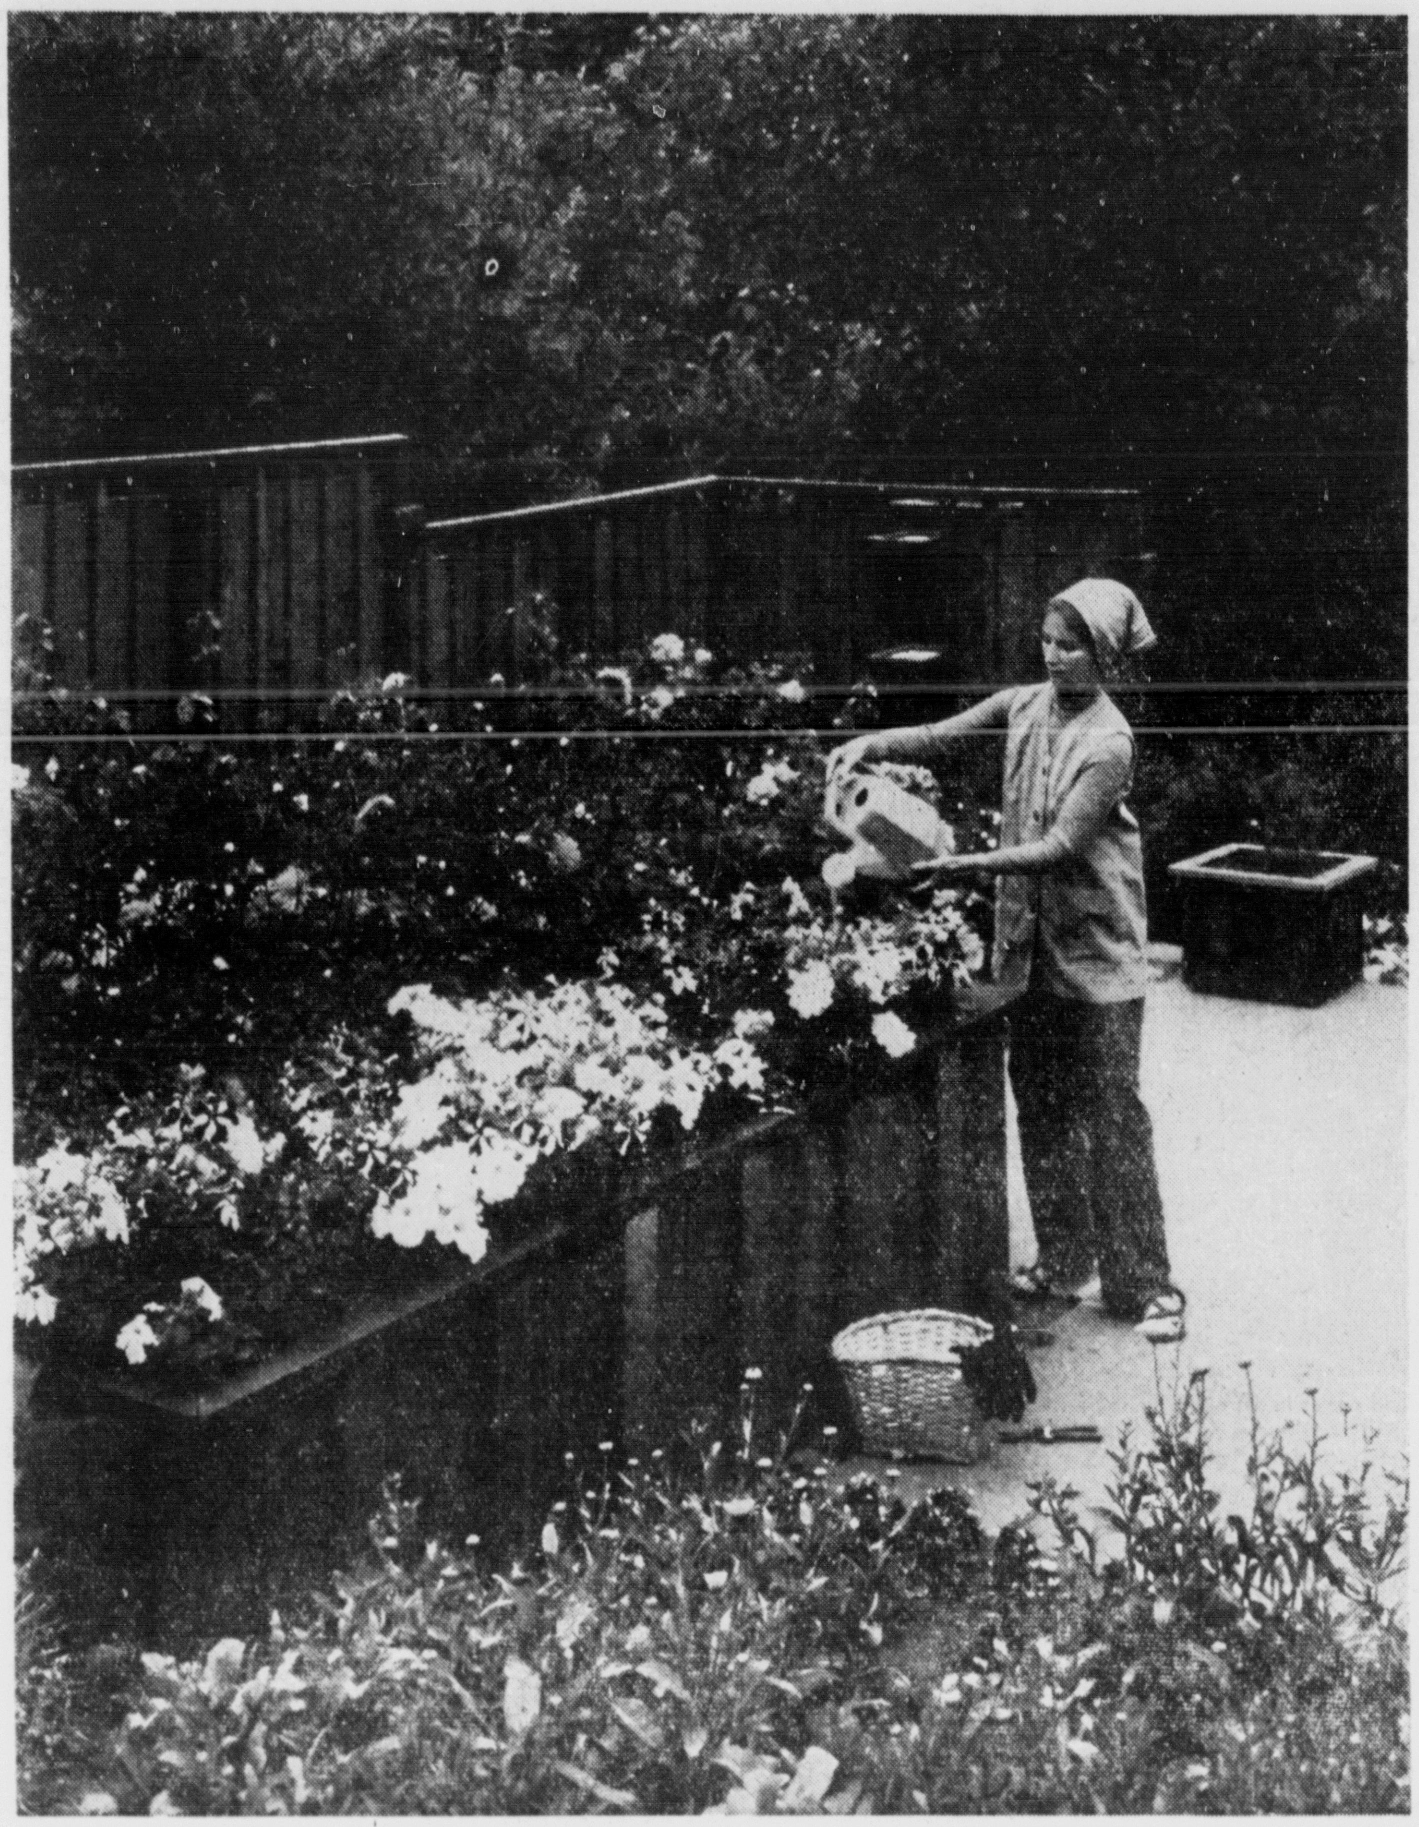
To Perk Up Patio, Planter



OVERFLOWING WITH annuals, this six-by-nine-foot planter is the focal point of a patio on a sloping lot. The box was built on-site from four-by-six rough-sawn western cedar, with two pieces flat and then one on edge in an alternation pattern. The flat cap of two-by-sixes has mitered corners.

The large patio or terrace calls for a bold accent, especially on a sloping lot that competes for attention with a valley panorama or a blue sweep of sky.

Color, form and texture all can be added to a patio with a big planter filled with flowers. For informal gardening on a large scale, the bolder the materials used the better.

One couple who built their home on a hill with a sweeping view added a raised deck on the side of the house facing the vista. But there was still the problem of the backyard, sloping downhill parallel to the back of the house, rather than away from it.

WITH THE HELP of a landscape architect, the sloping yard was opened up fully to utility and beauty, while blending with the wooded hillside at the back property line.

Several terraces, also oriented to the view, were added. The main one is set off by a six-by-nine foot planter box built of materials complementing the distinctive step-down screen fence at the back of the terrace.

The three-foot high box was built of four-by-six inch rough-sawn cedar, set together vertically rather than horizontally as usual. An alternating pattern was gained by placing two four-by-sixes flat, then one on edge.

THE WALLS OF four-by-sixes are held together by two horizontal stringers of two-by-fours around the inside of the box, and by the cap of flat two-by-sixes, with mitered corners, around the top of the box.

Stability also is provided by setting the planter into the ground, with a gravel base for drainage. The wood was preservative-treated, since it is exposed continuously to moisture.

Your plants can consist of one or a mixture of several of the many colorful summer-blooming annuals available in flower at the nurseries, including the always popular petunias or the attractive dwarf marigolds and zinnias.

The Inorganic Side Of The Argument About Fertilizers

By EARL ARONSON

Our expert today deals with organic farming and understanding how plants utilize nutrients in the soil.

The term "organic," according to Dr. Maurice L. Vitosh of Michigan State University, generally refers to growing crops with natural fertilizers (plant and animal materials) without the help of manufactured chemical fertilizers.

"IN COMPARING organic and inorganic materials, it is a fallacy to think plants considered organically grown are produced from organic nutrients," says Vitosh. "Before a plant can take up nutrients from organic material in the soil, the material must first be broken down and converted to inorganic nutrients. Therefore, the so-called organically produced food actually is inorganically grown."

This means that when a plant takes up a nutrient from the soil, it neither knows nor cares whether the nutrient was manufactured in a chemical fertilizer or grew naturally in plant or animal materials.

"Chemical fertilizers," Vitosh adds, "can provide a readily available source of nutrients where optimum conditions do not exist for organic materials in the soil to decompose or convert to nutrients."

IT IS A MATTER of economics whether to use chemical fertilizer, he says. Several tons per acre of organic fertilizer are needed to prevent nutrient deficiencies in many field crops.

Use organic fertilizer where it is available inexpensively, he advises gardeners.

Vitosh says the inorganic fertilizer, nitrogen, actually creates organic matter in soil. It helps plant growth, thus increasing the quality of organic plant residues returned to the soil as stalks, stems, leaves and roots.

And in his defense of inorganic fertilizers, Vitosh says there was no scientific evidence that food grown without them was more nutritional or better tasting.

A CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

The Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓For a colorful display in the fall and winter garden, plant such berry-producing shrubs as pyracantha, holly, toyon and cotoneaster now.

✓Now is the time to start thinking about winter vegetable crops. These can be planted now: cabbage, cauliflower, brussels sprouts, carrots, beets, turnips, onion sets and garden peas.

✓Take long stems when cutting roses. This renews the established bush. Feed roses if it has been a month since the last feeding. This will help promote a good fall bloom that will be the equal of your summer show.

✓Lantana provides quick color this month. Even in the coldest climes, more and more gardeners are using frost-tender lantana because it is a source of continual color for the summer garden. They treat it as an annual. Here where dipping temperatures aren't a consideration, we can rely on lantana for months and months of bright color in the permanent landscape.

✓Divide and replant crowded perennial plants.

✓For an instant lawn, consider the easy technique of "sodding."

HIDDEN ENTRANCES TO YOUR HOME?

A home anywhere in Marin County might have several hidden entrances and some very unwanted intruders. Termites!

Mud tubes like those shown above are built by subterranean termites to sneak into Marin's nicest homes. Termites invite themselves into both new and old homes. And contrary to popular belief, they love dining at homes built on concrete-slab floors (especially ones with radiant heat). In fact, 60% of all Marin homes have termites present right now.

Once inside, the termites eat their unsuspecting hosts out of house and home. Literally.

Termites eat wood. And since these extremely social insects live in giant nests with up to 250,000 relatives, having the family up to dinner can be a very expensive proposition.

The termite workers shuttle up and down constantly, carrying bits of wood back to the nest. But they are masters at keeping their activity hidden. They work inside of walls and floors, then span open spaces with mud tubes. So a considerable portion of your house can be out to lunch before you know it!

Every homeowner in Marin should check regularly for termite mud tubes around his foundation, post footings, garage, fences, and particularly in winter, the hot water heater and furnace areas. If tubes are found, call Hinkley & Gordon immediately.

Hinkley & Gordon is a state-licensed structural pest control company. For two generations, we've been providing Marin's most expert and thorough pest control services.

The cost of a Hinkley & Gordon inspection is just $35 for the average Marin home. And it certainly beats allowing a sneak attack on your home investment.

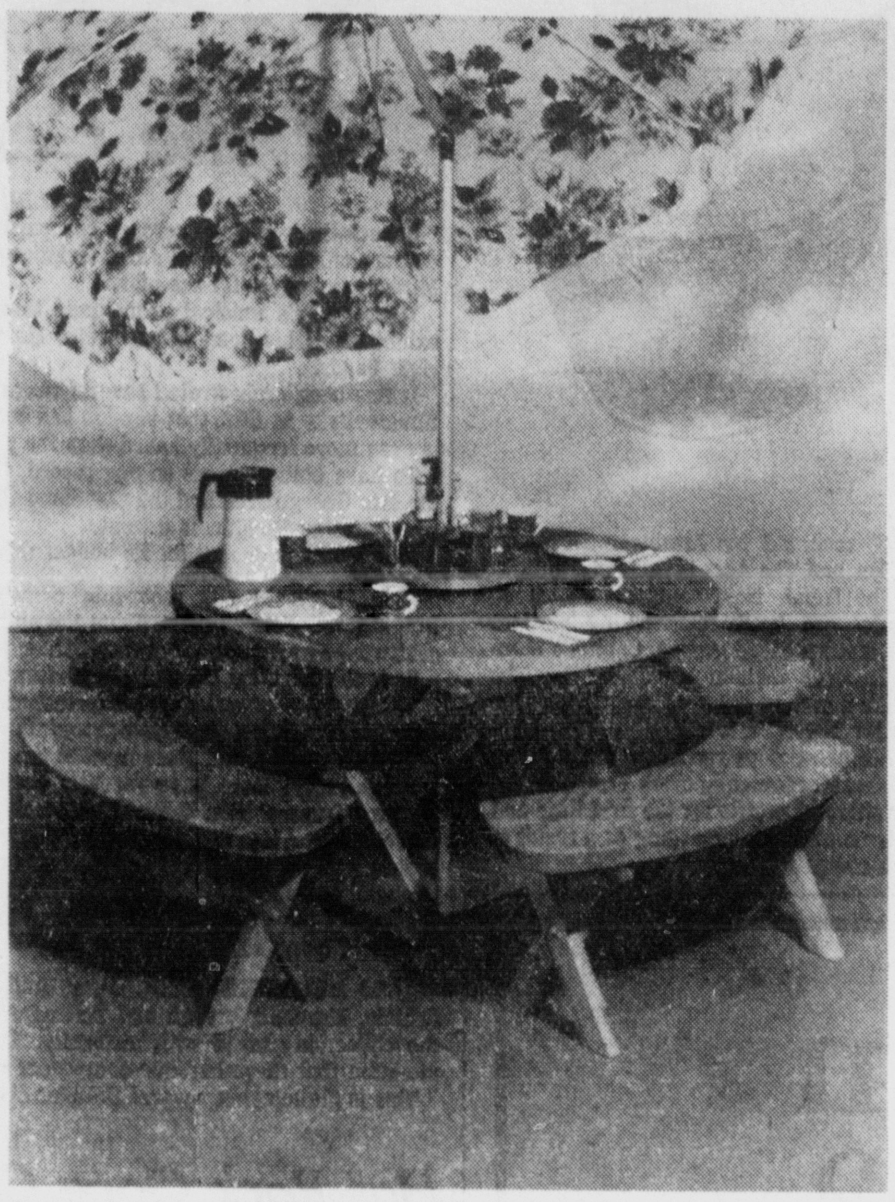
FOR THE GOOD OLD SUMMER-TIME



MARIN COUNTY is not unlike most places in that summer is the time when barbecues and patio parties reach their zenith. But here the season is much longer than less favored climes, and the outdoor living often continues late into the fall. To get the most enjoyment out of those open air meals, sturdy, comfortable outdoor furniture is a necessity. With the help of a Steve Ellingson pattern, dad can build the table and benches shown at right, and provide his flock with what soon will become their favorite dining area. To get started, send $1 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and include your zip code number. Ellingson estimates that a handyman can complete the project in about three evenings. The table top is more than four feet in diameter and will seat eight people — but it can be made bigger, if the family is larger. It is designed to support a colorful umbrella to give it a cheerful appearance plus invaluable shade for the diners. Wheels make it easy to move around. You just trace the full-size pattern parts onto wood, saw them out and assemble. Even the bolt and screw holes are located for you. Step-by-step illustrations accompany the directions. It the table and benches project whets your appetite for more do-it-yourself endeavors to improve the looks and utility of the backyard, Ellingson has some other attractive patterns. No. 342, at $1, is a patio cook-out gallery. And No. 162, also $1, is a concrete block barbecue. Somehow when dad, perhaps with some help from Junior, has constructed the furnishings and facilities, himself, the whole thing just seems to take on added fun. And father becomes the big man around the barbecue, as well he should.

Outdoor Lighting Can Add To Delight You Can Enjoy From Deck Or Patio

By ANDY LANG

No matter how functional a particular area of your house, it must have a pleasant appearance if you are to enjoy it to the fullest.

If you consider outdoor living space as an extension to your house, then it, too, should be pleasing to the eye as well as a practical place to relax or savor a barbecued meal.

A TOTALLY NEW environment for a patio or terrace can be created easily and inexpensively by utilizing the wide variety of special lights on the market. And you need no handyman talents to produce the effects that can make a world of difference in an area's feel and looks.

Lights make a patio more serviceable in the evening hours, as well as adding a festive and romantic air. Stringing them up is easy.

All that is needed are a few strategically placed hooks. In fact, the variety of lighting placements is limited only by the imagination. Lights can be strung in tiers, one level above the other. Or they can cross over each other back and forth across the entire patio space.

Another possible arrangment is outlining the perimeter of the terrace with the lights, thereby enhancing the feeling of being "on stage" that is so supportive of party efforts.

BE SURE TO USE genuine patio lighting that is technically fit for outdoor use. Albert Sadacca II, executive vice president of a leading manufacturer of decorative lights, points out that while outdoor lighting is specially designed to be safe under any weather conditions, the majority of lighting is suitable only for indoor use.

Patio lighting sets are characterized by a wide choice of styles. There are lanterns that suggest the Orient, modern motifs, simple globes, even Tiffany-style.

To make a sensible choice, look for a store that sells a full range of the best sets available rather than one with a limited inventory.

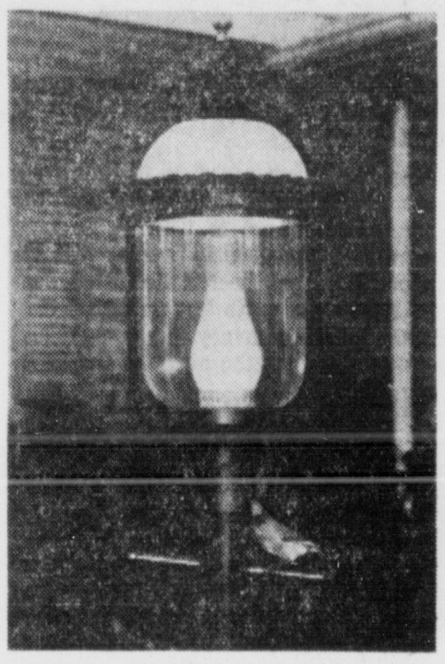
Don't forget the emotional impact of well-chosen colors. Lights sets are available in bright and cheery colors that bring a look of happiness to any terrace or patio.

THE PLACEMENT OF patio lighting can be further enhanced by the effective selection of other supportive elements. A sculpture reproduction, for example, can be instrumental in changing the ordinary to the extraordinary, especially when it is effectively illuminated.

The chances are your house already has at least one exterior electrical outlet. If it doesn't, have one installed.

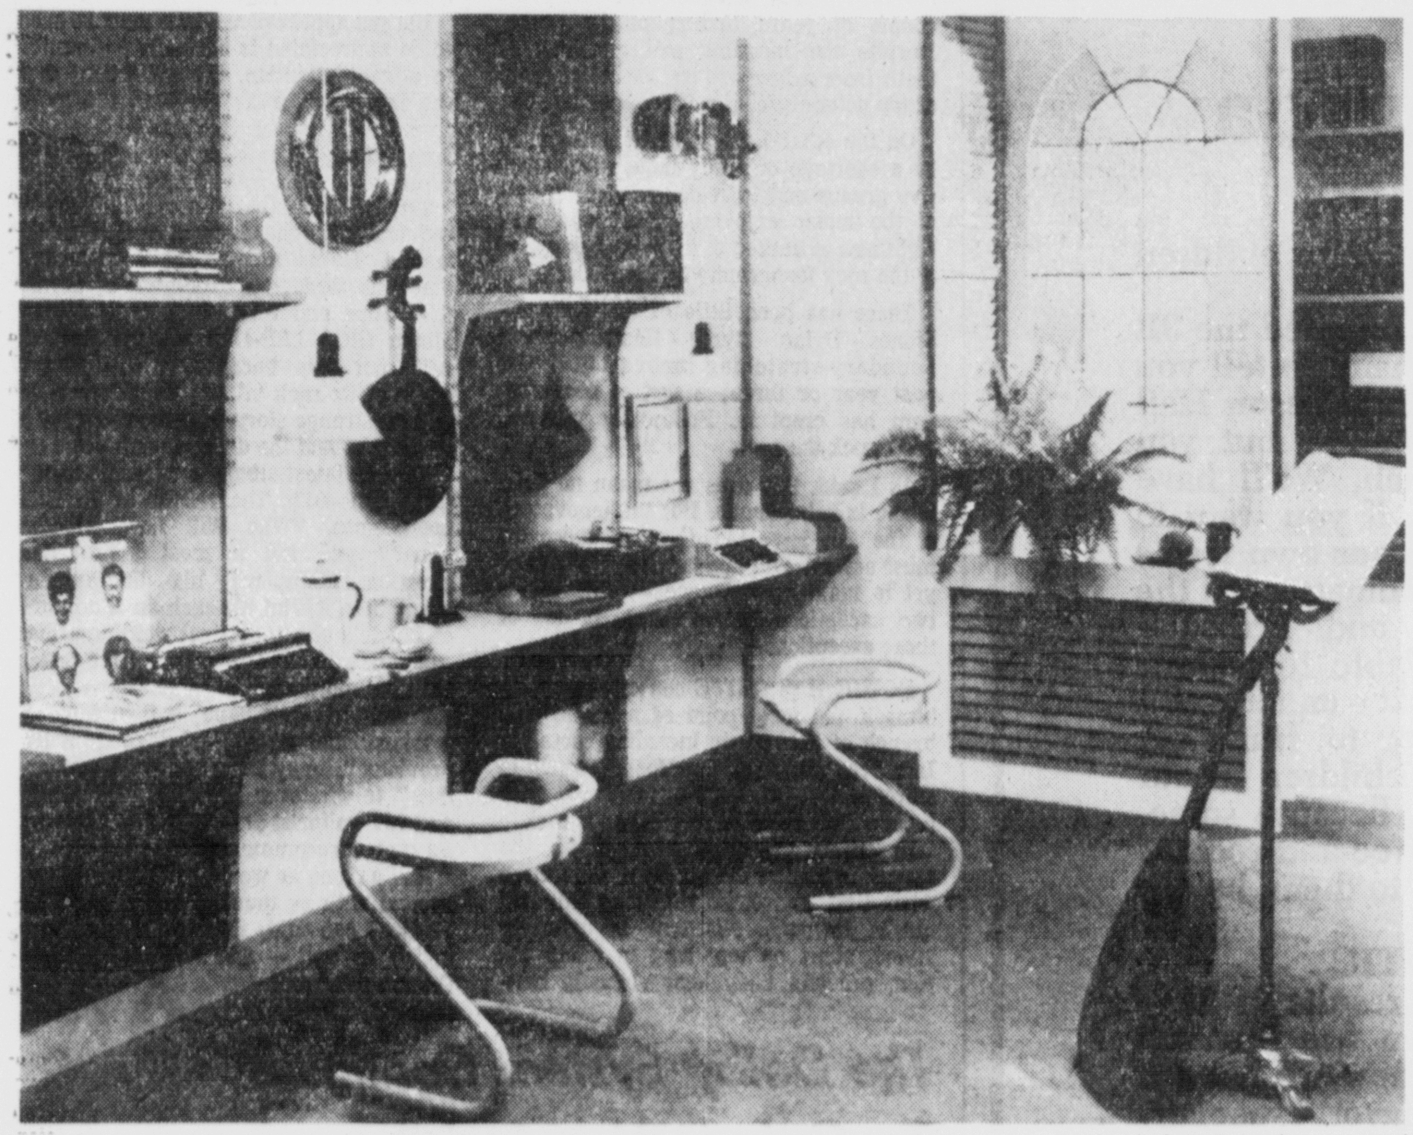
Better yet, have two or three put in, because the cost of the extra outlets is proportionally less than the price of the first one.

(If you fix things yourself, get a copy of Andy Lang's helpful handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to Andy Lang, at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J., 07666.



THERE'S A STYLE in outdoor lighting fixtures to fit your house and to suit the mood of your garden. This reproduction of a Philadelphia street light by Progress Lighting is perfect for the Tudor-type house. And the globe is shatter-resistant, as it should be for outdoor use.

THE HOMES PAGE



KEEP AWAY FROM THE clutter syndrome, was the instruction with which interior designer Emily Malino began the planning of this room for a budding young musician. She achieved an efficient work-sleep-play balance in the room for the youthful occupant, and softened the functional yet fresh appearance with some bright orange Acrilan carpeting.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: Goodbye Clutter

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Do you ever feel like doing a "household strip" — where you'd unload many of the things you've accumulated through the years? Sort of a superglorious garage sale?

Most of us experience this ennui with possessions, yet few of us learn anything from the constant annoyance of the demanding care which we must accord the clutter.

Given an empty space to start with, how many of us would truly keep furnishings on a spare functional level?

One interior designer recently had that challenge presented to her: to develop a no-nonsense room for a serious young musician. The major concerns for furnishings were to be a sleeping pad, a work-snack location, and lots of noncluttered space where other music buffs could gather.

THE DESIGNER, Emily Malino, settled for a wall system that could grow or reduce in size according to the needs of the teen-ager and the family. And she used color on the walls to define areas between shelves. The system, by Royal Cado, requires wall-mounted brackets.

By using this hardware on a corner-to-corner basis, she provided a great deal of versatility and adjustability.

The youngster owned a simple stereo system, with controls near is bed. But when more sophisticated components or speakers would be added, at a later date, no space crunch would be felt. The owners could merely add shelves to support the additional equipment.

To alleviate the somewhat spare quality of the room, Miss Malino chose a bright-orange Acrilan acrylic carpet fitted to the exact dimensions of the room. Instead of a busy shag texture, there's a trimmer, more functional look and feel to this Cordelia carpet by Bigelow.

NOT ONE PIECE of typical furniture (in the sense of function) appears in the room.

Work surfaces are merely elongated shelf arrangements. Work chairs are contemporary bent, tubular aluminum forms. An interesting window niche gets a dress-up with shutters rather than draperies or curtains.

When Junior Genius vacates the family premises for parts unknown, the room can be converted into a family workroom and part-time guest spot. And, just think — no unnecessary furnishings to unload or donate to the local thrift shop.

Try Lattice-Work Gazebo To Give The Yard A Lift

Why not a lattice-work gazebo, boldly painted in red, white and blue to give that humdrum backyard a zestful new appeal?

One couple has created just such a cooling summer haven in patriotic hues. This one dominates a small yard, but a gazebo becomes a happy accent in a garden of any size.

The structure can have four or more sides, and the frame-work is basically post and beam. Lattice work is half-by-two-inch cedar or other western wood, and can be applied in a horizontal-vertical pattern or crossed diagonally.

The lattice walls can extend from floor to roof on two or three sides, and be brought down only a couple of feet from the top on the front side to leave the remainder open.

The lattice should be stiffened by two-by-fours extending between the posts. Floor can be a wood deck or brick patio.

White is a favorite paint or stain, and a single color will be easier to renew with a spray gun. Doing posts and some sections in blue and red adds to the festive look, enough to make the extra work worth it.

From Closet, An Office? It's Possible

If closets weren't so scarce, one could make one into an office!

That's how important some people consider an office in the home. Even though a closet is small, it's better than none.

The homemaker's office can be a desk in a corner of the kitchen, for example. An office for the salesman or executive would require a bit more space, ideally in a basement, attic or bedroom, while a study spot for a student can be in his room or other area easily accessible.

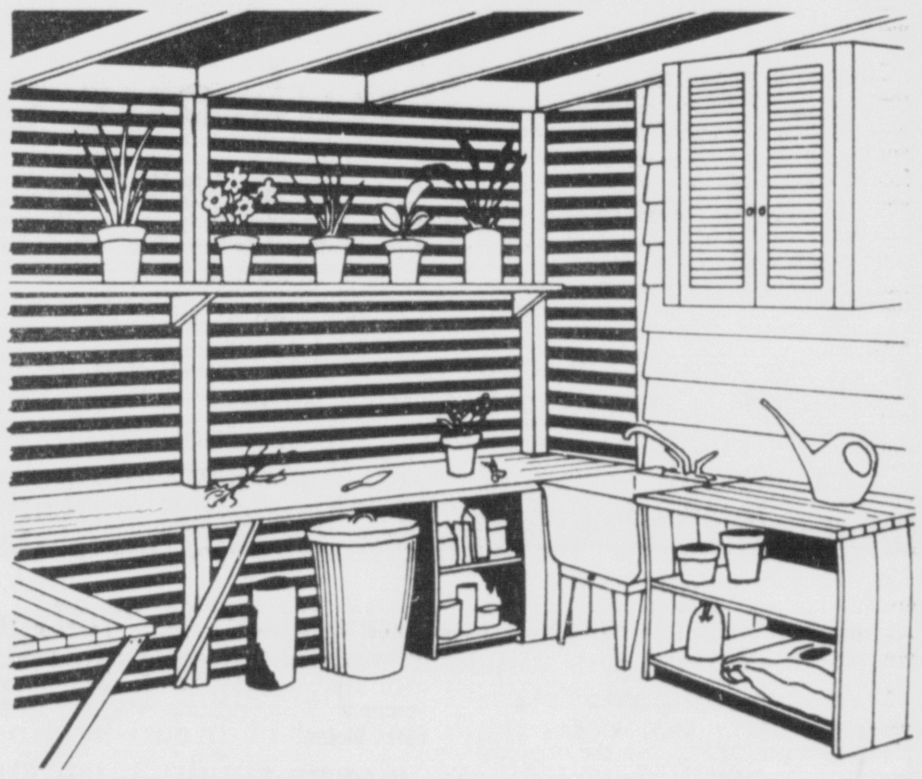
Prime ingredients for a home office were described by John Concord, home improvement consultant to Masonite Corporation.

Desk, filing space, shelves, adequate lighting, seating and ventilation are important, he said, but no more so than the immediate surroundings.

"An office or study place should be set apart from the rest of the room. There are two reasons for this: The appearance should be attractive and it should distinguish a quiet corner for concentration."

Concord suggest the areas be lined with a prefinished hardboard paneling. Various distinctive interior panels, in a variety of finishes, and even exterior sidings may be used.

To Keep A Gardener Dry In Winter



THIS GARDENING CENTER built onto the house, garage or in a breezeway, will provide you with a year-around outdoor work and storage area. A translucent roof over two-by-six-inch wooden joists adds light plus shelter for rainy days. Wood slat walls on four-by-four-inch posts permit the circulation of air. You don't need the shelter now. But now is the time to build it for later use.

Gardening, to those who attack it with a fervor, means having something growing all the time, and this calls for a comfortable work area available all seasons of the year.

Granted, even the most devout greenthumber won't linger out for long on frigid days, but even then a sheltered counter serves well for quick repotting of house plants.

A semi-enclosed structure allows the serious gardener to work late into the fall and be outside before the first blooms of spring.

ALMOST EVERY house has a wall, a jog or a garage where a leanto shelter can be added. A breezeway between house and detached garage is a natural area to enclose for garden work and storage.

Simple post and beam construction requires few tools and skills for erecting a garden workshop, and it needn't be large. Translucent plastic roofing admits extra light and one or two walls of horizontal wood slats allow free air circulation.

Posts of four-by-four-inch Douglas fir or western cedar can be set in the ground or on concrete footings. Parts of the posts that will be in and near the ground should be preservative-treated.

COUNTERS ARE built onto the posts, using slightly spaced two-by-fours for work surfaces. Flooring is wood decking of two-by-four-inch fir for easy cleaning, or stepping-stones in a bed of river gravel.

Storage is built in under the counters and a cabinet with lock may be mounted on the wall, for storing sprays and chemicals.

Locating the structure on a water line allows easy installation of a deep tub sink, invaluable to a serious gardener.

If the garden house is near the back door, it also can serve as a mud room where children can clean up before entering the house.

Now is the time to build—not when winter arrives.

HERE'S THE ANSWER TO YOUR QUESTION

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I recently bought a saber saw, the first one I have ever owned. I work mainly with plywood and must be doing something wrong, as every time I cut through it with the new saw, there is a slight chipping of the surface at the start of the cut. How can I avoid this?

A. — Two things can cause that problem — starting the cut after the saw blade is placed against the wood, and keeping the good side of the wood face up. Or, to put it another way, always start the saw motor before the blade touches the wood and always place the plywood so that its good side is facing the floor.

Q. — You recently gave a couple of ways in which spilled alcohol can be removed from a wood floor. I have another that I have been using for 45 years and have found successful. Also, it is very simple. Just rub aromatic spirits of camphor on the spot with a clean cloth. It is good because it not only takes out the stain but also restores the color of the wood.

A. — I haven't tried it, but it sounds logical because camphor is sometimes used to remove certain spots from wood furniture. Many thanks.

Q. — Is there any difference between glazing compound and putty? I have to replace several cracked window panes and have always thought that putty was the material used to keep the panes in place, but I read some instructions recently that called for the use of glazing compound.

A. — The substances are very similar, but glazing compound usually costs little more and is less inclined to dry out than putty. Also, either glazing compound or putty is used principally to keep out the elements rather than to hold the panes in place, although it does play a small part in doing that. What holds the panes in place are glazier's points, bits of metal inserted into the frame and pressed against the glass.

A. — Why is cigar ash sometimes recommended for rubbing off white marks from a table top?

A. — Because it is a very mild abrasive. For the same reason, toothpaste may be used. However, either of these products will work only if the marks are not very severe. In stubborn cases, a stronger abrasive must be used.

Reggae — Hottest Thing In Pop Music

By FREDERICK WINSHIP

It's rock with a bouncy calypso beat, heavy on the bass. The lyrics bubble along like a tropic cola wine. It comes from the heart of Jamaica.

It's the hottest thing in popular music and you'd better learn to pronounce it right!

The fresh new sound is Reggae (reggay). It started in Jamaica as Ska (the poor man's music) in 1958. In England where it is outrageously popular with the under-30s, it has been called Blue Beat and Rock Steady. No less an expert than Beatle Paul McCartney is a convert and considers Reggae the music of the 1970s.

REGGAE MOVED from underground to overground in the United States last year when two Reggae-style discs by American artists climbed to the top of the best seller charts and became Gold Records. They were Johnny Nash's "I Can See Clearly Now", a current radio staple, and Paul Simon's (Simon and Garfunkel) "Mother and Child Reunion."

Nash favors compositions by Jamaican Bob Marley, considered the Beethoven of Reggae.

Kingston, Jamaica, has become a major recording capital, turning out an average of 80 new singles a week. For shantytown musicians, it's a case of from Reggae to riches. Americans Elton John, Cat Stevens, Eddie Floyd, Roberta Flack, and Leon Russell are all into Reggae and working with the natives on location. So are The Rolling Stones, The Staple Singers, The M.G.s, and Free.

TWO GUITARS — one rhythm, one lead — drums and organ make up the typical Reggae combo.

The first Reggae film, "The Harder They Come," opened in Manhattan in February and has been a sellout, with a bigger percentage of whites in the audience than most all-black films attract.

The film is Jamaica-made, Jamaica-financed, and confers stardom on a Jamaican singer, Jimmy Cliff. He is a popular entertainer in London, where there is a raging Reggae cult with special newspaper columns, clubs, and groupies.

The film, which was praised at the Venice Film Festival last summer, portrays a Reggae singer named Ivanhoe Martin fresh from the Jamaican hill country who is taken advantage of by Kingston record producers and turns to crime. You can understand everything Cliff sings, which is not true of all Reggae singers.

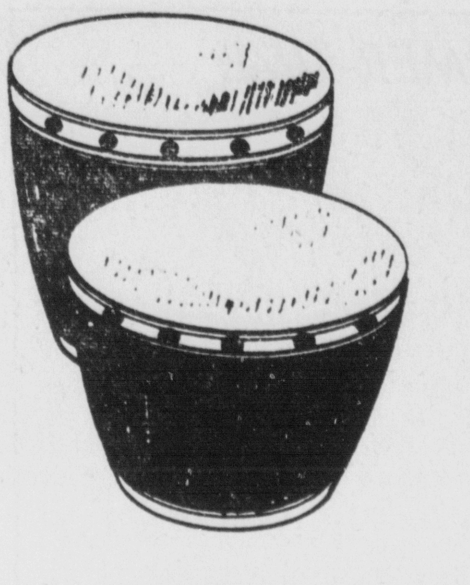
MANY REGGAE lyrics are made up of contracted dialect words, unintelligible to Americans. Following calypso tradition, there are plenty of political and sexual references "Slave Driver, the Tables Are Turned," "Belly Rub". The insinuating and hesitant rhythms are complex and won't be mastered easily by dancers who normally have trouble with Latin beats.

Reggae has a long way to go before it dominates the discotheques.

In Jamaica, black establishment society frowns on Reggae because it often is vulgar and raunchy and, in spite of its upbeat tempo, expressive of social unrest and protest among the lowest economic class of the island. In search of a wider audience, the best singers gravitated to London, which has a large West Indian population.

Reggae has been on the scene in Britain for at least 10 years and is regularly represented in the Top Twenty listings there.

Reggae records have grown in popularity here, too. Johnny Nash's 1967 hit, "Hold Me Tight," and "Israelites" and "007" recorded by Jamaican Desmond Dekker and The Aces in London stimulated the trend. Now companies such as Capitol are busily distributing platters for Jamaica-based groups. Capitol's Mango Records include an album by The Wailers and another of the film, "The Harder They Come."



With prestigious recording firms in the picture, Reggae composers are getting a fair share of profits for the first time and better material is emerging as a result of keen competition.

Do You Have An Educated Child?

Find out on August 18

Jameson Hall Sets "Test Saturday"

There's a lot of talk about education these days. Much of it centers around "alternative schools" with new classes, unstructured learning . . . and so on. Such curriculums are interesting and add to the concept currently in vogue that schools should educate the "whole child."

At Jameson Hall we stick to "3R-type classes. (As a matter of fact when James W. Kirchanski started up, he called it the 3R Schools.) We don't do a lot of breast-beating about how well we educate children, nor are we "reformers" because these things would take away too much of the time we devote to instruction in our classrooms. But we can show you some positive results.

READING FIRST GRADERS

Last year we tested thirty-nine Jameson Hall First Graders. Here's how they scored:

Subtest	Grade Placement	National Percentile
Word Reading (Vocabulary)	2.9	96
Paragraph Meaning (Comprehension)	2.7	96
Spelling	3.2	97
Arithmetic Computation	2.9	96
Grand Mean	2.9	96

These Jameson Hall students had not yet completed the First Grade (the test was given in April) and these results make us feel confident that we're accomplishing the difficult job of teaching young people.

What we do is work closely with each child and monitor progress regularly. We issue report cards every week. Not many schools do that. A lot of schools are dropping report cards altogether. And tests. That makes it difficult for parents to keep track of a child's progress.

TESTING OFFER

If you don't know the level of your child's learning, now you can find out exactly what it is. To help you do this, we're turning Jameson Hall into a Testing Center for one day. That day is Saturday, August 18.

On that day we'll administer Reading and Arithmetic Tests for children in Second through Eighth Grades. If your child has completed the First Grade, we'll test.

HOW IT WORKS

Bring children to the school, 3833 Redwood Highway, San Rafael (across from the Marin Civic Center). Be prepared to spend about ninety minutes with us. Each child will be tested and this takes about an hour and fifteen minutes. We'll score the tests immediately and you'll receive the results.

While the testing is going on you won't be subjected to any high-pressure sales tactics, so don't worry about that. What we will do is offer you some refreshments of the coffee-and-cookies variety while we explain what's happening in the room where your children are being tested.

James W. Kirchanski, who founded the 3R Schools in 1955, will be on hand to tell you some of the history of the 3R/Jameson Hall Schools and how they work . . . but you won't get a glossy sales pitch. We'll have some of our books on hand, if you want to see them. (We write some of our own tests.) Colonel F. R. Whiting, Headmaster of the San Rafael Jameson Hall and Principal Patricia Hicks, will be available to answer any questions you may have. It's an altogether low-key affair from start to finish. A couple of parents who have children in our school will be on hand, too, because somebody has to attend to the coffee-and-cookies business. If you want to talk to them, be our guest.

TESTS AUTHENTIC

You'll leave with the test results in hand to do with as you want. We use Stanford Achievement Tests so you know we haven't rigged anything in anyone's favor, especially ours. We believe parents have a right to know how their children are doing in school and we believe this is the way to accomplish that. If we can tell you something about ourselves while we're performing this service, that really isn't a bad price to pay.

Speaking of price — the testing isn't completely "free". The fee will be two dollars per child to help us cover some of our costs. We honestly believe it is a very small price to pay to measure something so important.

This service is available to everyone whether your children attend public, parochial or private school but you must use the coupon below to make a reservation. Send it to us along with two dollars for each child you wish tested. This test does not obligate you in any way whatsoever and we will contact you later to confirm your reservation for testing.

ON THE STEREO SCENE

'The Orchestration Of The Century . . .'

By WILBUR LANDREY

Superlatives are dangerous, but perhaps the most brilliant orchestration of the century is Maurice Ravel's transcription of "Pictures at an Exhibition" which Modest Mussorgsky wrote for the piano.

Mussorgsky's musical promenade through the posthumous St. Petersburg picture exhibition of his dead friend Victor Hartmann in 1874 is a great piano piece in the right hands.

It has been orchestrated several times, but since Ravel did it for conductor Serge Koussevitsky in 1922, that version has become a part of the orchestral repertory, and is even more frequently heard than the piano original.

To have both versions on one record, the Ravel orchestral arrangement played by the late George Szell and the Cleveland Orchestra, and the original piano score played by Sviatoslav Richter, is a treat.

Columbia has done it for its budget Odyssey label (Y 32223).

RICHTER'S MONO recording comes from a concert performance in Sofia, Bulgaria, on Feb. 25, 1958. From the amount of coughing in the background, it was a cold winter in Bulgaria, but the Richter performance is brilliant.

So is the excellent Cleveland's performance of the richly-colored Ravel score.

The practice of reissuing performances of some of the great recording artists and groups of the past on lower-priced labels is an exellent one, and presumably a profitable one as well, since most of the companies have their budget labels.

On Odyssey, there have recently been Szell and the Cleveland orchestra playing Richard Strauss' Don Quixote with cellist Pierre Fournier (Y 32224), Szell and the Cleveland playing Brahms piano concerto No. 2 in a fine performance with Leon Fleisher (Y 32222), Bruno Walter conducting the Columbia Symphony Orchestra in Brahms' Symphony No. 3 and the Academic Festival Overture, and Eugene Ormandy conducting the Philadelphia Orchestra in Prokofiev's Symphony No. 4 (Y 32226), all worthy of being noted.

ALSO RECOMMENDED: Heinz Holliger playing "Famous Oboe Concertos" by Leclair, Marcello, Vivaldi and Telemann (Philips 6500 413) — Excellent. A record for the collection played with virtuosity. The oboe deserves, and has seldom got, the attention that these baroque composers give it in writing for it as a solo instrument.

This is the latest of several Holliger oboe recordings.

Has Rock Gone Conservative? Well, Not David Bowie Anyway

By BRUCE MEYER

Unlike some rock journalists, I haven't had too much trouble over the past couple of years finding music I like. Despite the moaning and gnashing of teeth from a few writers, there is plenty of top-notch rock 'n' roll around.

On the other hand, there does seem to be a shortage of really innovative, creative groups and individuals. Virtually all of the music enjoying mass popularity right now is limited to further exploration of the rock topography of the 1960s.

There has been little of the Beatles - Stones - Dylan - Byrds - Hendrix sort of boundary-stretching innovation in the past year or three; a sort of conservatism has crept in. Follow the pattern, don't rock the rock.

As I said, this does not mean no good music is being made. But the innovators of the '60s have faded — and those we must assume will appear in the '70s have yet to make an entrance — with one or two exceptions. David Bowie is one of those exceptions.

BOWIE HAS QUITE consciously made himself the focal point of a whole new branch of pop music including, notably, Lou Reed and Mott The Hoople, which in sterotypical journalistic fashion I will label with a hyphen: androgynous-rock.

Bowie is the fulfillment of all the apprehensions of the big band generation when first confronted with long hair and unisex fashions. His hair is carefully styled, short on top, long in back; his thin, graceful body kept virtually hairless, his cheeks powdered, eyes shadowed, eyebrows plucked, lips sticked.

But his appearance which must be seen to be appreciated is basically a gimmick to attract attention, the old theory that the more you freak 'em out, the more free publicity you get, word of mouth. What really counts is the music, and Bowie's music is something special.

THERE ARE ONLY a handful of rock lyricists who can even stay in Bowie's league. He is a master of conveying emotions through a minimum of words. His "Rise and Fall of Ziggy Stardust" album (RCA LSP-4702) was the best of 1972, not only because of the driving poser of its rock 'n' roll, but because he told its strange story with the clarity of a novelist — and the delicacy of a poet.

Bowie's latest album is "Aladdin Sane" (RCA LSP-4852). The refrain of the title track goes, "Who Will Love Aladdin Sane?" and it's a most appropriate question. Many will like this album, many hate it. But it's such an admixture of Bowie's ultratheatrical weirdness that Aladdin will have few lovers far fewer than the more approachable Ziggy.

I think "Aladdin Sane" will go down as a transitional album, a bridge from the previous "Hunky Dory" and "Ziggy Stardust" to whatever lies ahead for Bowie and his guitarist-arranger Nick Ronson. As such, I recommend it highly.

And as long as we have a writer or two around with as much creative talent as Bowie, I can enjoy the music from lesser artists as well — and feel secure about the future of rock.

The Dolby System Continues To Gain In Use And Acceptance

By PRESTON McGRAW

The Dolby system of reducing noise on magnetic tapes now is available in prerecorded, open reel tapes and the result is music of broadened dynamic range out of a background of almost velvet silence.

The system was developed in 1965 by Ray Dolby, an American engineer working in England. After putting in several years with Ampex in the United States working on tape video recording, Dolby went to England to get a Ph.D. at Cambridge.

Bugged by tape noise — mainly hiss — Dolby worked out a sophisticated system that divides the frequency spectrum into four separate ranges, each independently treated.

In recording with the system, all signals whose strength is above a certain level pass through unchanged. But signals below a certain level are increased 10 or 15 decibels. The recording engineer winds up with a tape whose only weak signals are the noise on it.

ON PLAYBACK, the Dolby system cuts back the boosted signals by the amount they were increased. The music comes out as it entered the recording microphone and with about the same noise-free background.

Prerecorded tapes for use by high fidelity hobbyists were about the last medium to use the Dolby system. The first medium was master tapes for records.

Then a reasonably priced Dolby system — the Dolby "B" — was added to cassette machines. Cassettes, with their 178 ips speed, as opposed to 712 for open reel tapes' were especially victimized by hiss.

Some FM broadcasting tuners employ the Dolby system. By eliminating noise in the broadcast signal, the quality of music is enhanced and the effective sensitivity of tuners extended.

LAST DECEMBER, Ampex Stereo Tapes announced a series of Dolbyized open reel tapes. The series was introduced with 20 titles. Others are being added.

The only Dolbyzied open reel recorder available then was a Revox model, which sells for around $1,000. To get the full benefit of Dolbyized tapes, they have to be played on such a machine.

But other manufacturers are reported to be bringing out more modestly priced machines so more hobbyists can take advantage of the process.

But the Dolbyized tapes make a significant difference, even on decks not equipped with the system. Any kind of noise works to the disadvantage of high grade sound, as any person who has tried to listen to a high fidelity rig with an air conditioner vent hissing in the room knows.

SO EVEN ON orthodox but highgrade tape decks, hiss is almost inaudible. Music seems clearer, sharper.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In January, 1972, in desperation, NBC put up a new show against the hit "All in the Family." The industry figured it was aptly named — "Emergency!"

"All in the Family" had been giving the opposition its lumps. First, in the 1971-72 fall season it knocked off two situation comedies, NBC's "The Partners" and ABC's Bobby Sherman show.

At midseason NBC came in with "Emergency!," and ABC switched over its veteran comedy "Bewitched." Archie Bunker took the magic out of "Bewitched" and kept the firemen of "Emergency!" at the bottom of the ratings ladder.

THIS PAST season NBC stuck with "Emergency!" and ABC tried a new with its tongue-in-cheek Wwestern, "Alias Smith and Jones." They went down the tube and at midseason ABC tried for a wedge in Archie's audience with the provocative "Here We Go Again." That didn't work either and in the fall ABC will try for wholesomeness and music with "The Partridge Family."

NBC hung in there with "Emergency!" and may at least get a chuckle — if not the last laugh. In recent ratings periods "Family" has slipped out of first place and "Emergency" has become firmly rooted in the top 20.

Robert A. Cinader, producer and co-creator, offers a simple explanation for its survival and success.

"NO TELEVISION show has universal appeal," he reasoned. "Even 'All in the Family' doesn't appeal to everyone. You look for the areas where it doesn't appeal. And that's to the action-oriented kids. You design a show around kids.

"We're successful because it's the only show designed to counterpunch by going into the one area where 'All in the Family' has its lowest audience level. The others tried to beat them at their own game — with comedy — and lost."

"Emergency!," like another show Cinader helped create, "Adam-12," is done in vignettes. The short episodes follow the paramedic firemen and the emergency room of a hospital.

A TIP FOR MOVIE BUFFS

Because of a newsprint shortage, the "TV Movie Marquee" listings appearing in this section will not be repeated with the daily television logs in next week's issues of the Independent-Journal. TV movie fans, therefore, will want to save their TV Watch for reference during the coming week.

KEVIN CORCORAN as Toby Tyler, a runaway lad who has joined the circus, hugs his friend, Mr. Stubbs the chimp, in "Toby Tyler," a two-part adventure story to be presented on "The Wonderful World of Disney," this Sunday and Aug. 19 at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

The Outspoken Elizabeth Baur

Elizabeth Baur, who will be seen frequently this fall as the new "lady cop" on the NBC Television Network's "Ironside," is a tiny, brown-haired beauty whose forthright answers to questions have a disconcerting way of stopping further conversation.

For instance, the casual question "What happened to your black patent leather boots?" received this answer: "I split them showing off. I was trying to get out a car gracefully to impress a man I was dating. If he had been somebody I didn't like, my boots would have been fine. As it was I wrecked the boots and the fellow was unimpressed."

FORTUNATELY, Elizabeth's answers are not always negative.

Asked by a quartet of teenage girls — who observed her posing for publicity photos in a park — if she enjoyed being an actress, Elizabeth said: "I love it. It's the most exciting thing to do I could ever have found, and I'm delighted to be working."

The root of Elizabeth's directness may lie in the technique her mother used (at a pediatrician's suggestion) for curing her temper tantrums as a child. Furious when her mother chose babyish smock dresses to flatter her violet eyes, Elizabeth would throw herself on the floor kicking and screaming.

"THE TANTRUMS never lasted long," Elizabeth recalled, "because she would throw cold water on me. Of course, the beauty of it all was that the dress was soaking wet, and I didn't have to wear it after all."

Elizabeth's entire life has been spent in the atmosphere of motion pictures. Her father, Jack Baur, is a casting director for a major studio and takes performers and the so-called glamor of show business in his stride.

"What did your father say when he found out his only child wanted to be an actress?" Elizabeth was asked.

"He said, 'I have a better idea. Why not acquire a skill so you can make a living'. "

TUNING IN ON TV

By JACK GAVER

On Sept. 8, via NBC, actor Bert Parks will be making his 19th successive appearance as master of ceremonies for Atlantic City's Miss America Pageant.

Roberto Clemente, Puerto Rican star of the Pittsburgh Pirates who died in an airplane accident last Jan. 1, is the subject of a 90-minute special to be aired by NBC during the 1973-74 season. Singer-actor Harry Belafonte is expected to play the baseball idol.

Two stars who will show up as guest players in the ABC "Marcus Welby, M.D." series during the new season are Tige Andrews and Kim Hunter. It will be the program's fifth seassn.

No one knows what the content of the new "NBC Follies" variety series will be in the way of principals and material, but it is certain to have a chorus of 12 dancing girls. That may not be progress, but it could be most interesting.

Another night-time series spins off an animated version for children that will be on NBC Saturday mornings beginning in the fall. The parent is NBC "Emergency!" and the offspring will be "Emergency plus 4," a half-hour version of adventures of paramedics. Randolph Mantooth and Kevin Tighe, who star in the one-hour Saturday night skein, will do voice-overs for their animated counterparts in the new program.

SOME FACTS ON TOWER

Some statistics on the new Sutro Tower beaming television over Northern California:

It stands 977 feet high and 1,811 feet above sea level — within a few feet of equalling the Eiffel Tower in height.

The steel in the basic tower weighs 3,400,000 pounds, and in the antennas 200,000 pounds, for a total of 3,600,000 pounds.

There are 25,000 feet of radio frequency transmission wire — copper-coated coaxial.

There are no rivets in the structure. It is all bolted, welded construction.

Dr. Welby Still Makes House Calls

Three million feet of film have curled through the color cameras since June 2, 1969, when Robert Young donned his white coat to speak his first lines as star of the ABC Television Network's "Marcus Welby, M.D." at Universal Studio.

ROBERT YOUNG
Three million feet of film

The hour long series, which begins its fifth season this fall, premiered Sept. 23, 1969, with the episode "Hello, Goodbye, Hello" with guest star Susan Clark.

Young, James Brolin (Dr. Steven Kiley) and Elena Verdugo (Consuelo Lopez) recently celebrated the filming of the series' 100th episode. Titled "The Tall Tree," the episode features Tony Musante, star of the new ABC series, "Toma."

Unlike many series which go through trial and error traumas and growing pains, "Welby" in the four years it has been on the air, has undergone comparatively few changes.

STILL AT THE helm are executive producer David Victor, who created the series, and producer David J. O'Connell, aided by Nina Laemmle, executive story consultant.

"Marcus Welby, M.D." began airing Tuesday nights at 10 and its hold on that time period has never wavered. Its position in the Nielsen ratings has also remained constant; more often than not it is in the top five.

Dozens of awards and citations have been earned by the series and its stars. The series itself has received two Emmys and three nominations. Young has one Emmy and two nominations, Brolin, one Emmy and three nominations, and Miss Verdugo has two nominations.

EACH EPISODE begins with a 15-page outline, followed usually by first and second drafts, then a final script.

Among the 250 performers who have guest starred during the past four years are two who, practically unknown at the time, are now stars in series of their own.

AN ANGRY IRISHMAN

COCOYOC, Mexico (UPI) — Irish actor Richard Harris is giving the British — from Queen Elizabeth on down — advance warning not to consider him for any possible film awards.

His anger over what he calls "England's inhuman treatment of the Northern Irish" is such that he took time out from filming on location here to announce advance rejection of any British Academy Award or other honor that may be proffered in the future.

"Even if Queen Elizabeth herself were to offer me a knighthood or something of the sort, I would tell her to shove it," the outspoken actor said.

HOSTESS HELEN REDDY, left, welcomes Brenda Vacarro, one of her guests on "Flip Wilson Presents the Helen Reddy Show," Thursday at 8 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

MARK DONOHUE, RACING'S "MR. BUSINESS": "Anything Besides Winning Is Failure"

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

Would you say that the dirty doings of Watergate are a "sign of the times"? — Robert Beaton, Ventnor, N. J.

● Watergate is a penalty being exacted from the public for living according to the theory that the informer is a fink and the guilty party is a martyr. Like the general public, the people in Watergate have accepted the theory that loyalty is first and honesty second, no matter what the crime. The tragedy is that the young people know about Watergate and are forming a dubious opinion of the basic concepts of honesty.

FOR CHARLES SCHULZ

Any comments about the third-century etchings resembling "Snoopy" that were recently found by archaeologists in Rome?—William H. Curtis, Bakersfield, Calif.

● Snoopy may well be descended from ancient Rome, as evidenced by his taste in art, literature and Olympic contests. But as far as I know, his only prototype was a black-and-white spotted dog named Spike—my childhood pet and the best friend I ever had.

FOR MARILYNN SMITH, professional golfer

I was playing pretty well, and now all of a sudden I've hit a slump—does this ever happen to pro golfers?—Mae Swan, Santa Ana, Calif.

● Definitely! And each of us has her own way of getting out of slumps. I know several golf instructors I have confidence in, and when I hit a slump I have one look over my swing. My problem usually boils down to tempo—I'm too fast. My exuberant personality works to my detriment in my swing. But some pros just take off and go fishing, and come back with a fresher outlook.

FOR AL PACINO, star of "The Godfather"

Was that a real horse's head that was placed in the Hollywood producer's bed as a warning from the Godfather?—Sharri Klassen, Myrtle Creek, Ore.

● It was a real horse's head. It was taken from a horse that had been shot because of a broken leg three days before the scene was filmed.

FOR CHER BONO

You're always joking about Sonny's height. Really, how tall is he and how tall are you? Also, is that last part of your show, when you bring Chastity out, rehearsed?—J. B., Mt. Angel, Ore.

● I'm 5′6″ and Sonny is an inch taller. No, Chastity needs no rehearsal, she's a natural-born performer.

FOR JEANE DIXON, clairvoyant

Did you at one time or another foresee the Watergate affair? —Mrs. H. Brensike, New London, Wis.

● In my prediction of October 21, 1968, I said: "A wiretapping scandal which I have predicted previously is yet to come. It will involve Richard Nixon, but will show him as a sincere man and will help his public image. I saw a ball going round and round in what seemed to be a roulette wheel; the ball seemed always to stop on a double-O. It seemed to indicate a name or names which I could not interpret. A tall, dark man also appeared to be involved. The entire matter will affect Mr. Nixon favorably and would seem to put him in a position to right a great wrong, which would be for the good of the image of the U.S."

FOR PAT NIXON

Are you an orphan? We never see or hear anything about your family.—Mrs. L. M. Biggers, Clarksville, Tenn.

● My parents died when I was a teenager. I raised my brothers and sister and helped support them through college. But I do not choose to draw a great deal of public attention to them. They prefer to lead as much of a private life as possible.

FOR SEN. WALTER F. MONDALE (D-Minn.)

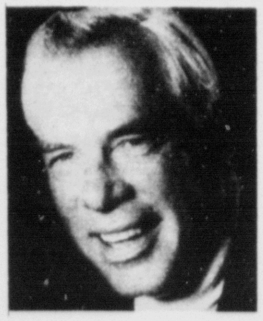
You've proposed an Office of Federal Elections to enforce election laws. Don't we have enough prosecutors and grand juries running around already?—K. N., Elgin, Ill.

● Watergate has made it clear that politicians are not likely to investigate themselves, and that prosecution of political crimes will not likely be vigorously pursued by political appointees. We need an agency insulated from politics to investigate and prosecute political crimes.

FOR HOWARD COSELL

Your comments about the bad aspects of intercollegiate sports interest me. Do you believe that there will be another college-basketball scandal?—D. L. King, Atlantic City, N. J.

● There was a college-basketball scandal in the forties, one in the fifties, one in the sixties, and there will probably be one in the seventies.



FOR LEE MARVIN,
star of "The Emperor of the North"

How do you manage to keep your self-confidence?—L. M., Rock Spings, Wyo.

● I'm not self-confident—that's what makes me so good!

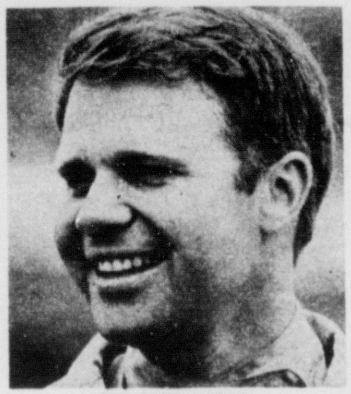
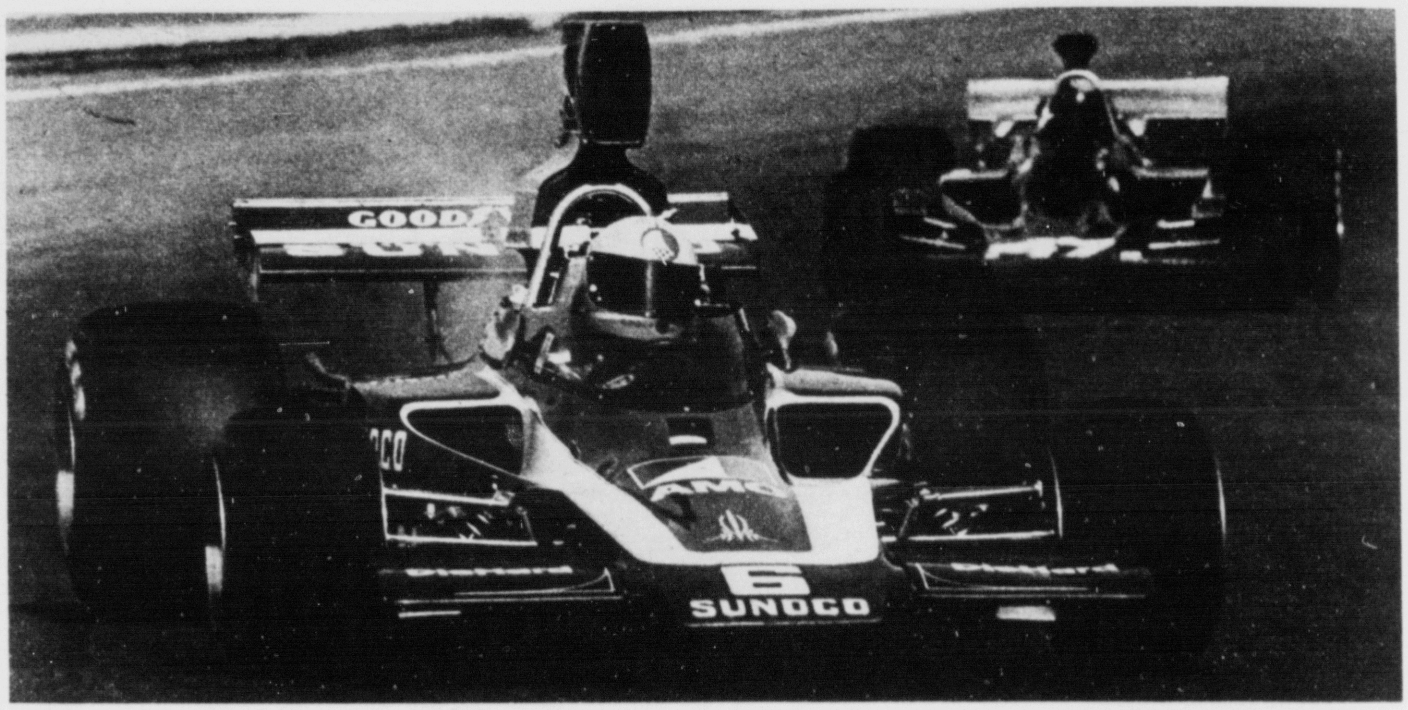
Mark Donohue: "Anything Besides Winning Is Failure"



UPI

Mark Donohue

By Larry Bortstein



"Speed is not the primary goal in racing," says Mark. "What good is it if you have the fastest car if it only lasts a few miles?"

Dressed in a dark suit and conservative tie, Mark Donohue could pass for almost any other high-salaried young business executive.

Donohue, who is a young 36, could even be a business executive. He has a degree in mechanical engineering from Brown University in Providence, R.I., and an additional one and a half years of graduate study in business.

But Mark's attire when he's at work is not the kind you buy at a men's store. It's a fireproof suit made of a plastic-type substance called Nomex. That's because Donohue is a race driver—perhaps the best in America today, and certainly one of the best five or six in the world.

While other race drivers often act and talk as tough as the pavements on which they drive, Mark, who's known as "Captain Nice," presents quite a different image. He is notoriously easier to deal with than, say, A. J. Foyt, who is called "Tough Tony" because of his often-irascible manner. Donohue suggests that his "Captain Nice" label is not entirely accurate. "It's true that I don't mouth off a lot, and I'm usually agreeable with people. But if it's a couple of days before a big race like the Indianapolis 500, and someone comes up to ask me something not directly connected with the race, he's going to walk away thinking I'm pretty awful. I'm not in a mood for small talk then."

Mark brings his businesslike demeanor to what is perhaps the most businesslike operation in racing today. He's the No. 1 driver for Roger Penske Racing, headed by former sports-car whiz Roger Penske. Leaving little to chance, Penske employs as brilliant a corps of mechanics and engineers as exists in American racing. Often working from 8:30 a.m. till past nine at night, these men turn out the racing machinery that enables Donohue and other Penske drivers to wage all-out assaults on the nation's racetracks.

When he's not racing or inspecting cars here and abroad, Mark is a regular at the Penske Racing headquarters, near his home in Newtown Square, a Philadelphia suburb. "I'll put in incredibly long hours at the shop," he says. "When you're at this level of racing, you have to invest the time and hours because this is your business." Donohue has been known to spend the night sleeping on a cot in the garage in order to get an early start the next morning.

"At high speed, the engine cover lifted, and the magnesium car went crashing into a wall, turning cartwheels as it spun sickeningly into fragments."

Excesses of this type have led to separation from his wife, Sue, the mother of two young sons, Michael and David.

Starting with his own Elva Courier, a small sports car that he drove in his first amateur race at Lime Rock, Conn., in 1960 (he finished fourth), Mark has become one of the most prosperous men in motor sports. He has won on the oval-track courses of the U.S. Auto Club and the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing; he is also one of the finest road race drivers this country has produced, with victories in the Canadian-American Challenge Cup series (Can-Am), the Trans-American Championship (Trans-Am), and the Formula 5000, or Continental Championship.

Despite all the triumphs, Mark feels that "speed is not the primary goal in racing. What good is it if you have the fastest car if it only lasts a few miles? We strive to see that the car stays together for the full distance of a race, like the 500 miles at Indianapolis and the other big races. You have to finish all 500 miles in order to win. And anything besides winning is a failure."

Mark's experiences in the Indianapolis 500 offer graphic proof that speed isn't everything in racing. In 1971, his car was the fastest in practice runs, achieving speeds of more than 180 mph. But on race day, after building up a sizable early lead, Donohue was forced to drop out on the 66th lap of the 200-lap event due to a broken gear.

In 1972, on the other hand, Donohue could summon less horsepower from his machine than several competitors at Indy. But at the end of the 500-mile grind, Mark had the nose of his number 66 dark-blue McLaren in front of the field. His purse for winning the race amounted to nearly $200,000, the largest one-day haul of his career. His annual earnings now are said to approach the $500,000 mark.

Bumps and bruises are constant riding companions of every man who steps into the cockpit of a racing machine. Most drivers accept pain stoically, and Donohue is no exception. A couple of years ago Mark appeared at a press conference in New York with heavy bandages over his left eye and cheek. When asked what had happened to his eye, Donohue shrugged and said, "Oh, a piece of metal was on the track yesterday when I was testing the car and it flew up and hit me in the eye. I just needed a few stitches."

Shortly after his Indianapolis 500 victory in 1972, Donohue was testing his car in Atlanta for an upcoming race. At high speed, the engine cover lifted, and the magnesium car went crashing into a wall, turning cartwheels as it spun sickeningly into fragments.

Mark's left knee was badly damaged. "The bottom of the leg was turned away from the knee," he recalls, and a lengthy hospitalization was required.

Mark's passion for cars first overcame him as a boy in Summit, N. J., where he started driving his father's car in their curving driveway when he was nine.

Though his parents opposed Mark's racing in the beginning, they are among his big fans now. Mark, Sr., is a patent lawyer and a partner in a New York law firm. His wife Hazel is a retired fifth-grade teacher.

Mark has two younger sisters. Nancy is a greeting-card artist, and Mary Ellen runs a horse stable. "As you can see," says Mark, "we have very diverse interests. But we had the kind of parents that let us do what we liked for the most part. There were objections to my racing, but this is not the type of profession you go into lightly. I think my parents wanted to make sure I knew exactly what I was getting into. I haven't been sorry and I'm sure they're not sorry either."

Move to the pool

August usually seems to be the hottest month. A good time to move an active sport like basketball into the water to keep cool.

The more time you spend in the water, the more you should know about Tampax tampons. They're sanitary protection worn internally, so you can go swimming. They're hygienic and comfortable for all girls of menstrual age.

Tampax tampons are softly compressed and expand to fit your inner contours. The silken-smooth container-applicator makes insertion easy. And the withdrawal cord is chain stitched the entire length of the tampon so it can't pull off.

August heat means more time in the water. And even more reason to rely on Tampax tampons.

The internal protection more women trust

"Oh, Mr. Welk! My (Grand) Mother Just Loves You!"

Lawrence Welk and his wife, Fern: "Even when I was a young man," he says, "it was always the girl's mother who liked me best."

By Lawrence Welk,

With Bernice McGeehan, especially for FAMILY WEEKLY

" 'Lawrence Welk!' screamed one of the boys. 'Are you kidding! Migawsh, my mother used to make me look at him! Boy, he's terrible!' The rest of the boys laughed right along with him, and I must say the conversation died a little after that, till one of the boys asked me what I did...."

The wonderful fans I've met during my 50 years in the music business keep saying such nice things to me I sometimes worry I may start to believe them. But just about then, along comes someone who brings me down to earth!

Like the lady who came backstage one night as we were getting ready to televise our weekly show. She had somehow slipped past my secretary, Lois Lamont, who generally keeps an eagle eye out for unexpected visitors, and then tracked me down in the makeup room where I was getting made up for the cameras. Rudy Horvatich, who has been with me for years, was busy applying the paints and powders, and the lady was absolutely fascinated at the sight. She hung over Rudy's shoulder watching every move he made, scarcely daring to breathe. When he had finished she came over to me, inspected me closely from all sides, and then turned to him. "Sir," she said, "you are a real genius!"

Well, that's the kind of thing that keeps your ego down to size. And so did the lady who cut in on me one night during a tag dance that we were featuring on the show. She was a large lady, weighing close to 200 pounds, and she came shoving up from the back of the line, elbowing everybody else aside. The other ladies had been tapping me lightly on the shoulder – but not this lady! She hit me such a crack I nearly went down on my knees; and then, before I could recover, she grabbed me around the waist with one hand while she beamed and waved vigorously at the camera with the other. "I've never danced a step in my life," she announced as I regained my balance, "but I always said if I ever got out here to Hollywood I'd come down and dance on your show." Well, I have danced with literally hundreds of thousands of ladies in my time, and I've never had the slightest trouble with them, but this lady was something else! No matter how hard I tried, I just could not get her on the beat, and we struggled for some time in full view of the cameras. Finally she pulled back and eyed me with disgust. "You," she said flatly as she turned to leave, "certainly look like a much better dancer on television!"

Mothers are, and always have been, the heart and soul of our audience, and even though our listeners have grown to include an increasing number of young people in the past few years, it's the mothers who hold our first affection. I think I've always had somewhat of a problem with mothers. Even when I was a young man, fresh off the farm in North Dakota, and just beginning to date, it was always the girl's mother who liked me best! And whenever a beautiful girl would come up to the bandstand and smile prettily at me, chances were she was only going to tell me how much her mother loved me. (They're still doing that, only now they tell me how much their grandmothers love me!)

But of all the people who have burst my bubble over the years, I think the five young boys I picked up one day as they were on their way to the beach must rank among the most unforgettable. They had no sooner gotten in the car than my ego took a blow, because not one of them recognized me. Nothing daunted, I maneuvered the conversation around to music. "Which orchestras do you boys like best?" I asked.

"Oh," they said, "we don't listen to orchestras. We like groups–rock 'n' roll, you know, like that."

"Mmmm," I said. "Well, do you ever look at television?"

"Sure, all the time."

"Do you ever watch the Lawrence Welk show?"

"Lawrence Welk!" screamed one of the boys. "Are you kidding! Migawsh, my mother used to make me look at him! Boy, he's terrible!" The rest of the boys laughed right along with him, and I must say the conversation died a little after that, till one of the boys asked me what I did. "Well," I said, "you fellows won't be mad at me if I tell you, will you?" (I was a little concerned they might be embarrassed if they knew who I was.) "No," they said, "why? Are you a cop?"

I laughed. "No. No, I'm not a policeman, I'm a musician."

"Yeah? What do you play?"

"The accordion."

There was a brief and terrible pause as the awful truth began to dawn on the boys, and then the one who had yelled the loudest said weakly, "Oh boy. You're . . . Lawrence Welk, aren't you?"

When I nodded he turned white and made a grab for the door handle on his side of the car. I think he would have jumped right out if I hadn't reached over and pulled him back. "Oh, Mr. Welk," he moaned, "I'm sorry I said all those dumb things. I didn't mean them, please excuse me, will ya?" I assured him I would, but he sat miserably for a few more seconds. Then suddenly his face cleared.

"Hey!" he cried triumphantly, "it doesn't matter what I think of you anyhow, Mr. Welk, 'cause, listen . . . my mother just loves you!"

How Your Horoscope Can Bring You Wealth, Love, Success And Happiness

Did you know your horoscope could mean the difference between happiness or sorrow; between success or failure?

Picture a long room with doors at each end. In this room there is money, attractive persons of the opposite sex, books that tell you the secret of happiness and many other valuable articles. But, also in this room are bottomless pits, traps, hostile persons and dangerous beasts chained in various places around the room. You must walk through this room, but you may take out of it anything you can.

Now if you had a choice, would you choose to 1) go through the room blindfolded or 2) go through the room with your eyes open and with written instructions on which places an and people to visit or avoid.

Of course, all of us would pick the second choice in a case such as this. Isn't it ridiculous, then, that we would choose to go thru life, the same situation, blindfolded! Even when there is a means to go thru life with a map and our eyes wide open! The means provided is Astrology. The map is our astrological horoscope.

How does it work? Nature's cosmos imprints each of us at the time of birth - when the umbilical cord is cut. We then become ourselves. Until the cord is cut, we are part of our mother. Why or how we presently do not know. The movement of the large solar bodies then times potentials for events in our lives. Astrology does not cause events but is timing of events. But, it's not fortune telling. It's a prediction of potentials which free will can override.

Here is a common misconception about astrology. Some people say, "how can stars millions of light years away be related to our lives." The error here is the word stars. Astrology deals with the relationship of our lives with the sun, moon, and planets–not stars.

And, anyone who doesn't think that the sun, moon, and planets do not regulate earth and its inhabitants, had better think again. We all know how the moon controls the tides. We have all heard of the famous clam experiments where the clams open and close by the cycle of the moon, sun, and planets. Police departments and insurance companies show exact relations with crime and violence with cycles of the moon, sun and planets. Doctors are finding direct relationships with successful operations and the cycle of the solar bodies. Authenticated research is now proving that astrology can predict natural disasters, wars, diseases a person will suffer, personalities of people and much more.

What does a natal horoscope analysis by a qualified astrologer contain? A natal horoscope analysis contains the best psychological analysis of yourself that you can get today. Because, in a controlled experiment in 1960, astrologers beat psychologists in predicting case histories.

In addition, a natal horoscope analysis includes discussions on the following: financial outlook; taxes and inheritances; early home environment; relationships with family; relatives and parents; lovelife and marriage; children; career and occupation; hopes; wishes and goals; and subconscious attitudes. In a major analysis, a one year forecast is also included.

Many people think that astrology only appeals to "way out" unscientific people. Nothing could be farther from the truth. In fact, studies show that astrology appeals most to intelligent and logical people.

Consider these famous scientists: Galileo-astronomer, Carl Jung-psychologist, Johannes Kepler-astronomer, Roger Bacon-mathemetician, Tycho Bache-astronomer. Want to know what they all had in common? They all were astrologers themselves or used astrology in their work. Even Albert Einstein was impressed by the accuracy of astrology when he studied it in his late years.

Astrology appeals to people in every walk of life. A horoscope has meant the difference between success and disaster for famous people throughout history. Your horoscope can mean the same to you.

Your horoscope can help you be in the right place at the right time.

Did you know that the three wise men who found the Christ Child were astrologers? The "large star" which guided them to the Christ Child was really a cluster of cosmic bodies which were, as predicted by astrological charts, in line at that particular time. This was the reason it was so bright.

Your horoscope can help you avoid disasters while guiding you to your beneficial opportunities.

Did you know that astrology helped the allies win W.W. II? The allies employed astrologers. The axis powers started out employing astrologers. But, this was ceased early when the famous astrologer, Karl Ernst Krafft, predicted the exact time and place of an attempt on Hitler's life in 1939. Hitler thought the astrologers were conspiring against him, so they were imprisoned.

This proved to be a tragic decision for Hitler. A decision that may have altered the course of the war. Because, if Hitler had studied his horoscope, he would have used different strategy. Why? Because two horoscopes, one of Adolf Hitler, drawn by two different astrologers, in two different countries, at two different times exactly predicted the course of W.W. II.

Hitler did get to see these horoscopes . . . . too late. He read them in the last hours of the war as Berlin burned around him. The following is an authentic account of the incident.

Here is a direct quote from THE RISE AND FALL OF THE THIRD REICH, by William L. Shirer:

> "They sent for two horoscopes, which were kept in the files of one of Himmler's multitudinous "research" offices. One was the horoscope of the Fuehrer drawn up on January 30, 1933, the day he took office; the other was the horoscope of the Weimer Republic, composed by some unknown astrologer on November 9, 1918, the day of the Republic's birth. Goebbles communicated the results of the re-examination of these two remarkable documents to Krosigk.
> An amazing fact has become evident, both horoscopes predicted the outbreak of the war in 1939, the victories until 1941, and the subsequent series of reversals, with the hardest blows during the first months of 1945, particularly during the first half of April.* In the second half of April, we were to experience a temporary success. Then there would be stagnation until August and peace that same month. For the following three years, Germany would have a hard time, but starting in 1948, she would rise again."

*Hitler committed suicide in April, 1945.

On the other hand, astrologers aided the allies in forecasting the axies moves. The most famous astrologer, Louis de Wohl, employed by British government, predicted the exact events leading to the downfall of Mussolini. He gained the faith of the American military when he predicted Pearl Harbor a year before it happened.

More on avoiding disasters, here is a story from a recent newspaper article in the Miami Herald's Sunday magazine.

> –Mary Kelly is a computer programmer. She credits astrology with saving her from an operation on her legs that would have left her crippled. "It happened in New York in 1963," she says. "My doctor decided an operation was needed, and told me to check into the hospital Friday for the procedure on Monday. I consulted my astrologer, who did a special lunar return chart and came up with the possibility of a wrong diagnosis for Monday. She told me to have the operation changed to Wednesday, in order to allow the planet Neptune, amongst others, to change position. I did this, and on Tuesday the doctor suddenly discovered a blood clot was causing the trouble. Had he performed the operation, as any doctor would have on Friday's symptoms, I probably would never have walked again."–

Also in the Miami Herald article, was a story about a noted Miami astrologer, Clifford McMillen. Here is an excerpt.

> –McMillen is also listed as the official astrologer to Sen. George McGovern, and predicted in February, 1972, that he would lose in November to President Nixon. At the same time, he forecast the victory of his Democratic nomination at Miami Beach.
> As he explained to his afternoon museum class recently, "The planet Saturn came into conflict with a planet of McGovern's career area, setting up a T-square, which means considerable difficulties to overcome. In October, Nixon, a Capricorn, will be benefiting from the good planet Jupiter, while McGovern, a Cancer, will have the trouble-giving planet Saturn in conflict with his career area, from the 12th House, building up unknown enemies. Really, in the coming race, he might as well say home."–

Your horoscope can bring you wealth. Famous business tycoon J. P. Morgan, used astrology to acquire his fortune. Morgan did not make a financial move without checking his natal horoscope forecast.

From the article in the Miami Herald come these stories:

> –Stockbrokers on Wall Street are as likely to call an astrologer in this decade as Hollywood m stars would call a psychiatrist in the last. David Williams, a 75-year-old retired financial expert who lives in Clearwater, has made $150,000 from the stock market in 13 years by using astrology as an investment guide.
> Robert Cooper is a classic, middle-aged establishment sort with silver-rimmed glasses - but he wouldn't move a penny in the $4-million St. Petersburg corporation from which he retired recently as vice president, before charting the planets.–

Your horoscope can show you the way to success and happiness in love and marriage. Horoscopes of Grace Kelly, Jackie Kennedy, and Liz Taylor predicted their current successful marriages. Grace Kelly to Prince Rainier, Jackie Kennedy to Aristotle Onassis and Liz Taylor to Richard Burton.

Princess Grace and Prince Rainier have recently had their horoscopes done together by American astrologer, Keith Clayton. As with these famous people, your horoscope can help you find and keep a lasting and meaningful love relationship.

Is a natal horoscope analysis a good investment?

By knowing how to advance your career or making a correct financial decision, you would get back your investment thousands of times. Success in the areas of lovelife, marriage, children relationship and peer relationship is of infinite value. Knowing what future potentials to take advantage of and which ones to avoid can offer a priceless feeling of security.

Now and through the ages a good natal horoscope analysis has meant success for many people. In other cases many men have missed their opportunity; some with tragic consequences, such as Adolf Hitler.

Will you miss your success opportunities? Will you stumble into pitfalls you could have avoided?

Today, right this moment, you can have your natal horoscope cast and analyzed. You can get it for only the cost to make your duplicate copy. You get the expensive casting and analyzing process–FREE. The article below will tell you how. The means are available, but the choice is yours.

Ten Gas Saving Tips Most Drivers Don't Know...

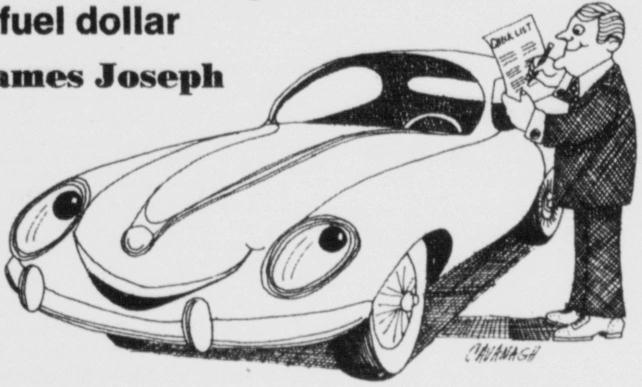
How to be a "Mileage Miser" with Your fuel dollar

By James Joseph



Drive like a "mileage miser," and you can stretch your gasoline mileage 20 to 40 percent. Maybe more. Here's how expert fuel savers (most of them professional drivers) do it. And how you can, too.

Think hot. Right off, you can cut fuel use 8-20 percent on summer days by not using your air conditioner. Among accessories, it's your car's No. 1 power (thus gas) squanderer. You can shave off another five percent simply by operating your engine normally hot: 240°F. when your radiator is filled with the usual 50/50 mix of antifreeze and water, and is capped with a high-pressure cap. A hot engine burns fuel most efficiently. To raise engine temperature in around-town driving (where, normally, an engine never warms enough for complete combustion), reduce the amount of air that can flow through the radiator. Simply blank out a portion of the radiator grille with any air-resistant material. That's what those sports-car "radiator blankets" do.

Fifty mph — the "magic" speed. Everybody knows speed wastes gas. Not many know how much—or precisely why. Above 50 mph, fuel consumption soars. The fuel wasters are wind resistance and the high-speed "jet" in your carburetor, which, above 50 mph, literally gushes gas. You can reduce fuel consumption a hard-to-believe 25 percent by cruising the highway at 50 mph instead of 70—and 11 percent by keeping to 50 rather than 60 mph.

Spark plugs can save you ten percent. A tune-up, new spark plugs and a little grease in the right places can whack another ten percent – or more—off fuel consumption. Burnt or worn spark plugs—which prevent full combustion—can waste one gallon in ten! Mistimed ignition systems, fast-idling engines, dirty air filters or carburetors—all waste gas.

Yes, over-inflate your tires! Friction is a mileage murderer. Poor lubrication on wheel bearings, for example, saps engine power—and mileage. So do too soft tires. Keep yours inflated to the maximum recommended by the manufacturer – and, say the experts, inflate them four pounds higher than recommended on long trips or with heavy loads.

And use only lightweight oil in the engine, transmission and rear axle. Using SAE 20 motor oil instead of heavy SAE 40 can save you 1.2 miles per gallon.

Thermometer vs. gas. Don't travel in really blustery weather—especially if you'll be driving most of the way against the wind. Head winds can cut your mileage 20 percent (up to 50 percent if you drive a camping-type vehicle). In winter and on the hottest summer days, restrict how far and how much you drive. Both seasons are gas robbers, particularly winter. Fuel mileage plunges as the thermometer falls.

The miles-per-gallon meter. Even if you think you know most of the tricks of fuel-economy driving, you'll learn more if you install one of the new fuel-flow meters. It tells you at a glance how many miles per gallon you're getting. Or wasting. Average drivers should recoup the electronic device's cost (about $80) in as little as 12,000 miles. The meter shows the gas waste in jackrabbit starts, quick lane changes and accelerating as you climb a hill.

Here are some more metered tips for gas-saving driving:

—Maintain steady speed and a steady foot on the accelerator.

—Anticipating a stop, get off the accelerator as soon as you can.

—Spend as little time (and fuel) idling as possible. Stopped in traffic or waiting for a light, shut off your engine. And rather than idling to warm up the engine, start right out, warming it at a modest speed.

—Use second gear only when you must. Driving in second rather than in fuel-economizing high gear cuts mileage 15 percent.

I turned $1,000 into $1 MILLION in the world's safest investment—in my spare time!

I'll show you how you can, too...

There is a safe and steady road to riches any man or woman can travel. You need no special education, no training, no experience—and age is no factor. If you have a steady job, some spare time and spare cash, you can build a sizable fortune and live an exciting new life. Read on and find out how.

by William Nickerson

WHEN I STARTED on my personal road to riches, I was 25 years old and working at a small salary for the telephone company.

I had saved a total of $1,000 in cash to invest . . . and had just a little spare time after work to devote to investing it.

By the time I was 42, I had pyramided that $1,000 into a net estate worth $500,000—all in my spare time. I quit my job to manage my investments—and did a lot of hunting, fishing, swimming, traveling and loafing, too.

Two years later, I had doubled my net worth to over $1,000,000!

Today, things cost more. If you have $2,500 in cash to invest...or if you can put aside $50 a month for 4 years with interest...you can build your nest egg into an estate worth $219,972 in 14 years...$1,187,195 in 20 years.

What's more, your chances for success in this field are better than 400 to 1—in fact, 1600 times better than if you went into business, according to actual U.S. government statistics.

And most, if not all, of your new wealth will be yours to keep tax-free—not even subject to capital gains tax.

And you can do all this even if you've never had the slightest bit of investment experience in all your life.

Why you can still make a fortune in the world's safest investment

I don't exactly blame you if you're raising your eyebrows as you're reading this.

I know it all sounds a little too good to be true.

But I made a fortune because I instinctively recognized two facts about America which are even more true today:

1. The population of the United States is increasing every year.

2. But the supply of good usable land is strictly limited.

This means that when you invest in land and apartment dwellings, you are investing in one of the most basic needs people have. The market for your investment is always growing, and the limited supply constantly tends to drive prices up. You don't have to worry about your "product" becoming obsolete or going out of style. You have as secure an investment as it's possible to have in an uncertain world.

If you can acquire ownership of good, well-located land, your chances of becoming rich are excellent. If you can take sub-standard housing and improve it—your chances of selling at a profit are tremendous. And—most important of all—if you can get other people's money to work for you, it's almost impossible NOT to make a fortune for yourself in real estate.

My basic investment principle. It works even better today.

Ten years ago, I revealed my investment secrets in a book called "How I Turned $1,000 into $1 Million in My Spare Time." Since then, the book has gone into 18 printings. It documents the four basic principles of attaining great fortunes that are still open to the average person. Many of the people who became wealthy with the help of my book are included in last year's list of 8,000 new millionaires.

If you think things have changed in the intervening years ...if you suspect it may be tougher now to earn great wealth in real estate...let me tell you that I have since tripled my $1 million to $3 million—using the very same techniques I always used.

Over the years, I have never changed my investment principle—and I probably never will. But, in view of recent developments, I decided that a new edition of my book would be helpful. One reason is that financing, for example, has become very tight—and I'd like to show you how to invest when this situation prevails. The "land contract loan" I discuss is a good example. Also, there have been changes in the income tax laws, and I want to pass on to you some valuable new tax pointers I've learned from my own experience and those of other successful investors.

My new edition is entitled "How I Turned $1,000 Into Three Million in Real Estate—in My Spare Time"—and it is literally the product of a lifetime. Into its 544 pages I have poured every ounce of practical knowledge I've gained along the road to fortune. It answers all the questions on real estate operations that my friends have asked me. I believe it can answer dozens upon dozens of questions you may have yourself. And I believe it can open a door for you to undreamed-of wealth.

My Four-Point Money-Making Formula

In my book I reveal—and tell you how to use—the 4 basic principles of traveling the last remaining road to great fortune still open to the average person:

1. How to use other people's money to get rich. This may sound illegal, but it's not. It's the sure-fire money-making technique used by large investors, including banks. Yes, I know money is tight today. But I will show you how you can get lenders to put up gladly at least three dollars for every one of yours, thereby quadrupling the earning power of your capital.

2. How to choose income-producing multiple dwellings in which to invest your own (and borrowed) capital. If all you want is income-producing property, you can probably get along without my suggestions. But if you want to pyramid your capital, there is a definite set of conditions to look for. My book tells you what they are.

3. How to make your equity grow. The fair market value of an income-producing property is in ratio to its income. Therefore, if you increase the annual net by means of the steps I outline, you increase the market value of your property—thereby increasing your equity four times or more.

4. How to virtually eliminate the "tax bite" on your capital growth. I will show you how you can increase your net worth steadily without its being subject to income taxes—not even capital gains tax! J. K. Lasser's famous guide "Your Income Tax" says of this method that "the mathematics have almost unparalleled attraction."

If you have about $2,500 right now—or if you can save only $50 a month for the next four years—you can start out soundly along the road to a million dollars. To enhance your progress, you should continue saving $50 a month or $600 a year. In two more years, the total investment from your personal savings would be $3,600. But then you will start receiving income from your investment. Follow my instructions carefully; your capital can grow at the following startling rate:

In 2 years, your $3,600 grows to $5,800.
In 4 years, you have $11,575.
In 6 years, $21,681.
In 8 years, $39,363.
In 10 years, $70,548.
In 12 years, $124,884.
In 14 years, $219,972.
In 16 years, $386,376.
In 18 years, $677,583.
In 20 years, you top a million with $1,187,195.

How far you want to go up the ladder depends on how much retirement income you would like. I believe you can conservatively earn an average net return of 6% on your personal equity. So if you should be satisfied with at least $12,000 a year, you might decide to stop when your equity reaches $200,000.

This method of making money is not dependent on continued economic boom. It is benefited and underwritten by America's continuing population boom. It is comparatively recession-proof. And you are safe from the effects of inflation, because the value of your property will rise along with the general price level.

"There Must Be A Catch to It!"

Right now, it would be understandable if you were sputtering, "But—but—it's not that simple. There must be a catch to it!"

Of course, there's a catch to it. There are hundreds of pitfalls and traps for the unwary who have never traveled what I call the "realty road to riches." But I made it by learning as I went along. And you have a priceless advantage which I never had—the advantage of being able to know beforehand everything I had to learn by trial and error.

"But Isn't Money Tight?"

Yes, money is scarce today. And interest rates are high. But there are still many ways to borrow...and many places to borrow from. In Chapter 22, I give you the five guideposts for borrowing money...what to do if your own bank won't offer you a suitable loan...four sources of funds you may not have thought about before...how to end up with more cash than you need when you borrow...why it's wisest to borrow up to the very maximum you can...and much much more.

"But Can I Borrow Money When I'm Just Starting Out?"

Big investors can borrow all the money they want. The beginning investor usually considers himself lucky if he can even borrow against his savings. Does that mean the road is blocked before you begin? Not at all. There are five important things for you to know if you want to borrow heavily to finance pyramiding ownerships. You'll find them all explained in Part 8.

Joe Weider, fitness expert and trainer of champions since 1936 says:

"Give me 5 minutes twice daily for only 7 days and you'll lose up to 3 inches from your waistline, up to 6 pounds of unwanted weight, and 'shape up' — or I will return every penny."

LET'S FACE THE FACTS WHY YOU'RE OUT OF SHAPE

You eat the wrong combination of foods, you do not get enough exercise to thoroughly work your muscular, metabolic and respiratory systems daily. Because of this, fat accumulates around your waistline, heart and other body organs, slowing you down, aging your body and destroying your vitality, virility and youth. There is only one way to firm up and shape up: that is through proper exercise and proper nutrition. Effortless exercisers, reducing pills, sauna shorts, weighted belts, dangerous and painful diets and other gimmicks designed to appeal to your laziness will not work and have been exposed by the medical profession as frauds, ineffective and in some cases dangerous. They can only reduce your pocketbook.

Face up to it...If you want to slim down, firm and shape up, you must work off the inches, and there is no safer, faster and more enjoyable way to do it than with our patented, truly miraculous "5" Minute Body Shaper Plan.

HOW DOES THIS INGENIOUS "5" MINUTE PLAN SLIM, FIRM AND SHAPE YOU UP?

Its miraculous slimming action is based on doing one simple "5" Minute Continuous Rhythm coordinated exercise, lying on your back! That's all you do! That's all your body needs to help make up for the lack of activity it doesn't get most of the day. The action is designed to supply your waistline and hipline (where fat accumulates quickest, giving your body a flabby, weak and distorted look) with the activity it needs to slim you and keep you slim. It also burns off excess fat FAST by speeding up your metabolism and respiratory system, using up stored calories, carbohydrates and fats and releasing excess water, thereby shaping and firming up your total body!

It's safer than strenuous gym workouts, beats the time consumption and dangers of gym workouts...or any other vigorous sport.

The unit weighs about 16 ounces and fits any wallet-size case. You can carry it with you and use it — anytime — wherever there's floor space for your body. Even while watching television.

WHAT THE EXPERTS SAY:

Medical Doctors, Chiropractors, Osteopaths, Athletic Coaches...agree its the most successful Waistline-Weight Reducer and Shaping Up Plan ever invented!

"Based on sound physiological and medical knowledge, it burns fat and shapes the body without strain to the heart or other organs. I lost 12 lbs. of excess weight using it." DR. ANITA D. SANTANGELO, Chiropractic Orthopedics

WHAT COMES OFF IN 14 DAYS?

Individual results vary, but during an average 14-day period you can expect to lose up to 4 inches from your waistline and up to 10 pounds from your present weight. It strengthens your heart and lungs, increases stamina and endurance, improves your digestive function and general health. It also shapes you up — from head to toes. For a "5" Minute Exerciser — it sure does a lot.

Is Summer Relaxation Making You Look Older?

For months you looked forward to the relaxation of summer. Swimming and picnicking with the children. Weekend trips with your husband. Lying in the sun to unwind totally, body and soul. The kind of peace and relative quiet that would help you slow down a little from life's hectic pace and enjoy yourself with your family. And of course, you hoped that summer relaxation would show itself in your appearance, making you look less harried and thus a little younger.

Instead, you find that summer is taking its toll. The sun, the wind-blown sand, the sudden changes of temperature as you go from searing sun to air-conditioned restaurants and stores, all are causing complexion dryness. The dryness, which accents lines and wrinkles, can make you look decidedly older. Just exactly the opposite result of what you hoped from summer's relaxation.

Many young-looking women in countries around the world have discovered that they cannot get through the summer beautifully without their beauty secret. This summer, share their secret, a unique beauty blend containing tropical moisturizing oils and natural moisture. This world-famous fluid is known in the United States as Oil of Olay moisturizing lotion. The remarkable blend penetrates the surface layer of the skin quickly. There it works with nature to ease away the dryness that can make you look older, and helps maintain the vital oil-moisture balance, an essential element needed for skin to look as young as possible. Oil of Olay softens and smooths summer-ravaged skin, helping to replace the natural moistness robbed by summer weather. The remarkable beauty blend sets up a protective barrier to keep nature's own moisture from being stolen by harsh summer weather.

During most of the year, a morning and night application of Oil of Olay is enough to keep your skin younger-looking. But during the summer months, you may find your skin needs more frequent pampering. Whenever your complexion feels dry or taut or slightly rough to the touch, lavish on extra Oil of Olay, no matter what the time of day or night.

Never forget to apply the unique beauty blend before you go to bed each night, to do its lovely work quietly for hours while you sleep. And again in the morning, whether or not you wear makeup. As a makeup base, Oil of Olay leaves no sticky after-feel, so your cosmetics go on smoothly, without streaking or discoloring. And even if you prefer to go barefaced in the summer, skin-loving Oil of Olay leaves your skin with a moist glow as it pampers your complexion for hours. You will find this world-renowned beauty blend at your drugstore.

Summer Beauty Hints

After sun-bathing, take a tepid tub to remove your sun-protective lotion. Then generously smooth on Oil of Olay, paying particular attention to those areas most easily dried out by the sun—the skin around your eyes and mouth.

* * *

Even if you have been an Oil of Olay® user throughout the year, remember that more of your skin is exposed to the weather during these summer months. Soothe on the beauty blend wherever low-cut dresses, shorter sleeves and sports clothes have left your delicate skin naked to the ravages of summer dryness.

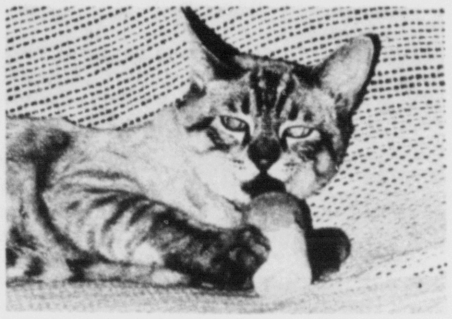
UNFINISHED MASTERPIECE
Who did it, and with what?

Is this a picture from a museum? An early sketch, perhaps, by da Vinci or Michelangelo? No, this picture was drawn on a wall of Cell 8 of the St. Louis Central District Police Station. It was done over 40 years ago by an unknown prisoner, and the police have grown so fond of it that they have had the wall removed and placed under glass at the Police Academy. Many experts have analyzed it, but so far no one has been able to determine what was used to make the almost-life-size masterpiece. Another riddle: Why was the right hand never completed? Perhaps it has a symbolic meaning. More probably, the prisoner's term was up.

ANN MILLER
What a way to meet the Queen!

Ann Miller tells of wearing diamonds, emeralds and rubies said to be from the Farouk collection, to a party in Hollywood. "I met the exiled Egyptian Queen Mother Nazerlie, who had been thrown out of Egypt by her own son, King Farouk. When we were introduced I started telling her that I had been in her country and how wonderful it was. But then I noticed she wasn't listening. She was standing there staring at my Egyptian bracelet and clips. She finally asked me where I got them, and I told her. Then she said, very softly, 'Those are mine. They once belonged to me.' . . . If I'd been a terribly wealthy woman I would have taken them off right there and given them back to her. Instead, I told her I'd treasure them forever, and I have." From "Miller's High Life," by Ann Miller with Norma Lee Browning (Doubleday, $7.95).



VIRGIL AND HIS BOTTLE
"Too much fun being people?"

Virgil, part Siamese and part tabby, was abandoned by his mother when not quite two weeks old. He was hardly more than a handful, half-dead, eyes not yet fully open. Not much hope remained, but Virgil was kept alive by the Paul A. Jerrain family in Simi Valley, Calif. They hand-fed him every two hours: first with an eyedropper, then a spoon. After three days he graduated to a two-ounce animal baby bottle. Now, at the age of nine months, Virgil still remains very much a baby. At the sight of his bottle, he will jump on the living room couch to be cuddled and fed. According to his veterinarian, "Virgil will never become a cat; he's having too much fun being a people!"

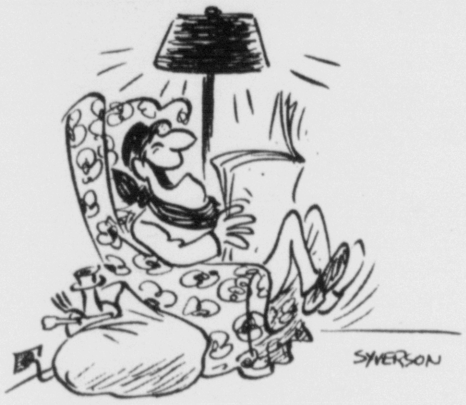
ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour



When we depart for, say, two days,
We risk a parting of the ways.
I say we ought to leave a light on;
My wife says no, and there's a fight on.

I say the burglars this will scare;
They'll think there's surely someone
there.
My wife insists a light's a beacon
And burglars simply see to peek in.

Besides the glare and the publicity,
She notes the cost of electricity.
I say it doesn't cost a lot
To leave on just a 40-watt.

And so it goes, pro light and con,
To leave it off or leave it on.
Who wins, however, you must miss....
A burglar may be reading this.

My mother is the sweetest person in the world, but her driving abilities leave something to be desired. Our two daughters had just spent a week visiting her. We were driving home one evening and our youngest daughter Lina, who's five, said to her father in a disgusted tone, "It's no fun riding with you—you only stay on one side of the road."

The phone company is so obliging. I made a long-distance call and when I was through, the operator said, "That'll be $14.55." I said, "$14.55!! I told you to reverse the charges!" She said, "All right. That'll be $55.41!"
